MONTREAL — Pressure built on the federal government today to end a crippling national rail strike by legislation, following collapse of the mediation efforts of Judge Alan Gold of Quebec provincial court.

Unions, management and Judge Gold, who tried since Aug. 8 to bring the two parties to an agreement on a new contract, told reporters after a 75-minute meeting Friday night that further mediation would be useless.

Across the country, there was a growing clamor from governments, business and industry leaders for settlement of the dispute which has produced escalating layoffs, industrial shutdowns and disruption of resident and tourist passenger transportation.

Prime Minister Trudeau meanwhile was reported "treating the strike very seriously" but has not cancelled plans for a private holiday next week in the eastern Arctic.

Within 24 hours of the general strike call, industrial curtailments and closings were reported.

In the East Kootenay, the huge Kaiser Resources Ltd. coal operation was "almost completely shut down," a spokesman said Friday.

Two service stations in Kelowna have been advised that they will receive no more gasoline until the national rail strike ends.

Most gas for the Okanagan valley is shipped via rail to Kamloops from Alberta and then distributed by tanker truck.

A spokesman for Bridge Service Station in Kelowna, a Standard outlet, said his distributor had advised him he would receive no more gas until the strike ends.

The spokesman said the station would cut its operation to 18 hours from 24, and said he expected the tanks would be dry by Monday.

A spokesman for Stanburn Texaco said he had received the same notice, but said his supplies would last for about two weeks.

In Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., 600 employees of Abitibi Paper will be laid off Sunday when the plant there shuts down. Abitibi announced other plants would close.

General Motors in Oshawa announced a shutdown Monday "until further notice" at Oshawa and Ste. Therese, Que., involving layoffs of 8,000 and 1,500 men and Chrysler, American Motors and Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. all predicted their operations will halt by the end of next week.

With CP Air operations reduced to 45-per-cent capacity by a machinists strike, Air Canada has been left to meet most of the demands of long-distance travellers.

An Air Canada spokesman said "We've added 30 to 40 flights across the system and we're handling 40,000 to 42,000

CIGARETTES HIJACKED

MONTREAL (CP) — Three trailer trucks loaded with $500,000 worth of cigarettes were stolen from a suburban St. Leonard transport company yard Friday night, police said.

The trucks, 1973 Mack models colored blue and white with Rothman's painted on the side, were hijacked from the Imperial Roadways Ltd. lot by at least three armed men.

Police said the incident occurred about 11:25 p.m. but was only discovered an hour later when a company employee arriving on the premises found several workers handcuffed and gagged.

Some of the workers told police they had heard shots fired outside the building.

Times News Service

LONDON — Three people were injured today, one seriously, when a bomb exploded at the Bank of England and 30,000 fans evacuated from a test cricket match after a bomb threat was reported at the grounds.

Police and customs officials, meanwhile doubled their guard at British airports and docks to seal the country from bomb shipments.

The 30,000 cricket fans were asked to leave following a warning that a bomb had been planted in the North London grounds.

An announcer asked everyone to "move quietly and slowly out of the ground by the main exits."

The announcer said: "No one — repeat no one — must attempt to take a car out of the ground."

Today's explosion at the Bank of England was the latest in a series of bomb attacks that have swept London during the last week. Police have linked the attacks to splinter groups of the Irish Republican Army.

Friday, a letter bomb injured two people at London's stock exchange, the first injuries in the wave of fire bombs, letter bombs and other explosive devices across this city.

The police spokesman said the incident "occurred simultaneously to other suspicious objects being found all over London."

Today's bomb exploded in the bank's post room as three men were trying to surround it with sand-bags.

The Belfast explosion demolished a garage behind a vacant house in he Cliftonville area, police said. A fierce fire followed.

Police said they found parts of three bodies. They said they suspected the garage had been used as a bomb factory for the making of guerrilla explosive devices.

A detective said police also were convinced the explosives used in the letter bombs were stolen from a government-licensed Northern Ireland factory supposedly run under strict supervision.

Swedes Crack Vault

Times News Services

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Fifty armed police in bullet-proof vests cut through a vault with acetylene torches today and seized a gunman and a convict who had held four persons hostage in a bank in the Swedish capital since Thursday.

Police inched their way into the bank while the two and their hostages, three women and a man, were asleep in the vault.

When he took over the bank Thursday the gunman demanded $650,000 ransom and the release of convicted Swedish criminal Clark Olofsson. Swedish officials complied.

Police first believed the gunman was a confused 21-year-old bank robber, but later speculated he was an escaped convict acting in collusion with Olofsson.

Police had identified the gunman as Kaj Hansson, 21, a Swedish citizen who is married to an American. But Insp. Kark Gunnar Bjoerklund said today that the gunman may not be Hansson but a 32-year-old safecracker who recently escaped from a prison in Kalmar in southeast Sweden.

Both Hansson and the safecracker know Olofsson, police said.

Earlier in the day, a shot was fired into the bank in an effort to keep the gunman awake for negotiations on the fate of the hostages. The gunman, the convict and the hostages went into the vault Friday night.

Police tactics have been to try to wear down the gunman by forcing him to stay awake.

Police stuck to their refusal to let the gunman escape by car with some of the hostages. And Prime Minister Olof Palme went on television Friday night to say the police should not give in.

The authorities had acceded to all the gunman's other requests.

Now Canada Mail Strike Looming

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An official of the Canadian Postmasters' Association said Friday there is a possibility of a national postal strike within a few weeks.

Squire Wallace, president of the association's Ontario council and postmaster at nearby Dorchester, said in an interview that a year of negotiations with the federal treasury board has been frustrating.

Mr. Wallace, a member of a four-man bargaining committee, said the committee rejected a report by conciliation board chairman J. S. Gunn of Winnipeg because wages offered were too low.

The postmasters' bargaining team then drew up its own minority report, rejecting the treasury board offer, and this report is being distributed for approval by 8,000 postmasters across Canada.

The association has been in a legal position to strike since Thursday, Mr. Wallace said.

He added that he expects overwhelming support from members for the minority report rejecting the post office's offer.

If postmasters walk out, the Canadian Union of Postal Employees has agreed to honor picket lines and mail service would be effectively tied up across the country, he said.

William Walsh, another member of the bargaining committee, said in a minority report being mailed to members that the post office is not complying with the federal minimum wage law in its offer.

In the last postmasters' contract which expired in September, 1972, maximum earnings were $9,093, but some postmasters who worked shorter hours in small communities received only $1,000, he said.

HIJACKER LANDS, SURRENDERS

Times News Services

KUWAIT — A North Yemeni wielding a pistol and hand grenades surrendered to Kuwait authorities tonight after hijacking a Yemen Airways DC6 on a flight from Taiz, North Yemen, to Asmara, Ethiopia.

Kuwaiti authorities accepted five demands from the man including guaranteeing his safety in Kuwait before he agreed to turn over his arms and leave the plane which carried 17 persons. Officials had earlier refused him permission to land.

Kuwait authorities permitted the plane to land after Abu Bakr threatened to crash-land it into the desert if refused permission.

Only Week of Feed Left For Island Livestock

There is less than seven days feed left for chickens and cattle on Vancouver Island and the situation is becoming critical as a result of the national rail strike, the president of the Vancouver Island Farmers' Institute said today.

Brian Hoole, an Elk Lake farmer, said the feed supply might last for a week and after that farmers will have to scrounge feed from wherever they can.

"The situation couldn't possibly be worse," Hoole said.

"When our supplies run out, we'll try to get feed from Vancouver by going over there and hauling it back ourselves, but the supplies in Vancouver are slim too."

A farmers' meeting was held in Duncan Friday with provincial agriculture minister Dave Stupich. The more than 35 farmers at the meeting voted to send a telegram to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau demanding something be done to stop the rail strike.

The telegram was sent with Stupich's blessing, who "supports our moves and is on our side all the way," Hoole said.

The situation affects all chicken and cattle farmers on Vancouver Island, Hoole said, and all those who attended Friday's emergency meeting voiced their support for an injunction to stop the strike which is now entering the second day of a 24-hour national walkout.

"So few people realize just what a state the farmers are in," Hoole said.

"We don't really expect to get anything out of the telegram we sent, but we have to do somethingabout it."

At Friday's meeting, representatives of two Vancouver Island feed suppliers, Nanaimo Co-operative and Buckerfield's, told the farmers their supplies were quickly running out.

"They told us exactly what they have in stock and just how long it will last and it's not long," Hoole said.

Phil Moody of Buckerfield's feed manufacturers in Duncan said his company will have to shut down feed pro-

HIGHWAY TOLL usually has little impact as deaths come in ones and twos. But this year, in the Hamilton Spectator's circulation area, 146 men, women and children have died on the roads. To show what this figure really looks like, the paper arranged with police, firemen and the city recreation department to show in one picture what the highway's death toll really looks like.

Bread Probe

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said Friday the Manitoba government will launch a formal investigation of proposed increases in the price of bread if the federal government doesn't undertake a similar study.

Referring to suggestions by industry spokesmen that the loaf price may rise by as much as six cents, Schreyer said "there is no evidence that an increase of that magnitude is warranted."

He told a news conference he believes the provinces have the constitutional authority to regulate the price of foodstuffs, but it likely would require legislative authority before the government could take action.

Navigator Describes Clubbing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nigel Ingram, navigator of the nuclear protest vessel Greenpeace III, said Friday night he was clubbed unconscious last week by armed French sailors who boarded the Greenpeace in international waters.

Ingram, who arrived in Vancouver from Hao Island, about 500 miles southeast of Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific, where France has been conducting atmospheric nuclear tests, said he was below deck when he heard the Greenpeace engine accelerate suddenly.

"I heard a series of thumps on deck, then I heard one of the girls screaming," he said at a news conference.

Aboard the Greenpeace were Ingram, a 26-year-old Briton, New Zealand women Ann-Marie Horn and Mary Lornie and skipper Dave McTaggart of Vancouver.

Skipper McTaggart is in hospital in Papeete, Tahiti, suffering from an eye injury he says was inflicted by French sailors with truncheons who boarded the Greenpeace from a rubber dinghy.

Ingram said he rushed above deck and "as I emerged on deck my hands were held from behind and my head and neck were pushed forward.

"As my head was pushed forward I saw two men who were armed with clubs in their hands and knives which were strapped to their waist or thighs.

"... I saw the rubber dinghy on which was sitting, between two Frenchmen, Dave McTaggart with a rope around his middle.

"He was obviously unconscious and had been thumped but was being held up.

"The righthand side of his face and shirt were obscured by blood.

"Then I felt two sharp blows on the back of my head and I lost consciousness."

He said when he woke up on the deck of the vessel, men were kicking him about the neck, chest and groin. He then lost consciousness again.

"I can identify by description four men who were carrying clubs," Ingram said. "I can identify by description seven men who took part in the raid and I can identify by description one man with a gun."

Ingram filed a disposition with a Vancouver lawyer about his experience, which is to be forwarded to the external affairs department in Ottawa and to the British Government.

The French have denied that the sailors boarding the vessel were armed, and say the Greenpeace crew resisted the seizure of the vessel.

Allende Government in Ruins

Santiago Violence Continues

Times News Services

SANTIAGO — President Salvador Allende's alliance with the military was almost in ruins today with a third military member of his cabinet apparently preparing to leave the government.

Informed sources said Allende was organizing a major cabinet reshuffle to replace the crumbling "national security cabinet," formed only 17 days ago to include the four commanders of the armed services and the paramilitary police.

Allende angrily attacked his political opponents Friday night soon after still one more group of protesters staged violent demonstrations against his government.

The president issued a tough statement accusing the congressional opposition of virtually fomenting "civil war" and told critical legislators there was only one legal way to get rid of him — impeachment.

Officials reported 12 persons injured — one seriously — during the afternoon and evening clashes between helmeted police and window-smashing students in downtown Santiago.

The students, who got to within two blocks of the presidential palace were where Allende was at his desk, were protesting a government plan to extend Chile's current southern hemisphere winter school vacations.

The military were brought in to end a crippling anti-government road transport strike, now in its 31st day, and crush an accompanying wave of terrorist violence.

But the strike, by the owners of Chile's 45,000 privately-owned trucks, was still on today.

Violence has continued with an official total of 527 acts of sabotage and terrorism and anti-government riots in Santiago.

The failure of the military ministers to end the troubles has brought them under growing pressure, from the opposition and from within their forces, to quit the government.

Only Gen. Jose Maria Sepulveda, commander of the police, appears still firmly settled in his post as minister for lands and settlements.

The national-security experiment began collapsing Monday when Gen. Cesar Ruiz resigned as transport minister and air force commander when tough measures failed to force a settlement with the truck owners.

And Friday night Adm. Raul Montero, the finance minister, was officially reported to have resumed command of the navy.

He had left the post temporarily to take up his portfolio.

Tourist Men to Sue Ferry Union

A group of Vancouver Island businessmen is going to sue the union representing 2,000 B.C. Ferries workers for damages caused by the five-day ferry strike.

"Our lawyers have said to us, 'Yes, we think you've got a good case'," said Bob Wright of Sealand of the Pacific, one of those in the suit.

The businessmen say they suffered heavy losses during the strike because the tourist traffic was cut off.

Involved in the suit are restaurant owners, motel owners, and many other tourist operators, said Wright. The number will probably be more than 20 businesses, and possibly as many as 40, he said.

Lawyer Louis Lindholm has been instructed to proceed with the suit against the B.C. Government Employees Union, marine branch (unlicenced), he said.

The suit will be filed in B.C. Supreme Court probably next week, said Wright.

The walkout of B.C. Ferries workers began Aug. 17 and ended five days later when a new contract with the provincial government was ratified.

Wright admitted the suit may be difficult to win, but added that it involved a new area of law so he and his partners had a chance of winning. After losing so much on the strike, it was worth it to gamble a few thousand more on the court action, he said.

Also, the fact that the strike was illegal will strengthen the case, said Wright.

Sealand lost about $20,000 during the strike, said Wright, and even now attendance is way down.

"We just won't recover. The season is wiped out," he said. Small tourist operations in particular have been hit hard by the strike and its aftermath, he added.

Wright said he and some others were considering moving to get an injunction if the strike hadn't ended when it did.

Canadians Leave Jobs to Others

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Canadian Pacific Hotels may import at least 75 foreign workers this fall to fill hotel jobs Canadians apparently don't want, Ivor Petrak, CP Hotels vice-president, said Friday.

The company is considering bringing Mexican and perhaps Japanese hotel staff to fill vacancies at the Banff Springs Hotel over the winter, he said in an interview.

"The situation with staff is so critical now the only solution is to go outside the country.

"We will need 350-to-400 new staff when the students (who make up the bulk of summer employees) go back to school at the end of August. But we have found only 44 Canadians from Halifax to Vancouver who have replied to our cross-country advertising over the last couple of weeks."

In addition, as many as 50 students of a Japanese hotel school may be hired, he said.

But the manager of the Calgary Manpower office has advised CP the department will not approve the importation of foreign labor until it is satisfied over the next few weeks there are too few Canadians willing to take the jobs.

WATER LOW, FIREMEN FAIL

RICHMOND (CP) — Fire destroyed the 129-room Skyline Hotel near the Vancouver International Airport Friday night after firemen were unable to get at the blaze due to insufficient water pressure from three pumpers.

None of the hotel's guests was injured.

The fire broke out in a third-floor banquet room and it took firemen four hours to bring the flames under control. Firemen were hampered by lack of equipment as well as low water pressure.

'Court' Label Upsetting

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fear of the family court system in Vancouver often prevents people from going there for assistance, two social workers claim.

Katherine Rider and Susan Poulos told the joint city-province committee studying integration of children and family services in Vancouver many people are reluctant "to approach a setting which is associated largely with criminal proceedings."

". . . Parents of delinquents or pre-delinquent youngsters are afraid of divulging information which may be used subsequently should their son or daughter appear before the court."

One means of rectifying this situation, they said, is to separate, either physically or through established and clear procedures, aid and justice departments.

duction Wednesday if something isn't done.

"If the railroads don't start moving and if the government doesn't release the grain in the elevator, we have no other place to go," said Moody.

Egg producers, chicken and turkey producers and dairymen are all affected by the feed shortage, he said.

Claremont Poultry Ltd., local egg producers, use 30 tons of feed a week, and they don't have storage space to keep a large supply so they rely on delivery two or three times a week.

"We are kind of concerned," said Peter Goddart of Claremont. He was expecting a delivery Friday but the feed company didn't have it, so he may have to wait till Monday.

Another local egg producer said his production has been off five to eight per cent for the past few weeks, because the chicken's regular feedings have been disrupted.

Moody said that in a way he's glad the railroads have finally shut down completely, after weeks of rotating strikes.

"We've been crying in the wilderness because of this emergency," he said. But now the shutdown is total, politicians and the public are beginning to heed their plight.

Rockets Fly

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Guerrilla forces besieging Kompong Cham rocketed the provincial capital Friday and launched heavy rocket and artillery attacks against government defence lines only three miles from the city.

passengers a day. Our usual average is 30,000 a day."

Air Canada also announced a total embargo Friday on air express services in an effort to cope with the demand for cargo service caused by the rail shutdown.

An air freight embargo has been placed on livestock, with the exception of chicks, turkey poults, ducklings and goslings, which require advance clearance with a local Air Canada freight office.

Perishable shipments in excess of 200 pounds must also be cleared in advance.

Truck companies, normally handling less than 10 per cent of freight tonnage in Canada were calling the rail strike a "national emergency."

Trucks cannot fill the gap, particularly in moving bulk commodities like coal, steel, grain, newsprint and lumber.

The shortage of newsprint for export already was acute because of strikes in the paper industry.

None of the three million tons of newsprint CN carries every year — two million tons of it destined for the U.S. — has moved since the national rail strike was launched.

The strikes is beginning to affect food supplies in Manitoba and northwestern Ontario, with remote communities being hardest-hit.

The northern Manitoba communities of Lynn Lake and Leaf Rapids have less than five days of food on hand, Peter Cain, vice-president of Sherritt-Gordon Mines, said Friday.

An emergency airlift of meat that started during the rotating strikes can handle the needs of the two towns for only a short period, he said.

Deliveries by chartered aircraft only supplemented existing supplies because an air supply of northern needs is beyond the capacity of available equipment, he said.

In the northwestern Ontario community of Allanwater Bridge, about 220 miles northwest of Thunder Bay, the 150 residents have been out of meat for about three weeks, a local resort owner says.

All provisions are low now, including bread and vegetables, in the community, which is completely dependent on rail and air for its supplies, he added.

A food fly-in has been arranged from Armstrong Monday.

In Winnipeg, a spokesman for Dominion Stores said the flow of products to the stores has slowed because there aren't enough trucks to meet demands.

Temperatures will begin to ease upwards slowly today and Sunday. The next Pacific disturbance now nearing the Queen Charlottes and Alaska panhandle is expected to give its main impact to the north coast, the Yukon and northern B.C. The southern portion of this system will break off moving down the coast but will weaken in the process with only bands of cloud affecting the southwest corner of the province.

NIXON TOLD DAMN LIES —MARTHA

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Martha Mitchell says she read a "campaign strategy book" written by President Nixon and H. R. Haldeman that she hinted included plans for Watergate-style operations. She said the Senate Watergate Committee should call her to testify.

She said Nixon's news conference denial that her husband, former attorney-general John Mitchell, had told him the details of Watergate, was "a damned lie."

Her husband shielded Nixon in his testimony to the Ervin committee because he hopes Nixon will pay him back with executive clemency if Mitchell is convicted of crimes, Mrs. Mitchell said in a telephone interview with UPI reporter Helen Thomas.

She said she thinks her husband is "a goddamned fool" to protect Nixon.

"I saw the leather bound campaign strategy book for 1972 that was written by Nixon and Haldeman," she said. "It included the whole procedures of everything that has happened. I saw it with my own two eyes, when I was trying to press John not to go into the campaign.

"It was at least two inches thick," she added. "Everything was there from A to Zeta. That's why the (Ervin) committee should call me." She added it included the 1968 campaign plans and strategy for Nixon's re-election.

"This is the reason I think the committee should hear me out," she said. She said she read part of the book.

She angrily disputed Nixon's statement that Mitchell had never told him about the Watergate break-in, and that he hd not asked Mitchell about it.

"For God's sake he used to call John at two o'clock in the morning, and he said he didn't call his attorney-general? He called him every night. I've got proof from Julia (her housekeeper).

Regarding her husband's testimony, she said: "I thought he was a Goddamned fool . . . like he has always been in trying to protect the president."

"My husband is the only one who can control the president because the president goes out and does what he shouldn't do," she said.

"I did not want my husband to be his campaign manager," she said. "I told him not to take it."

She also described Nixon as the "most egotistic person I have ver met in my life."

"He has a temper like I do, if I get mad at something.

"The president has assaulted both John and me in taking everything we had or wanted," she said.

STRAY FEATHERS

Some notes from my telephone pad wherein a birth is announced, a death recorded, and a minor mystery explored.

First to the birth; twins, to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Morris of Hollywood Place; sometime in July; on the roof of their Ross Bay home.

Now that the initial shock of that last line has begun to wear off — for both you and the Morrises — let me put all your minds further at ease by explaining that the twins, in this case, were glaucous-winged gulls and that while the site for their entry into this world might be a little unusual even for gulls, it was not nearly so startling as your overactive imaginations — and my choice of words — had been leading you to believe.

The unusual aspect of this story is, of course, that gulls just do not normally set-up cohabitation with human beings.

Yes, the species does have a modest colony going on some old sheds at the foot of Huron Street but I see a slight difference in the Morris case.

The Huron Street nests are located on little-used, high, apparently secure, warehouse roofs. The Morris home, on the other hand, is part of a bustling urban area where homo sapiens carry on an active daily routine not thought to be conducive to good gull nursery establishments.

Anyway, at last report, the twins are healthy, airborne and soon to achieve independence. The morrises? They're still recovering.

Meanwhile, several blocks to the east, death laid its cold hand on the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Simpson of King George Terrace early in August.

While it was just a tiny bird that was "called" the event brought sadness to the Simpsons.

A western sandpiper, one of those little fellows that skitter back and forth along the beach, was the victim. It was apparently crossing overland between Shoal Bay and Foul Bay when it collided with overhead wires and was killed.

The Simpsons, like so many Victorians, have their bird feeder and get hours of pleasure from the antics of its clientele, but they seldom get a chance to examine, close up, such birds as a western sandpiper.

While the arrival of this tiny traveller was a minor tragedy it gave the Simpsons a chance to discover that, in August, these birds are already on their way south from nesting grounds in northern Alaska, heading for winter homes in the southern United states and Central America.

Back in the last week of July, while on my way downtown for an hour or two with the Victoria Symphony at Heritage Court, I ran into a large flock of Nighthawks moving east over Parson's Bridge. It was the kind of event a naturalist enters in his notebook because Nighthawks in migration in July seemed a bit early.

At any rate, after noting the event and briefly musing on where the birds might have originated, I abandoned myself to a trip with Beethoven and Dvorak.

Two weeks later the incident was brought back to mind during a talk with Martin McNicholl. Martin is a young Zoologist working on Nighthawks up near the Forbidden Plateau country. We both hail from Winnipeg; thus the reason for his visit.

It came out during our talk that some of Martin's nighthawk subjects had only just hatched in the second week of August. So, are you ready for the question?

If Nighthawks on the Forbidden Plateau were still up to their ears in family responsibilities in mid-August; what were those Nighthawks doing migrating over Victoria at the end of July? Where did they come from? Did local inclement weather on their nesting grounds force them to abandon nests?

Reid Centre:

Now City Wants Backing of Supreme Court

By PAUL MOSS
City Hall Reporter

To understand what's going on at City Hall these days one doesn't have to be a lawyer, but in some cases legal experience and expertise would make all the difference between lucid comprehension and utter confusion.

Take, for instance, the continuing saga of the Reid Centre, that massive twin-tower development on Wharf Street which has been such a long time coming.

The edifice itself hasn't even started to materialize. But recent complications surrounding the land-use contract between the city and the developer, and especially a bewildering series of moves this week, must leave at least some people wondering whether the whole thing has already collapsed under the weight of its own legal verbosity.

Early last month it leaked out that developer J. A. Reid's contract, signed July 10, 1972, was technically invalid and had been so far several months. The reason given was that he had failed to comply with one of the contract's conditions: namely, consolidation of two Wharf Street lots under a single title within 90 days of the execution of the contract.

Null and void though the document apparently was, council showed no inclination to use the opportunity to kill Reid's highrise project, and take a fresh look at the entire matter.

Instead, council agreed July 26 to allow him a further 90 days in which to carry out the necessary lot consolidation. But the concession was tied up in a package of other demands, requiring Reid within the same 90 days to provide guarantees and reassurances that he would:

—Carry out construction of the hotel-apartment project strictly in accordance with the conditions of the land-use contract;

—Not dispose of the property without council's express consent;

—And show evidence of the firm's financial capability to complete the entire project.

During a brief in-camera appearance before council's caucus meeting last Tuesday, Reid apparently agreed to provide the performance and property-retention guarantees, but argued that it would be difficult if not impossible to come up with a satisfactory financial guarantee within 90 days.

In any case, he said, a time limitation on that aspect of his enterprise was hardly relevant. Under the terms of the contract he was obliged to start construction before July 10, 1974 (two years from the date of signing) so couldn't he provide the financial reassurances some time in the next 10 months, before starting construction?

But what actually happened Thursday was something rather different. When the motion was duly presented Ald. Sam Bawlf moved that the matter be referred back to council-in-committee, explaining only that some new aspects of the case had arisen.

Council disposed of its agenda and retreated into closed session to consider confidential business in connection with a taxi operator's licence. Spectators and unsuspecting reporters departed.

Then — surprise, surprise — some time later council reappeared in "open session," observed only by officials, Reid and his lawyer, to debate the matter afresh.

Mayor Peter Pollen said Friday the discussion was held in the light of new legal advice indicating that, because the original contract was invalidated by Reid's failure to consolidate the lots within 90 days, council itself had no power to extend that period retroactively.

Furthermore, even if council did have such authority, it could not attach any conditions to the time extension.

In view of the questionable validity of both the land-use contract itself and the extension of the time limit, council finally decided to impose two main conditions in granting Reid's request for further time.

One is that he seeks "with all dispatch" a declaratory judgment in B.C. Supreme Court as to the validity of the conract and the city's power to grant any time extension.

The other is that the developer undertakes he will not hold the city liable for any claims which may arise from the questionable extension.

The latter condition, apparently, is designed to safeguard the city in the event that an interested citizen decided to challenge council's action in the courts.

At Thursday's meeting Reid and his lawyer agreed to be bound by those conditions, and they are expected to confirm that in writing.

Skylab Team Record

HOUSTON (AP) — The Skylab 2 astronauts, humming along with a new set of gyroscopes in their orbiting laboratory, became history's longest-flying space travellers today.

At 8:01 a.m. EDT Alan Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma surpassed the single-mission endurance mark of 28 days, 50 minutes set in June by the Skylab 1 crew.

Mission Control calculated the astronauts had completed 404 orbits of earth and had travelled 11.5 million miles since their launching July 28.

And if all continues to go well and they complete their full 59-day voyage, they'll more than double the old standard. It's a record that may stand for many years.

The Skylab 3 crew is scheduled to start a 56-day flight in November. After that, the United States plans no more long-duration space trips for at least five years.

Orbiting 270 miles high, Lousma plugged in four connectors. Mission Control reported the new gyros "look beautiful" and immediately assigned them to control the vehicle.

The crew is scheduled to spend another 31 days in orbit, during which the major focus of the mission will increasily turn to how their bodies react to prolonged weightlessness.

The ability to work in extended periods of weightlessness will be necessary for travel to even the nearest planets.

The station was launched in May with nine gyroscopes, three to prevent rolling in each axis of movement: roll, pitch and yaw. But overheating problems had deteriorated the capability of at least five of them.

By installing the six gyros Friday and connecting them with one good unit from each axis in the old set, the astronauts restored three gyros in each axis.

GOVERNMENTS 'TOP PUSHERS'

CALGARY (CP) — "Governments are Canada's largest drug pushers," Donald Faris, a Saskatchewan MLA, said Friday. "They have a vested interest in keeping alcohol sales high."

"There is a close relationship between governments and the liquor industry," the NDP member for Arm River and head of Saskatchewan's committee on review of liquor regulations told a summer school on alcohol and drug abuse seminar at the University of Calgary.

"There is a government-industrial complex which benefits from the increased liberalization of liquor laws and subsequent increases in revenues."

Faris said current government programs on alcohol rehabilitiation and education are examples of tokenism.

"There is a massive, continuing backlash against prohibition. All the forces that tended to counter-act the liquor vested interests seemed to have disappeared."

He said this was included in his committee's report to the Saskatchewan government. The report, which has yet to be acted upon, was termed "somewhat of an embarrassment to the government" by Faris.

Faris said the only hope to combat the problem of alcoholism is "a national education campaign using the mass media." It is hopeless to ask governments to do it.

He also called for increased liquor prices because there is "a direct relationship between alcohol sales and the price of alcohol."

"Each year the liquor industry makes large campaign contributions. Do politicians have the courage to make these kinds of changes? The vested interests would resist any significant program.

"It is not immoral to be an alcoholic. It is immoral for politicians to be faced with undisputed alcohol problems and to do as little as they have done."

Mixed Blessings

Former Premier Bennett, who worked diligently to embellish his personal Santa Claus image through repeated increases in the home-owners' grant and similar devices, begins in retrospect to resemble Scrooge in comparison with the open-handed generosity of Premier Barrett. British Columbia is now well launched into the reality of a Socialist state— its way having been prepared by the Social Credit government's activity in industrial ownership and welfare programs.

This week's announcement of free medical prescriptions for everyone over 65, to become effective next January 1, and the preparations to lower to 60 the eligible age for larger guaranteed incomes, may be considered as no more than intermediate stages in a social welfare program destined to reach still more bountiful levels.

Few persons will deny that there are many deserving cases in the province for whom such provisions will be a lifesaver, lifting the recipients from the edge of disaster in an economy with runaway inflation. But the principle that all persons, irrespective of their wealth or income, should share in such plans as the free prescription measure, calls for a little more consideration.

The sum of $9 million a year which is mentioned as the probable cost of the project can only be viewed as the bare beginning of an escalating program. The similar sum estimated to cover the increased pension payments and the increased number of persons who will receive them can also be no more than a beginning. Such expenditures are bound to grow, even without the invitation of Mr. Norman Levi, human resources minister, to elderly persons in the rest of Canada to come to British Columbia to partake of the NDP government's goodies.

Part of the money involved, of course, is federal money merely being handed on by the NDP government. But Mr. Barrett is apparently determined to keep well out in front of federal efforts and badger Ottawa to catch up with him. The whole province has become a case for the former case worker.

In the midst of the general prosperity and self-congratulation now under way, it is a little sobering to wonder what would happen if, due to prolonged strikes in key industries, or to a marked swing in the business cycle, the annual revenues of the province were to suffer a drastic decrease. But that is perhaps an unworthy thought—even unpatriotic.

Canada has an enviable reputation on the international exposition circuit following the success of Expo 67 and Arthur Erickson's prize winning pavilion at Osaka's Expo 70. So when the federal government — like several other nations — cancelled its proposed $1.8 million exhibit at the 1974 Spokane exposition it seemed like a let-down, especially to the British Columbia government, which plans a $500,000 exhibit at the eastern Washington city.

Provincial Trade Minister Gary Lauk has urged Ottawa to reconsider, and according to a telegram Mr. Lauk received, the federal government is doing just that. While the participating provinces would naturally want to rally 'round the federal presence at the exposition, such luxury expenditures are not in keeping with the federal government's proposed economy drive. And few people would disagree that federal spending has been a factor in Canada's rampant inflation.

If $1.8 million seems to be an insignificant amount one has only to examine former Auditor General Maxwell Henderson's accounts to see how mistakes and luxuries can add up.

Perhaps the federal government will compromise, with a reduced expenditure at the exposition. If not, the participating provinces will have to carry the flag — something at which they should be adept, considering their demands at federal provincial conferences.

Large-scale government expenditure of public funds at international trade displays should show some tangible return if it is to be justified. Expenditure merely for fleeting prestige of some sort is hardly defensible these days.

ROB BULL

He Doesn't Want to Be Joey

ST. JOHN'S—Frank Moores' friends describe him as a hard-driving idea-man who is also a bit of a "rowdyman," as they say here, a swinger. Newsmen talk about his charisma.

His enemies describe a flippant extrovert who has promised more than he has put into practice.

But nobody here sees the premier of Newfoundland as one of those "white-mouse" eastern politicians Premier Dave Barrett of British Columbia is so fond of criticizing.

And if Premier Moores has his way, it will not be too long before Canada's newest and poorest province starts contributing to the rest of the country instead of relying on federal handouts.

"We have more resources per capita here than any other province in Canada," Premier Moores said in a recent interview, "actual resources like mining and forestry, not pie-in-the-sky stuff like off-shore oil although that may be there too.

"If you have the right product and the guts to identify what you want, there is no reason why you can't project it into a reasonable return. It could take very little for us to turn the corner."

He might do it. He commands a majority in the legislature, about four years before he must face an election, and what appears to be a growing feeling among Newfoundlanders that it is time they started looking after themselves.

But he is working in the shadow of the man who largely created the province within confederation and ran it almost single-handed for more than 20 years.

Teamwork Emphasized

As one local newsman said, "he is a good man but he isn't Joey Smallwood."

Premier Moores sees this as one of his greatest assets and is trying hard to build a political party and cabinet that can work as a team to make certain that the days of one-man rule are over in Newfoundland.

Joey is still remembered as one of the great old-fashioned orators, a man who could trace a vision before an audience so that people could almost touch it.

"People have great difficulty seeing the difference between Joey's vision and what he actually accomplished," Mr. Moores said. "Joey made a lot of announcements but you can't eat those."

He too is a good speaker who can hold a crowd in his grasp. But a recent speech at the opening of a province-owned linerboard mill in Stephenville showed him as more of a harsh teller of facts.

"Welcome," he told a crowd of local politicoes and distinguished businessmen, "to the opening of the biggest Meccanno set north of Disneyland."

The plant, he said earlier in an interview, is "one of the biggest single albatrosses ever to hang around a government's neck" and is "grossly overcapitalized." It was a hangover from the Smallwood regime which the Tory government assumed from Canadian Javelin.

"On a basis of raw economics, we should have closed it, but well over 1,000 people depend on it. I don't know who's to blame. Its original cost has almost doubled. We may be lucky. There is a rising market for linerboard and the forest operation in Labrador is becoming more efficient. We could possibly break even."

"He sees right through to the basics of a problem," one cabinet colleague said. "It's our job to take care of the details and when we seem to be coping with one job, he piles another on us."

The task is not an easy one with massive unemployment, a huge provincial debt, tough labor conflicts in one-industry towns and an almost total dependence on the rest of the country for much of the province's food supplies.

In an effort to make certain his province benefits, for example, from massive projects, all power from the next stage do miracles overnight but my government will immediately start on long-term and short-term programs for the advancement of Newfoundland."

PREMIER MOORES
. . . for teamwork

Shortly afterwards he called the province's second general election in five months and began a two-pronged attack on the economy.

He called for an inventory of Newfoundland's assets and liabilities, creating a Royal Commission and 17 task forces whose reports, due this autumn, of Churchill Falls in Labrador will come to Newfoundland. Project power production is at present marketed through Quebec.

When he assumed power in January 1972, he said, "I do not plan or expect to are to be the basis for an overall, five-year development plan.

And he cut off what he saw as unproductive handouts both to ordinary Newfoundlanders and industrial developers.

"The days of the robber barons here are fading fast .We are not asking people to build an industry here because we will give them a handout but we can say we can give them a chance to make profit with us."

This has been part of the rationale behind the renegotiation of several enterprises established under the previous government.

It has also been the reason Newfoundland no longer gives $1.50 per month per school child to every family and requires a means test before subsidizing university students. Also underway is a rural development program to provide capital for small businesses in outlying communities.

"We have created 1,500 jobs at a cost of roughly $1,700 per job. Some people are even paying off their loans."

His most satisfying statistic comes from the welfare roles. In January 1972, when his government first took over the reins there were 8,900 families on short-term assistance. In June there were 4,100.

Worst Failures

One of his biggest failures has been with fisheries, as vital an area here as farming is to the prairies. "That's one problem we haven't zeroed in on," he says, "and I am totally unsatisfied with our performance here to date."

"The fisheries have been suffering from almost total neglect for years. We should be competing internationally and we are just trying to survive. We just haven't adjusted to the fact that the fish aren't coming to us anymore, that we have to go and find them.

"If the fish caught off Canada's east coast were processed in Canada it would account for 17 per cent of the country's GNP. As it is, the West Germans and the Russians are getting the benefit of it."

Mr. Moores should know something about fish. From the time he dropped out of Boston University after three months until he retired at 35 he was building a family fish-processing plant from one employing 120 people to one with 1,800 workers. That was in 1965.

"I retired with the wherewithall to live very comfortably for the rest of my life but the fact of the matter is I got bored. There is nothing worse than doing nothing."

There was a feeling that Newfoundland had been good to him, that he owed someting to all those who had not been as lucky.

Then came an invitation from Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, the House of Commons seat, the presidency of the national party and finally leadership of, the team of idealists, Liberal rebels and rough-hewn individuals who defeated the Smallwood government of more than 20 years.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Perpetual Inflation

I am rereading Samuel Pepys in the latest, and by far the best, transcription yet of the famous Diary and it was interesting to note that in the fourth volume he recounts having bought "a whole leg of beef" for sixpence. That was in 1663 but it only goes to show that inflation is not a new phenomenon but has been building up for centuries. For lack of space I shall assert, but not attempt to prove, that inflation is part and parcel of our present economic order and cannot be successfully contained within its folds. It is, in fact, a safety valve without which the thing might not work at all.

Nixon, Trudeau, Stanfield and the rest are doing the best they can within the framework of the present system but until it is recognized that the cause of the trouble goes far deeper, no lasting cure can be effected. The solution lies in substituting co-operation for competition so that people will learn to live and work for, rather than against, one another. Easier said than done, but vital for our future well-being.—F. L. P. Anderson, 1900 Mayfair Dr.

Tunnel Vision

The ferry strike got us in a real bind, this time.

I've been looking at my wall map of Vancouver Island (Lands and Forests S.G.S. No. 1). You know, it's hard to believe that after all these years we still can't drive or take a train across to the lower mainland. That's caused some of us hardship, no mistake.

You hear lots of arguing over whether we should have a bridge from Sidney or from Campbell River (Quadra Island).

The more I think about it, what we really need first and fastest is a tunnel; say, straight across from Nanaimo to Vancouver airport.

Apart from the day-to-day and the weekend need for such a connection, for the average working stiff and vacationer it seems as though it should fit onto the trans-Canada highway plan. It would be worth our while to find out. And to check with Pacific Command about plans for oil spills and other emergencies.

A tunnel would increase tourist traffic, because visitors wouldn't be preoccupied by getting stranded through a ferry strike. And it wouldn't threaten any ferry jobs — just put a toll on, maybe one dollar a head. (Discourage any joy-riders, trouble-makers).

More important, business traffic from any corner of the Island would be speeded up. Life would be a lot easier for some students, too.

Probably, a tourist with time to spare will still prefer a boat ride, so he can enjoy the scenery, one way at least.

When I say tunnel, it's the pre-fab sections I'm talking about; tow them out, sink them in place, seal the joints, add ventilators. Of course, they're twin sections — one way traffic in each. If a rail line would pay its way, then make it triple sections. That third section would be a natural tie-in with the coming Vancouver rapid-transit system.

Apart from the immediate blessing such a connection would be for working people from Port Alberni, Port Hardy etc. it would spark the Island economy with dairy farms, market gardens, canneries and the like.

Bridges? I like bridges; I hope to see a string of them from Campbell River, right down the mainland to West Vancouver, but that will take too many years.

Let's go after a tunnel, now.—Midge.

All Ottawa's Fault

While every group is blaming the other, and the public blaming both provincial government and ferry workers; why don't the people of B.C. write in the greatest blitz of all time?

Where would we be without the Trans Canada Highway, as Canadians?

Then let us put the full pressure on Ottawa—whose prime minister and cabinet refuse to recognize our waterways as their legal highway.

They recognize and help finance the maintenance of the Atlantic Region Dominion Waterways.

Why are we still the neglected province of the Dominion?

Instead of letters to our premier, may I suggest a deluge of letters to Ottawa, stating there will be no vote in the next Dominion election for the present party owing to their water-highway neglect of us, as I am going to do.

There is right and wrong on both sides of the present B.C. Ferries strike, but Ottawa is and has been all along to blame.

Either our "Dominion Stretches From Sea To Sea"—or it doesn't.—Garnet L. Young, 1431 Richardson Street.

Sell-Out

After Mr. Strachan's panic-stricken and inflationary sell-out to the ferry workers, we in B.C. can have no illusions as to where we are headed with this NDP government on labor relations.

A maximum 18 per cent increase over a two-year contract would have been quite generous and if unaccepted by the workers legislation should have been passed immediately to keep them on the job or replacements found for those who refused to work. A 14 per cent increase sets a precedent which will be difficult to live with.

When a foot passenger clerk who does nothing but take your two dollars and pass out a ticket receives over $500 per month salary for a job which any 8th grade student could do, it is high time we all did some realistic thinking of where we are heading.—E.T.T.

Greed

Where will the greed of all these people on strike stop? I hold them directly responsible for five young peoples' lives, who were killed in a plane trying to get over to the mainland, to say nothing of hundreds of families stranded on the highways.

How dare anyone strike for more when we live in such a land of plenty and beauty. Even on our old age pension we are well off compared with other countries.

We on a set income pay for all the strikes. Wake up and put the unions back where they belong, for the good of the people, not the dollar first and foremost, no matter how many they hurt with their greed.—A Pensioner.

Tied Hands

War in British Columbia! The lines are drawn, where do we go from here? Surely this recent ferry strike illustrates what Dr. Scott Wallace recently was reported as saying "...The government's handling of the ferry situation . . . has shown such timidity . . . in dealing with an illegal strike . . . what kind of disaster might we anticipate from a legal strike from the whole civil service . . . when the province's civil servants are given the right to strike through legislation to be debated this fall?"

This of course illustrated the whole weakness of the NDP (socialist structure). The unions vote in the government which is then unable to discipline them because of its own political future. In other words, ideologies and cheap popularity will not mix with hard logic.

I was in Victoria during this recent strike which is painfully vivid. Row upon row of Canadian and American cars, waiting endlessly, unable to leave the Island.

Other hardships not generally appreciated were hotel cancellations (and mortgages still have to be met), overland trips via Vancouver Island cancelled, conventions thrown in chaos, the fear of potential food shortages and countless little people (like ourselves who saved for this holiday) being put to worrying inconveniences and unplanned costs.

Many of us were critical of the Socred government of bigotry and self-satisfaction—until it brought itself down. Let Mr. Barrett learn this lesson before his government is brought down for opposite and appeasing reasons.

Surely with today's social and educational advantages there are trained men and women prepared to run for office capable of forming a good, constructive and responsible leadership for this unique province.—Cyril Holwill, 3256 Matapan Cresc., Vancouver 12.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

Out at Goldstream Park the river is beginning to look like a "dead river" where it widens at the picnic site.

Here the algae and diatoms, both green and brown, are becoming so thick that clear water can hardly be seen.

At this point the river is shallow and open to the sun which makes these plants grow in profusion.

All the rocks and pebbles, even down to the very fine gravel, are covered with the green-brown slime.

In this condition the tiny fingerlings cannot survive because, as the plant life dies and settles to the bottom it absorbs the oxygen so nothing can live.

Without small animal life such as the caddis fly larvae and May fly larvae there is no food supply for the baby salmon.

If this keeps up it will soon mean the end of the salmon run in this river. No escapement to the sea means no return in two years time for the fish to spawn.

If salmon do come in this fall to deposit their eggs, would the eggs be able to stick to the slime covered stones, and would they receive sufficient oxygen to live?

There are several deep pools along the way in which you can find many of these little fingerlings, but in other places they do not exist.

I have been asked what kind of algae it is. I think it is "batrachospermum" and "Chaetophora" because of the way in which it branches and clings to the rocks.

I think that some of it has filtered down from Langford Lake and the low lying ditches. Some of it may have been caused by the effluent that has seeped down through the gravel from the trailer camp septic tanks and from the new subdivision which is being built at the top of the hill close by Humpback Road.

If one examines the steep bank down to the river you can see the layering that was made by the last ice sheet and where the faults lead to the river's flow.

It is certain that the more houses built on this location the worse the condition of the river will become.

Surely we cannot let this continue and destroy the wonderful cycle of the spawning salmon. If this happens the salmon will soon become a vanished species. If this happens it will mean another source of food for man has vanished.

PoWs Return to America They Cannot Understand

By JOYCE EGGINTON
London Observer

Five months ago, 566 American prisoners-of-war came home from Vietnam. Some had been captured in the early days of U.S. involvement and had been captives for eight years. They returned to a country which welcomed them as heroes, but whose mood had changed radically in the time they had been away.

Vietnam was no longer a glorious American crusade; it had become a dirty word. Women's Liberation had charged the thinking of prisoners' wives, and the trusting small children whom the men left behind had grown into unshorn teenagers with violent anti-war opinions. There was a lot of adjustment to be made.

Since the prisoners' return a number of the married men have sought divorces and several of the single ones have wed girls whom they met after they came back to the United States. A few are being treated for mental disturbances and two have committed suicide. The majority seem to be greatly enjoying their freedom. Typical of these is 31-year-old navy Lieutneant Commander Charles Zuhoski who has been relaxing at his parents Long Island home. He spent five years eight months in North Vietnamese prison camps, underwent some toture and considerable humiliation, and emerged—he asserts—more resilient and self-confident than he was before.

Emotionally Strong

"We have learned to take more than the average citizen," he said with pride. "Having lived in the kind of atmosphere where, when the door opens at an unexpected time you do not know whether you are going to be tortured, taken to solo for the next several months, or just looked at and left alone—after that it's comparatively easy to cope with everyday pressures. Emotionally, ours was a very strong group of men."

Compared with the prisoners of most wars it was also a very special group. Virtually all the men were officers and fliers. Most of them had held unusually high rank for their ages: most were in their 20s when captured. Most lived in camps within 20 miles of Hanoi where, from time to time, inmates were shuffled around so that, before long, every prisoner knew every other prisoner at least by name and reputation. The only exceptions were the 120 men held in the more miserable jungle conditions of the south, but by 1971 most of these (who included soldiers and Marines) had also been moved north.

Americans who expected the prisoners released from Vietnam to look as debilitated as the prisoners who came out of Korea were astonished at their general good health and military bearing. As it emerged later, those who had been totured suffered this early in captivity: the last three years, though dreary and humiliating, provided the men with adequate food and a reasonable opportunity for physical and mental exercise.

To a nation torn by war-weariness and Watergate, the statements made by the ex-PoWs as they set foot on American soil were downright embarrassing. They asked God to bless America, thanked their fellow Americans for continued support of the fight against Communism, and expressed profound gratitude to their Commander-in-Chief in the White House for bringing them home honorably. One air force colonel even telephoned President Nixon to pledge, on behalf of his colleagues: "You will have our support as long as we live."

Some Americans wondered whether the Pentagon might have "suggested" these patriotic sentiments to the prisoners on their way home. But as the ex-prisoners and their families have begun to talk, even though guardedly, to the press, a different picture is emerging.

Charles Zuhoski said: "Ours is a breed of men who like to fly." They were all college-educated, politically conservative, had received intensive survival training and were more concerned with the chance to fly new and exciting aircraft than with the ideologies of the war. Yet to justify the mutilation they were causing, they inevitably saw the war in black-and-white terms as a crusade to stop the spread of Communism. This was relatively simple for them as they never came close to the horror like the foot soldiers.

When they were shot down they failed to understand why the North Vietnamese—whose homeland they had devastated—treated them like common criminals, nor did this cause them to question what they had been doing in the name of democracy. Rather it strengthened a belief in the rectitude of their actions. Having seen the hatred, the pig-headedness, the unreasonableness of their captors, they became convinced that this was Communism in action, which must be defeated. From the early days of their captivity the bond between the prisoners was a common hatred of the enemy.

Gung-ho Americans with statements that were downright embarrassing

What caused a deep division among the prisoners was the fact that a few of them, probably no more than a dozen, voluntarily made anti-war statements and broadcasts which the North Vietnamese exploited, and these subsequently received better prison treatment. Most of these "collaborators" were ordinary soldiers and marines who suffered the worst prison conditions in the south before being brought north. They were hated and ostracised by the officer-prisoners who could not understand that there men — whom they dubbed the Peace Committee — might honestly feel sickened by the war.

From his home in Portland, Oregon, a former "Peace Committee" member, Robert Chenoweth, explained his feelings: "When I went to Vietnam I was just turned 19. I volunteered for the army rather than wait to be drafted; went in as private and was promoted to sergeant. At first I had no political views about the war. I just accepted it as something we had to do, which was basically the GI's attitude towards Vietnam. But when I saw what we were doing there I began to ask questions. From the army's attitude it seemed like we had conquered these people, rather than trying to liberate them. There was the same kind of discrimination that we show towards black people in this country. We were told to help them; at the same time we were told not to trust them."

On his return to the U.S. Chenoweth said he was surprised to find many Americans thought as he did. "I had not expected feelings to have changed so much."

Now the imprisonment is over, the bitterness of the "patriots" against the "collaborators" has, if anything, deepened. Among most of the ex-PoWs there exists a brotherhood which, they feel, will endure for the rest of their lives. They have spent the past four months of freedom travelling around the United States, exchanging visits, holding reunions and generally, as they put it, "having a ball." But the alleged collaborators have been cold-shouldered. None of the others would even speak to them at the White House dinner which President Nixon gave for all 566 ex-PoWs. One of the "patriots" commented: "These men will be marked for the rest of their lives. So far as I'm concerned they aren't Americans."

It was therefore only to be expected that two senior officers among the "patriots" — Air Force Colonel Theodore W. Guy and Rear-Admiral James V. Stockdale — should, on their return to the U.S., charge the Peace Committee with misconduct. Virtually all the "patriots" feel these men should be court-martialled. Many would gladly give evidence against them and are outraged that the Pentagon has now decided to drop the charges. Some of the officers are still determined to press these charges privately. Their motive is far more complex than mere retribution. The system must punish the "collaborators" if the "patriots" are to retain the faith that sustained them.

Throughout imprisonment this faith kept the morale of the "patriots" high. But as time went on both their bureaucratic organization and their super-patriotism became exaggerated. When three non-commissioned officers (who were also fliers) were put in a camp full of officers the superiors gave them honorary battlefield commissions for the period of their imprisonment so there should be no disparity. And when one officer received a package from his wife containing, among other comforts, a red, white and blue wash-cloth which vaguely resembled the U.S. flag he gave the piece of towelling pride of place in his cell and every day for the next three years he and his cell-mates pledged allegiance to the wash-cloth.

"Sitting there with so much time to think, we were aware that returning home would be like coming out of a time machine in which we, too, had changed," said Zuhoski.

He returned to find that he and his wife were no longer in love and he is now going through with a divorce. He was married only 10 days to a girl he had known for eight months before he went to Vietnam. "I came back and found we were total strangers. Our relationship had not lasted long enough to sustain nearly six years of separation. My only regret is that I caused my wife to wait all this time, only for us to be separated. But we are no longer the same people." He has taken the divorce philosophically and is now courting again.

Such are the obvious changes in the ex-PoWs. Less apparent, to themselves at least, is what has happened to their political thinking. Not only was it arrested at that point in the war when many of them were captured, before the general American disillusion set in: it has intensified. The ex-PoWs are far more right-wing in their thinking — more patriotic, they would say — than if they had never been in prison.

Dr. Robert Jay Lifton, the Yale psychiatry professor who has made a deep study of the survivors of Hiroshima, the "brain-washed" ex-PoWs from Korea and the U.S. veterans from Vietnam, explained the attitude like this: "Most of our prisoners in Vietnam were fighter pilots, highly-trained, an elite, more "gung ho" than other types of officers. A sense of their own importance was influenced by U.S. official policy in that, as time went on, the main purpose to get them released. This certainly filtered through to the men in prison. The U.S. government focused on them as an emotional issue for the pose of pursuing the war was American public. The only goal of a war which was otherwise without purpose or rationale was to bring them home.

"The prisoners sensed themselves as being designated for a special role. I am told that some of them sat in prison planning the lecture tours they would make and the books they would write when they were freed."

Dr. Lifton blames the administration for "feeding the prisoners' illusions" and thus making it more difficult for them to adjust.

Dr. Lifton believes this sense of confusion, betrayal and guilt contributed to the first suicide of an ex-PoW from Vietnam. Captain Edward Allen Brudno of the U.S. Air Force, who survived seven-and-a-half years in prison, killed himself after less than four months back at home.

Aged 32, Brudno was a highly intelligent and sensitive man. A graduate of the distinguished Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he occupied much of his imprisonment teaching advanced aeronautics to his cell-mates. He wrote a long, long love poem to the wife he barely knew, and drew on toilet paper detailed plans for the house he would build for her and the three children not yet born. Then he decided on four children and painstakingly replanned the house with an extra bedroom.

Suicide No Surprise

On his return home the letdown came all too soon. Before long he and his wife were living apart and he was seeing a psychiatrist. He was so shattered emotionally that his suicide did not come as a surprise to his family, to whom he left a note stating: "My life is no longer worth living." Several of his ex-POW colleagues were pall-bearers at his funeral, grieving that their former cell-mate had not sought the fraternal help they would gladly have given.

Then there was another ex-POW suicide of a different kind. On 27 June, the day before he was due to report back for service, a 24-year-old marine sergeant, Abel Larry Kavanaugh, shot himself. He had been a member of the 'Peace Committee" and was one of the men charged by Colonel Guy with collaboration. Kavanaugh's wife blamed Colonel Guy's "insistence on pursuing these fictitious charges" for her husband's death. All the pall-bearers at the funeral were "Peace Committee" members. None of the brotherhood of patriots showed up.

"We were all shocked by Al Brudno's suicide," said Commander Zuhoski. "Kavanaugh was a man I would not care to have me..

Pioneer Press Council Seeks 'Journalistic Common Law'

By AUSTIN C. WEHRWEIN

(The writer is an editorial writer for the Minneapolis Star.)

MINNEAPOLIS — With all deliberate speed, the pioneering Minnesota Press Council is establishing a body of "journalistic common law" that is likely to calm, and in turn, to agitate editors whose flesh creeps at the very thought of second-guessing, rule-writing, moral-pointing "media responsibility" forums. From the reaction to the recently formed national news council, it seems clear that many editors and publishers, probably a heavy majority, feel councils are useless or unworkable, or both. Or, if workable, then they are all the more likely to encroach on press freedoms and invite governmental harrassment. In sum, less a helping hand than a fist in the face.

How serious are these fears? In Minnesota, they are not serious at all. The Minnesota Press Council, the only statewide media monitor, is generally accepted by both press and public.

In the context of the skepticism about a national news council and because the national council was largely modeled on the state council here, five major Minnesota cases have acquired interstate relevance. The papers involved are small, to be sure. But the issues are basic.

In its 23 months, the Minnesota Press Council has become a substitute for, or an alternative to, libel suits. While on the one hand the council declined to fashion a new "access" doctrine, on the other hand, it narrowed an editor's discretion to define proper redress. It plunged into headline accuracy review, a touchy problem. And while it refrained from judging the validity of editorial opinion, it reserved the privilege to judge the "factual accuracy and honesty" of editorials, certainly another tender toe in journalism.

Set up by, but now independent of, the Minnesota Newspaper Association, the MPC's sole sanction is jawboning and bad publicity. A leading Republican legislator dropped a libel action against the weekly St. Paul Union Advocate (circulation 50,000) and won a "determination" (decision) that the story which reported he had been under lobbyist influence was "not accurate." Moreover, the MPC found that it was violation of "journalistic obligation" for the paper not to double check on undisclosed sources.

The editor-writer was not asked to disclose the names of his sources or to produce them as witnesses, but the MPC said that once printed, the accuracy of a story must be justified by facts. So, without trial costs, the legislator got his desired vindication. Nevertheless, the Twin Cities Journalism Review complained bitterly that the newsmen's privilege to protect his sources was ignored.

Minnesota's Press Council Offers Alternative To Newspaper Libel Suits

A second key case involved the so-called "right of access" which is anathema to most editors. Its leading advocate is Dean Jerome A. Barron of Syracuse University Law School, who contended that it was "banally romantic" in a mass media age to assume a self-operating, self-correcting market place of ideas and advocated a legally enforceable "right to access." While the council did not debate the access issue in Barron's terms, it dealt with it directly in three cases and as part of a fourth case.

One was the second case against St. Paul Union Advocate editor Gordon Spielman, who just happens to be a founding council member, and who for the second time stepped aside to don the defendant's garb. He had refused to accept the political advertising of a school board candidate only because she was not "labor endorsed." The union advocate is the official AFL-CIO organ in St. Paul.

While the council disposed of the issue by noting there is no legal obligation upon newspapers to accept all advertising offered to them, it waltzed around the access-via-ads question.

The council accepted "with regret" the Union Advocate's refusal to take certain types of political ads, but said that the weekly was part of the "special interest" press that did not accept the "conventions of general newspapers." This suggests a variable standard; the council stopped short of an absolute access-via-ads standard for general newspapers, but only after putting political advertising into the category of constitutionally-protected "important public information." Thus it concluded: "a standard under which only the advertising of political candidates approved by the publisher is accepted would be patently offensive to fundamental principles of fairness and responsibility."

The council thus implied that it would censure a general paper that refused political advertising otherwise consistent with general acceptance policies. If so, score one for Dean Barron.

The most abrasive "access" case arose from the charge by two Republican state representatives that the 9,825-circulation Worthington Globe's headline on an AP story and a related editorial were "inaccurate, unfair, misleading and false." The case also introduced a formula for redress and therefore for access that infuriated the editor. The Jan. 11 headline, "Rep. Erickson, Rep. Long Vote Continued Support for War," referred to their "no" votes in committee on Democratic resolutions urging congress to halt war appropriations and to stop the bombing of North Vietnam. The MPC said it was inaccurate and unfair to label dissent as endorsement:

"As a factual matter . . . (they) cast votes against two resolutions, they did not cast votes in favor of anything. A vote against something is not the factual equivalent of a vote in favor of something else. Nothing in the text of the (AP) news story indicates (they) 'support' U.S. participation in the Vietnam war."

Reading editor Ray Crippen a lecture on good journalism, the MPC noted he hadn't pleaded extenuating space and time limitations. So it held him to its standard on headlines, viz: "Generally correct, objective, non-misleading and non-opinionated . . . supported by facts within the news story."

The MPC is made up of 20 members, half from the news business and half sitting as "public members"; it is a body typical of Minnesota public life, with an Indian, two blacks, two women (one a reporter) and the necessary establishment figures, including President Malcolm Moos of the University of Minnesota. The chairman is Associate Justice C. Donald Peterson of the state supreme court, who was co-chairman of the Twentieth Century Fund task force that laid the foundation for the National News Council to deal with "national wholesalers of news." In an interview, Justice Peterson said that the record of the council here convinced him that it works, that it works well, and is here to stay.

Preventive Maintenance – it does just that!

Some 800 Caterpillar machines in the province are covered by Finning's P-M (Preventive Maintenance) Plan. This is evidence that P-M is of benefit to many Caterpillar owners and can be of benefit to you.

You may choose one or a combination of three basic programs:

(a) Inspection of your machine at regular intervals which best suit the machine and its application. The P-M specialist checks adjustments, measures wear and inspects major components of your Cat engine, tractor, loader, grader, skidder, excavator or scraper.

(b) P-M can also be done every 250 hours. All the service of the regular P-M are included plus all necessary adjustments, labor on minor repairs, filter inspection and pressure checks. This work takes about eight hours.

(c) The major P-M is done every 1,000 hours and takes about 12 hours to perform. It involves the same procedures as the 250 hour P-M with the additional time spent on minor repairs.

You pay a low flat rate fee, plus travel time and mileage, for the regular P-M. Any repair labor, materials and overtime are additional charges.

This cost is small, particularly when you consider all the benefits. With P-M you know the true condition of your machines. You can evaluate the effectiveness of your routine maintenance. You get the best out of your equipment. You can forecast and budget for repairs or replacement. You can schedule the time when your machines will be down. Service life can be extended. And finally, you can repair minor problems before they become major expenses.

Use P-M for performance, production and profit. Call your Finning representative today.

Region Earmarks Farm Reserves

Both Indian and federal government lands will be considered in the drawing up of the Capital Regional District's agricultural land reserve plan.

But Saanich was successful in persuading the board not to include 500 to 600 acres of farmland within its sewer area slated for urban development.

These decisions were made at a day-long special meeting Friday of the regional board. District planners now will draft an agricultural land reserve plan bylaw for the board's Sept. 5 meeting.

The plan is required under the Land Commission Act passed by the provincial government earlier this year and designed to protect farmland.

A move to exclude Indian reserve land from the plan was defeated 10 votes to 8. Board chairman Jim Campbell said this means the Indian land will be included in the consideration of the draft plan.

Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith opposed inclusion of Indian land, saying the Indians weren't represented at the board and that many bands have comprehensive plans and "it is not the right of this board to regulate or spoil some of the good work they have been doing."

Campbell agreed there is a question or jurisdiction as to whether the farm reserve plan can be enforced on Indian land.

"I believe that Indians ought to be treated like other citizens and the land is part of Canada and B.C.," he said. "We have a responsibility to deal with land on its merits."

Campbell opposed exclusion of farmland within Saanich's sewer area and said the provincial Environment and Land Use Committee have "behaved carelessly" when it lifted the building freeze on this area and its extension into Royal Oak.

Saanich representatives said their municipality is trying to make clear distinctions between urban and rural areas and it wouldn't make sense to have the small and dwindling parcels of agricultural land within the sewer area stuck that way.

The baord cleared up a number of technical matters and deferred some other issues to a later meeting. Among items deferred were:

- That land "irreversibly alienated" by urban development be excluded from the draft plan;
- That land be excluded if it does not "form part of a large homogenous tarct of . . . related soils;"
- That land be exempted from the plan if it is within a sewer area or where public investment has been made to provide sewers.

However, the board approved exemption where land has been purchased, zoned, designated or "otherwise" slated for urban use by a regional or community plan where it can be demonstrated the land is required for urban use in the next five years.

The approval of Saanich's sewer area exemption came under an item which proposed exclusion of land already exempted from the land freeze by the Environment and Land Use Committee.

Saanich planner Tom Loney commented in an interview that the regional board "accepted our submission that the sewer enterprise area be excluded from the land reserve plan."

The regional district's draft plan, after going to the board in bylaw form Sept. 5, is scheduled to be presented to a public hearing Oct. 1.

DENTAL TOOTHACHE

REGINA (CP) — As in other cities across the country, toothache sufferers here are finding international monetary troubles are adding to their woes.

One of several dentists interviewed this week described how the rising price of gold has affected the cost of dental care:

"An average crown three years ago might have $10 worth of gold in it and today that crown will have $30 worth of gold."

But Ken Ellinthorpe of Ash Temple Ltd., which supplies gold to city dentists, sees a recent improvement in the situation:

"The situation is not as bad as a few weeks ago. We're not checking the price hourly any more."

The dentists see little chance of a widespread switch to some other material, however.

One said he uses another alloy about once a year when he finds someone allergic to gold — but there is no significant cost reduction.

Another said there are few materials that compare with gold:

"It is non-corrosive, has extremely high tensile strength, over-all it most resembles in physical characteristics natural enamel."

He added that over the years people have learned to work gold with precision.

If there is no apparent solution to the pocketbook troubles of patients, some dentists are at least considering a possible measure to reduce the complaints they get.

In Ontario, the Royal College of Dental Surgeons recently asked dentists to split charges into two bills — one for the dentist's work, the other for the work of dental laboratories which supply the gold.

"I think it's a good move," one dentist here commented.

Another remarked that "because of the problems we have with lab costs I started putting down dispersements a couple of years ago."

"I've never had a complaint since I've done that."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 21-year-old woman was given a suspended sentence and one-year probation for possession of a narcotic by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday.

Marilyn Jean Garton, 5—2211 Shelbourne, was checked in the 700-block Yates Aug. 9 and a pipe containing cannibas resin found on her.

It was her second narcotics conviction.

Hans William Schaalo, 17, of Calgary, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for possession of marijuana.

Schaalo was checked while driving in the 900-block Oak Bay Ave. and a bag of marijuana was found in his car.

In traffic court, William Henry Storms, 29, was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for four months except for work for impaired driving by Judge Edmond St. Jorre.

Andrew Masters, 17, of 4725 Beaver Rd., was fined $250 and prohibited from driving for three months for impaired driving.

Alberta Hikes Minimum Wage

EDMONTON (CP) — The province's minimum wage for full-time workers 18 years and old and up will be increased Oct. 1 to $1.90 from the current $1.75, Consumer Affairs Minister Bob Dowling said today.

The minimum rate will increase to $2 April 1, 1974, he told a news conference.

The minimum wage for students employed part-time will be increased to $1.40 an hour from $1.25 Oct. 1 and to $1.50 an hour April 1, 1974.

Guilty Plea Entered

George Burton, charged with the attempted murder of former Central Saanich police chief John Gelling, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of assault with intent to wound before Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday.

Crown Prosecutor Brian Smith will apply to enter a stay of proceedings on the attempted murder charge and two other assault charges after Burton is sentenced Sept. 27.

Burton, 57, of 1450 Mount Newton Cross Road, also pleaded guilty to assaulting Sgt. Ross Yuill and auxiliary constable Graham Henderson.

The charges were laid April 30 after Burton stabbed the three policemen while being arrested on another charge.

Defence counsel S. R. Chamberlain, of Vancouver, said he would introduce psychiatric evidence before sentence and asked that a presentence report be prepared.

The "most grave consideration," said Chamberlain, is not to deter Burton but to establish whether or not he can be rehabilitated "so it won't happen again."

Details of the incident will be presented to the court at time of sentence.

Envoy Dies In Plunge

LONDON (Reuter) — Gen. el-Leissy Nassef, 52, Egypt's ambassador-designate to Greece, was killed Friday when he fell nine floors from an apartment building here.

Nassef, a career army officer who headed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's bodyguard unit until earlier this year, was here on a private visit. He had been undergoing treatment for a neurological disorder.

It was believed that he lost his balance on the balcony of the ninth-floor apartment in the Maida Vale district and fell.

Clad in his pyjamas, he was seen clinging to the balcony rail just before he plunged to the ground.

Nassef's appointment as ambassador to Greece, his first in the Egyptian diplomatic service, was announced earlier this year.

Gas Hearing Observed

VANCOUVER (CP) — James Rhodes, chairman of the British Columbia Energy Commission, said Friday he would attend a public hearing in Washington Monday on the price of B.C. natural gas in the United States.

Rhodes said he and commission counsel Martin Taylor will attend the hearings strictly as observers.

The Federal Power Commission hearings are to examine the recent agreement between Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., the only transporter of B.C. Gas, and its only U.S. customer, El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Writer Right, But Irked

RENSSELAERVILLE, N.Y. — Isaac Asmimov, prolific writer of science fiction, says he's angry at the prospect that some of his dire predictions may come ture.

"I don't want to be proved correct because people didn't do anything," said the 53-year-old author of 143 books.

One of his books predicted a wide-spread food shortage by 1980, and the author commented: "They don't call me a doom-crier any more."

WASHINGTON — David Eisenhower predicts 10 years from now the American people will look back on the Senate Watergate hearings "as a nightmore" paralleling the McCarthy hearings of the early 1950s.

people

President Nixon's son-in law made the forecast in an interview published Friday by the Los Angeles Times and took the occasion to criticize Sen. Sam Erwin, chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee.

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. — Wendell Willkie has received another vote in his 1940 bid to defeat President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

A 33-year-old Willkie vote, yellow with age, was found in and old ballot box in the town hall attac Wednesday by Barbara Maynard, Republican registrar. Willkie was the Republican candidate.

It won't change the outcome. Even though Willkie's total now is 22,348,481, FDR still wins by about five million votes.

LOS ANGELES — Actor Raymond Burr was released from a medical centre here Friday, two weeks after suffering an apparent heart attack, officials said.

Burr, 56, a native of New Westminster, collapsed Aug. 10 aboard a Portuguese airliner as he was about to return to the United States from the Azores.

LOS ANGELES — Blind singer Stevie Wonder, injured in an auto crash two weeks ago, has been released from hospital.

But a spokesman said the rock singer's appearance schedule has been cancelled for several months.

AMHERST, Mass. — Blues and soul singer Roberta Flack will enter University of Massachusetts school of education to begin work on a doctorate, a university spokesman said.

Miss Flack, a Grammy winner for her recording of First Time Ever I Saw Your Face, will study improved methods of teaching disadvantaged children.

TORONTO — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker Friday night received the Canadian Speech Association's first annual citation for distinguished contributions to Canadian speech.

William Noonan of Toronto, association president, described Diefenbaker as "the Canadian who above all has dignified the art of human speech."

Charlie Vyskocil of Lincoln, Neb., and his wife, Diane, 37, shared the boxcar with six horses, a colt and a dog. Their three young children travelled by passenger train.

The trip was possible under a 19th century railroad policy designed to encourage homesteaders to settle the West. Under the policy, a man could travel free in a boxcar when shipping his livestock.

BRIGHTON, England — Sarah Miles, the 30-year-old British movie star, told a court she is not a very good actress. Miss Miles gave the personal view of her talent in a letter to the Brighton magistrate's court pleading guilty to a charge of speeding.

She apologized for not appearing in person, explaining that she would be in Argentina at the time of the court hearing.

"Although I am an actress, please don't let this color your decision," the letter said. "I have held a clean driving licence for three years and I am not a very good actress."

She was fined 50 dollars and the speeding conviction went into her record.

Pressure Recruiting Ploys Probed in Minor Hockey

The provincial government is conducting a preliminary investigation into the player recruitment practices of the minor hockey organization in B.C.

A spokesman in the recreation and conservation department said Friday he expects to be talking to a number of officials connected with B.C. minor hockey.

It was learned that Ray Peebles, president of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association, is to be one of the officials invited to Victoria to talk about the recruitment programs being used by amateur hockey teams in the province.

The issue has become significant since the publication last week of an Alberta government report which charged that young hockey players are being taken advantage of and are not being allowed to play for whichever teams they please.

The spokesman in the recreation and conservation department said Jack Radford, minister of the department, had requested him to do preliminary research on the recruitment situation. If it is detected that a problem exists in B.C. with regard to player recruitment and manipulation, further investigation will likely be ordered by Radford, the spokesman said.

Another person expected to talk to provincial officials is Father David Bauer, former coach of the Canadian amateur national team, who is now connected with Hockey Canada.

FUSED ROCKET WASHED UP NEAR NIXON

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Children swimming near the hotel where the White House press corps stays while covering President Nixon found a dummy rocket with a live fuse Friday.

A bomb disposal squad from the El Toro Marine Air Base was called and removed the device from water offshore near the Surf and Sand Hotel here, 15 miles north of the Western White House at San Clemente.

"It had a live fuse in the nose," Sgt. David Avers of the Laguna police department said.

Avers said the device apparently was fired from military aircraft into the Pacific during practice.

Drug Specialists To Aid Foulkes

The provincial government has hired two more consultants to assist in the year-long study of health facilities being conducted by Dr. Richard Foulkes.

Hired through orders-in-council released Friday are Patrick E. Tidball, a drug marketing consultant, and David D. Schreck, a consultant economist. Tidball is to receive $22,500 per year and Schreck $17,500.

The appointments were effective Aug. 1.

A spokesman in the health department said the two are pharmaceutical experts who will be doing research for the government after Foulkes submits his report to Health Minister Dennis Cocke this fall.

Areas the government has indicated will be studied are the possible bulk-buying of drugs in B.C., perhaps in conjunction with other western provinces, and marketing techniques for the program announced Thursday which will see prescription drugs supplied free to B.C. residents age 65 and over after Jan. 1, 1974.

West U.S. Fires Curbed

United Press International

All but two forest fires in the Pacific Northwest have been extinguished, and two remaining fires were believed under control early today.

Forest fires in six northwestern states during the past 12 days burned nearly 200,000 acres of timber and range land. They were the worst forest fires in the west's history.

One fire remained out of control in Montana, but that was expected to be contained soon, the spokesman said.

State forester Lewis Moran of California, one of the regions hardest hit by fires, said that probably 60 of the 300 forest fires in the state in the past week were set by arsonists.

The Hotcake.
Our $38,500 Beach Drive apartment
that's selling like there's no tomorrow

Sure this apartment would sell like a "hotcake" anywhere — but put it on Beach Drive in Oak Bay where the high cost of land doesn't usually allow for so much space and value at such a moderate price — and you can really see what the excitement is all about.

And there's even more to the Hotcake than the floor plan shows. Like undercover electronically secured parking for each and every apartment, laundries on every floor, EVEN room for freezers. And a sauna, a therapeutic pool, exercise pavilion, plus a hobby room.

But that's not all. The Royal Alexander has three other one and two bedroom models from just $29,000 to $57,500.

Come see them quick, because we won't have them long. They're selling like the Hotcake.

12 SUITES SOLD since we opened on August 12

PPBS Technique Used As Analytical Tool

MANAGEMENT MEMO

By PATRICK BROWN

Kates, Peat, Marwick and Co.

This column usually concerns itself with management in the private sector.

The public sector, however, is equally involved in planning and management and over the past few years there has probably not been a system or technique that has been the object of greater publicity and discussion than the concept of a planning, programming, budgeting system commonly referred to as PPBS.

What is the meaning of the concept, how is it defined and what does it accomplish for its users?

As a starting point, a planning, programming, budgeting system is an analytical tool designed to assist management in the allocation of resources to accomplish stated goals and objectives over a designated period of time.

As government assumes responsibility for an increasing share of the nation's economic activity, it becomes imperative that the best techniques and talent are applied in this sector. PPBS provides a framework for management in a typical government environment characterized by multiple objectives and political considerations.

Recognizing the management cycle of planning, implementation and evaluation, PPBS is so structured that scientific management techniques can be used whenever they are appropriate. It provides for the objective consideration of alternatives and for making explicit choices between competing objectives, competing programs or groups of activities. Serving as a firm basis for the evaluation of programs and people, it places emphasis on flexibility and accountability.

ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS

Much of the value of PPBS lies in the careful and systematic identification, documentation and communication of the essential elements in the decision process. These elements are:

—the present situation — a complete description of how things actually are, with all relevant data

—the objectives and measurement criteria — answering the linked questions "What end situation are we trying to create and how will be know when our aim has been accomplished?"

These two elements should lead to a concensus on what the problem is and this may be documented in an "issue paper".

1. Identification of alternatives — the collection and possible "brainstorming" of various ways of dealing with the problem.

2. Choosing the best alternative — the analysis of different approaches in terms of both effectiveness in accomplishing the objectives and the economic use of scarce resources; the development of a program proposal.

3. The program budget — a presentation of program proposals to decision makers, some of which will be chosen for implementation.

4. Implementation and evaluation — two concurrent processes representing "Management by Objectives".

THE EFFECTS OF PPBS

In many areas of federal, provincial and particularly local government there is evidence that management falls far short of anything so systematic as PPBS. This is evident not only in the development of one-time projects but especially in the management of on-going activities.

On the other hand where a planning, programming, budgeting system has been implemented there have been significant and sometimes dramatic changes in both the style of management and in the activities themselves.

Many of the resullts of implementing the system can be directly ascribed to increased information flow, both in terms of communication of objectives and strategies and in the accounting and internal information systems necessary for PPBS support. Exposure of the objectives and total costs of programs to senior government officials and to elected bodies invites questioning of assumptions which may have been taken for granted for many years.

Similarly, the availability of better information together with a simple structure for organizing the analysis and decision process provides potential for informed and useful public participation.

Many observers foresee that the continued incremental growth of government activities and budgets poses a severe threat to Canada's economy and to the life-style of Canadians.

This may or may not be true but improved management through PPBS and similar systems offer an opportunity to order our priorities today and cope with the demands and uncertainties of tomorrow.

CITY BANKS' DEBITS HIGH

Debits to individual bank accounts in the Victoria area during July amounted to $1.24 billion, compared with $831 million in July, 1972.

The total is up from $1.18 billion in June of this year.

The figures, collected by the Canadian Banker's Association, represent the total amount in all savings, current and personal chequing accounts of customers.

High totals generally indicate strong economic activity in the private sector.

PHOTO TIPS

Mrs. Herta Barloewen

With only Labour Day weekend left, the time for taking summer pictures comes to an end for this year.

Try to finish your half-started roll of film in order that you don't put your camera away with film in it. Pictures or slides do not improve in colour if too much time passes between taking the pictures and the developing of the film. With outdated, or not properly kept film, a very unpleasant colour shift could occur.

Come in to see your Photographic Counsellors at JUS-RITE, we will advise you on how to store your prints and slides — reminders of precious memories.

Your Money or Your Life: Finding Cures Is Costly

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

How much is a human life worth? And if a dollar value has to be put on life, who decides how much?

Questions like these are emerging as social issues because medical research has developed increasingly sophisticated and expensive treatments. And millions are being spent to find new ones, some of which are bound to be even more costly.

Some sample costs now:

● Almost $11,000 a year to maintain a patient on an artificial kidney machine at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

● Probably better than $5,000 for each open heart surgery case, with its expensive pre-op testing, special surgical team, intricate equipment and intensive post-op care.

In the U.S., a federal health department report predicts the annual cost of treating terminal kidney disease could reach $1 billion by 1980.

In Canada alone, over $26 million has been spent on heart research since 1955, just a fraction of the international total.

If every Canadian decided a twice-yearly medical check-up was a must, the country's doctors would not have time for anything else. There simply aren't enough medical resources — people, equipment, money — to give everyone everything which is available now.

BANKS

How then, can the vast sums being devoted to medical research be justified?

Two prominent Victoria doctors say medical research should continue "flat out" and they spell out why.

You have to step back and take the long view, say Dr. Peter Banks, consulting physician and president of the Canadian and British Medical Associations, and Dr. G. Scott Wallace, general practitioner and Oak Bay MLA.

Banks points to treatment of tuberculosis and poliomyelitis as classic examples. Wallace points to development of drugs like chlorpromazine.

Not so many years ago there were tremendously expensive sanitoria all over the world filled with TB patients. Isolation was part of the treatment and it was costly.

When Banks came to Victoria there were about 100 patients in TB wards at the two general hospitals. Keeping them there today would be costing taxpayers $2.5 million a year.

But continuing research produced antibiotics. The TB wards, the sanitoria are all closed. That problem has been solved "with a handful of pills."

Just 20 years ago there was a "colossal" epidemic of polio which had doctors working night and day with expensive iron lungs, "incredible intravenous apparatus, people with tubes down them so they could breath."

Many got better but treatment was very costly, Banks recalls. Research produced the Salk and Sabbine vaccines. Polio all but vanished as people swallowed the vaccine on a lump of sugar. The iron lungs are gone.

Chlorpromazine is one of thousands of drugs research has produced. It acts on the central nervous system.

Wallace says he has no idea how many millions it cost to develop but it has given doctors throughout the world a capacity to treat disabling emotional and mental disease.

The benefits can't be measured but they are two-fold. The numbers of people who have to be hospitalized (at $70 a day) has been cut. But perhaps more important, many people with the help of that drug are not only no burden on the community, they can live productive lives, supporting themselves and others.

There are scores of similar examples, he says. One more is prednisone, a newer form of cortisone, which has proved vital in immediate support of patients suffering extreme stress, for example, shock after a traffic accident.

Banks describes the expensive open heart operations to install vein bypasses around clogged coronary arteries as a tremendous surgical feat.

"But, if by research, we discover how to make this operation and others like it unnecessary, by stopping the arteries from blocking, obviously this is going to be a colossal cost saving."

Wallace points to the evolution of pacemakers, which can control the rhythm of erratically beating hearts, as an advance enabling patients to get on the move "instead of sitting home twiddling their thumbs."

People think they are being taxed out of sight for such services as medical care. Then their father or mother, husband, wife or children become the beneficiaries of research "and their whole philosophy changes," he says.

Cancer research utilizes tremendous medical resources at the present time, says Banks — expensive deep x-ray machines, complicated operations.

"But if we can develop, as we have with some cancers, pills which will hold it in check or cure it, obviously the cost-saving is tremendous."

The pressures arising from research costs today bring to light some intriguing aspects of the problem, he says.

One is that successful research is often by "serendipity," meaning discovery by happy accident.

Example: Sir Alexander Flemming, working in the department of bacteriology at St. Mary's Hospital, London 40 years ago.

He was investigating bacteria and onto his experimental plates floated some fungus. He noted the bacteria did not grow around the fungus.

"This was pure and absolute chance but he had the genius to say, 'this is peculiar,' took the fungus and from it isolated penicillen."

Politicians, faced with the problem of funding research, don't want scientists locking themselves in ivory towers to probe abstruse problems with no apparent goal to shoot for, says Banks.

They tend to say to the researchers: "this is the problem; you solve it." But research progress frequently doesn't work this way.

Banks says President Nixon has said, in effect, to the American research establishment: 'Cancer is a problem. To me it would be a great political boon if it were solved. Here is $1 billion.'

Banks calls this approach "highly questionable" because "there probably aren't the researchers in the world at the present time, certainly not in the United States, to utilize that billion dollars productively.

WALLACE

"They can spend a billion dollars in nothing flat but they'll probably be storming up all kinds of blind alleys doing it."

Cancer is a vast, terribly complicated problem, he says, "like looking into a ball of wool a mile across. There's a thousand strands and you don't know which one's going to lead into the middle. And there are probably many middles."

Renal dialysis, purifying a patient's blood by machine when his kidneys have failed, is an expensive procedure now which may someday yield to kidney transplants.

Like many another medical puzzle, transplants lead to another problem — rejection by the body of foreign tissue. Researchers are trying to fathom that one.

Another answer would be to find the causes of diseases which lead kidneys to fail, says Banks. If these could be dealt with, kidney transplants, and their rejection, could be side-stepped.

Canada doesn't have the money, even today, to give to every citizen the products that medical research has delivered.

Because taxpayers are already complaining about costs, Banks says "we are going to be forced in the not very distant future to make choices as to who's going to get what."

That choice, he suggests, should not be made by politicians, nor the medical profession, but by the rest . . . by the people.

THEY WHEELED 'N' DEALED

"I have $20, do I hear $30? $30, do I hear $40? $40, do I hear $50?" yelled the auctioneer as the bids went as high as $80 at today's Victoria City Police annual bicycle auction.

Total return from the auction of unclaimed bicycles that have collected in the police garage on Fisgard Street over the year, have not been officially tallied as yet, but the take is expected to be well over $1,000.

A crowd of more than 200 people crammed into the garage to see the 60 bicycles offered for sale.

Esplanade Apartment Ban Challenged by Brothers

The legality of an Oak Bay council decision to bar apartment buildings from the Willows Beach Esplanade was challenged Friday in the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The zoning bylaw passed recently was "specifically designed to frustrate" three property owners in the area, lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, acting on behalf of Harold, Douglas and Kenneth Bonner, said today.

McKenzie was involved in an all-day hearing before Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins concerning the rezoning of the Esplanade area from multiple to single family dwellings.

The bylaw involved is invalid, McKenzie claimed, because it was passed as a consequence of the Oak Bay council knowing that the Bonners were considering selling their waterfront property to an apartment developer.

"The whole thing is a complicated series of actions and reactions, moves and countermoves on the part of Oak Bay council," McKenzie said.

"We are arguing that because it (the bylaw) was specifically designed to frustrate the Bonner brothers, it is illegal.

"There hasn't been an apartment building built in that area for 11 years, but as soon as it was known the Bonners had an offer on their property, a bylaw passed which now makes the building of an apartment uneconomical."

Mr. Justice Aikins reserved judgement on the question after hearing the arguments of McKenzie and Oak Bay council solicitor Marsh Gordon.

The area had been zoned for apartments for approximately 40 years, but last year, aldermen began a survey of residents to see if they would agree to have their property down-zoned.

A public hearing on the proposed bylaw was held June 25 and more than 200 people crammed the council chambers to express their support of the down-zone move.

At that time, McKenzie said the Bonners had received a $169,500 offer on their property. With the new bylaw, the residential value of their land would be reduced to $100,000, he said.

Seven apartment buildings now exist on the waterfront and are exempted from the single-family zoning.

Historically Booked

A bus tour of historic buildings held today by the Hallmark Society was booked to capacity, and another scheduled for next Saturday is full as well.

The society got 300 requests from people wanting to go on the tour, but could only take about half.

"There's absolutely the most tremendous groundswell growing," said Hallmark Society president Carolyn Smyly.

The young society, formed this spring to work for the preservation of heritage buildings in Greater Victoria already has 70 members, she said.

Housing Shortage Face UVic Students

Consider University of Victoria's Joe Cool.

He has his courses chosen weeks ahead of time in preparation for long lines of registration starting Sept. 4.

He's even managed to scrape up a cheque for tuition fees.

UVic's manager of housing services Shirley Baker expects about 900 out-of-town university students will start pouring over apartment for rent ads this week in hope of finding off-campus accommodation.

And if her list of 200 available suites is any indication, the students are going to have trouble finding it.

UVic residences — equipped to handle about 600 students — have long been booked up.

"It's been a tight situation in former years, but never as tight as this.

"We've faced the problem of apartment building managers being reluctant to take in students before — it's an unfortunate situation, too, when most students are good tenants.

Ms. Baker's office compiles a list of off-campus accommodation.

Householders willing to offer room and board, or a self-contained unit or basement suite to a student in September phone the office, receive a form in the mail and the student checks with the landlord.

"We don't select landlords."

"Although some of the out-of-town students have friends with apartments living in the city, and some will share because it's economically more attractive, there's going to be many who will find it difficult," she said.

Landlords who list with the UVic housing services office are free to set their own rates, she said. Anyone interested is asked to call the office at 477-6911.

2 Dead, 2 Injured

Two people were killed and two others injured in a two-car crash early today on the Trans-Canada Highway one mile south of Duncan.

Names of the dead and injured have not been released, pending notification of next of kin.

Duncan RCMP said the driver of one car was killed instantly. The other driver was taken to a Victoria hospital but died on the operating table.

There was one passenger in each of the two cars and both received minor injuries.

The accident occurred at 12:35 a.m.

If It Isn't a Skidder It's a Backhoe

IT IS MY FATE TO LIVE in basic resource country where men have an affinity for machines of the brawnier sort. The logging truck driver pilots his multi-geared heavyweight with casual authority. The log salvager who works the beaches veers his big yellow skidder this way and that as if it were a polo pony. Little boys correct me if I miscall some grunting earth shifter a bulldozer when everybody knows it's a backhoe.

This is also the home of the chain saw, a fiercely effective snarler that I wouldn't have touched with a 10-foot pole in my city years.

To our dismayingly competent neighbors, the chain saw is merely another tool in the handyman's kit. We may be jolting along some dim trace that is less road than trail when a fallen tree blocks our passage. The driver hops down, reaches into the back of his pickup, and fetches out his saw.

It coughs at the first yank on the starter toggle, takes hold at the next, and bites into the obstacle with a high, sustained yowl. In next to no time the way is clear.

After a couple of demonstrations by chain saw virtuosos, I began to yearn for a snarler of my own. I pointed out to my wife that in the time it took me to hack one of our bush-lot alders into firewood lengths, a fellow with a chain saw would carve up half a dozen trees.

"That's what I'm afraid of," Win said. She added, "Not to hurt your feelings but you aren't too handy with power tools. Rember when you skidded the turkey off the platter with the electric carving knife?"

Still, she agreed, a chain saw would earn its keep, and since Father's Day was coming up, maybe I'd like one for a present. At that point I shelved my conviction that Father's Day is just another of those hokey festivals laid on for the benefit of the merchants, and hurried out to warm the car.

Up at bustling Campbell River, we found a store that specializes in chain saws. They ranged in size from a helfty brute that I could barely lift off its rack to a peewee model not much larger than the carver that skidded the turkey.

As a lefthanded man in a righthanded world, I have learned to rely on expert opinion. The dealer steered me to a saw of comfortable weight and balance that responded with a properly hellish din when he fired it up and touched the throttle trigger.

Along with the saw, we acquired a skinny round file, a tool kit, an owner's manual, a plastic container of blood-colored chain oil, and from a friendly onlooker, some advice.

Start small, he said. Take it easy, and remember that saw teeth whirling at high speed aren't particular about what they cut. There was this faller up in the woods, a pro who should have known better . . .

With that horror tale firm in mind, I started small and easy by attacking some roots that projected from a gale-delivered stump beside our beach approach. The saw made short work of them. With a fine feeling of power and authority, I tackled the lowest and fattest root.

The cut deepened. Coarse sawdust flew. Then the pace slowed.

Win, watching from a respectful distance, called, "It's throwing sparks."

Naturally, a pebble wedged in a root crevice is going to give off sparks when struck by fast-moving metal. The saw chain had also lost its snug grip on its grooved bar.

"Well," my dear, Win said resignedly, "you'd better get the tool kit and read the instructions."

"For a start," I told her, "I'll just take that chain off and have a good look at it."

An hour later, the chain was back on its bar, the tension was as it should be, and I was wondering why my mechanized aid to firewood production refused absolutely to cut.

Neighbor Nick strolled over. He made a brief inspection, shook his head, and muttered, "Oh, boy!" Then he said, "You've got the chain on backwards, and we've going to have to file the burrs off those cutters."

In the months since, the chain saw and I have achieved a reasonable understanding. I take it easy and look before I cut. The saw does its job, and if other hands could use it more effectively, what matter. In this compartmented world, we aren't all meant to sit tall in the saddle of a DC-75 cat.

At least I think that particular yellow monster is a DC-75. If I'm wrong, some machine-age small boy will set me straight.

Protection Search Starts

EDMONTON (CP) — Officials of the Western Canada Hockey League agreed Friday night to hold an emergency meeting with junior leagues in Eastern Canada to discuss protection against moves by professional hockey clubs.

The junior clubs are concerned over moves by the pros to sign their amateur players even though they are still 18 and under.

"We (major junior leagues) can look after our affairs better than anyone else and we must receive adequate compensation for our players or go under," said Bill Hunter, an executive of teams in both the WCHL and the professional World Hockey Association.

A WCHL spokesman said league officials have arranged meetings in Montreal on Sunday and Monday with representatives of the Ontario Hockey Association, the Quebec Junior Hockey League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

There is a possibility, however, the meetings might be switched to Toronto, if insufficient hotel space is unavailable in Montreal, he said.

The spokesman said the WCHL wants assurance that it will receive financial assistance for the development of hockey players "for whom we are offering an apprenticeship."

Hunter said before the meeting that the CAHA or a similar body is needed only to supervise amateur hockey from the juvenile level down.

He said if he has his way, the major junior leagues would divorce themselves from the CAHA and make their own deals with professional hockey clubs.

American owners of professional hockey clubs must realize that without financial assistance, junior hockey cannot survive in Canada, he said.

Hockey: Now About These Players Lists

"What's a players list, Dad?"

"I don't know, son. Why?"

"Well, I think I'm on one — at least that's what a guy told me."

A normal conversation? Quite possibly, especially if the boy just happens to be an excellent prospect as a hockey player. But the meat of the subject is that too often the boy doesn't know he is on a team's player list, and neither do his parents, or are they asked.

This is just another segment of the muddled minor hockey picture that is clouded in controversy and confusion, and causing all sorts of investigations all over the land.

No sooner was the Downey report in Alberta — calling minor hockey tantamount to a "slave market" — handed down, and another in Saskatchewan about to be published, than the B.C. government announced its own version of an investigation.

B.C. Amateur Hockey Association president Ray Peebles has been asked to appear in Victoria next Friday, Aug. 31, to discuss hockey with Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford. The talks have been described as "very preliminary."

Actually the concept isn't that new, but stems from action taken a year or so ago by the BCAHA.

At that time, the BCAHA asked then Attorney-General Les Peterson to launch an investigation into one phase of the hockey scene. Peterson was agreeable, but fate intervened.

The Right to Know

Basically the resolution put forth asked two simple questions.

"Why shouldn't a boy know, or be asked, when he is put on this phantom players list:

"Why shouldn't a boys' parents be consulted in regard to the same list?

A players list has been called many things, but it is basically an agreement between member junior hockey clubs which protects the rights of those clubs to certain individuals. It is a blatant form of protection, and normally is not be confused with restrictions connected with minor hockey teams where zoning regulations, among other rules, restrict a boy to playing in the area in which he resides.

And it is at the junior level where many of the major problems occur, such as, when a boy is told: "John, you are on our list. We would like you to play for us."

So the boy signs, or he doesn't sign; or he is traded, or he is "sold". That's the "slave market" charge. But the simple truth is that when a boy enters junior hockey he is NOT the master of his own destiny.

What the BCAHA is saying in effect to the government is: "Why don't you investigate the player lists of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League?"

A Friend in High Places

Sure this is a slap at the WCJHL, directly or indirectly, because it has also been emphasized many times in the past that a financially-poor team can't operate or compete with talent-rich clubs unless it has some way of protecting or developing its own players, i.e. a player list.

It's no secret that hockey at the junior "A" level, is no longer fun. It is a business, a bigger business now than ever before because of the heavy demands placed on major junior hockey clubs for professional talent. With the advent of the World Hockey Association, the professional world is a hockey player's oyster if he shows any class at all. And now, too, the player war is on earnest, the NHL having accepted a no-holds-barred battle. A player's market, it is, but there can't be a market without junior "A" teams, can there? So where does it start and end?

It's an unholy mess all round, and the time may be near at hand for some type of control — federal or provincial so that the responsiblities of all concerned may be more clearly defined.

But until then, at the least the new Pacific International Junior "A" Hockey League has a champion; and this could prove to be significant.

When the PIJAHL was announced Stan Patience, president of the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association received the following telegram:

CAHA DELAYS DECISION ON YOUNG HOCKEY PROS

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association decided Friday to postpone a decision on the status of juniors who have signed professional contracts until after a September meeting with the World Hockey Association.

The CAHA held a directors' meeting Friday at which they were to discuss the position of Dennis Sobchuk, a 19-year-old who has signed a 10-year $1-million contract with Cincinnati Swords of the WHA.

Because the Swords don't start playing until the 1974-75 season, Sobchuk says he will play this year with his Western Canada Hockey League team, Regina Pats.

Jack Devine, president of the WCAHA, said his organization will make a decision on Sobchuk, and any others like him, after the meeting with the WHA.

Jacques Locas of Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior A League said Friday he'd also signed a 10-year, $1-million contract with the Swords.

"His case will be discussed, too," said Devine.

The CAHA plans to meet with the WHA and the National Hockey League to work out an agreement on the signing of junior players.

The WHA has no agreement with the CAHA and pays no money to the amateur body when it signs a junior. The NHL, however, has always paid for players, pumping $7 million into development of amateur hockey in the last five years.

Concern in Little League Over '12-Year-Old Pros'

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — A Little League team from Taiwan goes after the island's third straight championship today, and the volunteers who run Little League baseball in the United States are upset about it.

The Oriental teams are just too good, the argument goes, and they keep improving.

The players, coaches and parents of Cactus Little League, from Tucson, Ariz., are the only group in Williamsport that says its team has a chance to beat Taiwan.

"I thought last year's team from Taipei, Taiwan, was perfect," said a district administrator from the Midwest.

"This year's team from Taiwan City, Taiwan is much better. It's not fair for our boys to compete with them. They don't have a chance."

Taiwan teams won the series in 1969, 1971 and 1972. Japanese teams took the title in 1967 and 1968.

Interviews with more than a dozen officials showed amazement, resentment and unanimous concern with the performance of the Far East teams.

"You could take the seven other teams that came here and list the best players from every one," said a southern administrator. "What you'd come up with wouldn't have a chance against the Chinese. There's no way they can get a team like that following the rules."

Some say Taiwan violates Little League rules on eligibility, recruitment, district size and practice time. Others accuse the Nationalist Chinese government of building super teams for use as a propaganda tool.

In Friday's play, also-rans decided the last four placings in the eight team tournament.

The Canadian champions from Whalley, B.C., took fifth place by scoring a 2-0 win over Monterey, Mexico, and the European champions. Bitburg of west Germany, won seventh place with a 3-2 victory over Colonie, N.Y.

Sleep-Jolting News

TORONTO (CP) — An official of the Canadian Open tennis tournament telephoned Tom Okker late Friday night and told him he'd be playing Ivan Molina in one of today's semi-finals.

"What?" replied the dumbfounded Dutchman. "What's he like? What's he like?"

The tournament official told him that "Molina hits every ball back and twice as hard."

"He probably won't get any sleep," the official said after telling him that Molina had thumped second-seeded Arthur Ashe of Miami 6-4, 6-3.

"I've got a lot of confidence and I'm playing very well, said the unseeded, 27-year-old Colombian who played "the match of my life" Thursday when he took a three-set decision from Australia's Rod Laver, the game's first millionaire.

Molina was beating Ashe from the baseline in the first set so Ashe started to attack. But when he came to the net, Molina cooled him with blistering passing shots that caught all corners of the court.

The third-seeded Okker, from the Netherlands, advanced by beating 10th-seeded John Newcombe of Australia 7-6, 6-2.

Newcombe, who won here in 1971, said he had taken some muscle relaxers the night before his match "and I started to psyche myself that they hadn't worn off."

Unseeded Cliff Drysdale of South Africa made his way into the other semi-final pairing with a steady 6-2, 6-4 victory over 16th-ranked Paolo Bertolucci of Italy.

He'll face fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain who is also riding a hot racket.

Orantes continued his domination of Bjorn Borg, the Swedish teen-ager who sidelined Australian veteran Ken Rosewall Thursday, by beating him in straight sets, 7-5, 7-6.

Top-seeded Evonne Goolagong of Australia advanced to a centre court date with second-seeded Helga Manshoff of West Germany after sleeping through the first set of a 5-7, 6-0, 6-2 win over Peggy Michel of Pacific Pallisades, Calif.

It's a Tight Battle

FREDERICTON (CP) — Two tough competitors who will be going to university together this fall share the lead going into the final round of the Canadian junior men's golf championship today.

Defending-champion Robbie Jackson, 18, of Ile Bizard, Que., and Mike Mealia, 18, of Thornhill, Ont., both are 10 over par at 220 after three rounds.

They are being chased by Michel Boyer, an 18-year-old from Ste. Julie de Vercheres, Que., and Tom Hodgins, 18, of Whitevale, Ont., both at 221.

Bill Parker of St. Vital, Man., leads in the race for the juvenile (under 16) honors. He has a 54-hole total of 222.

Robbie Jackson, Que.	71-74-75—220
Mike Mealia, Ont.	74-75-71—220
Tom Hodgins, Ont.	73-77-71—221
Michel Boyer, Que.	73-75-73—221

Dolphins Try Again

Victoria Dolphins, barring further unforeseen circumstances, get to play their first home game of the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League on Sunday.

Dolphins, who have had both previously-scheduled games at Royal Athletic Park scrubbed—once because of a travelling mixup and then because of the ferry strike — take on league-leading Vancouver Meralomas, who are undefeated in three games, at 6 p.m.

Kershaw Shooting For Third in Row

Gary Kershaw will be out to win three main events in a row during the super-stock portion of a car-racing program shared with claimers tonight at Western Speedway.

Kershaw, who has only raced at three local events this season, is now only 13 points out of 10th place in driver standings.

In the claimer division, Gary Rowe has increased his lead over second-place Glen Hay to 228 points.

Only three more races remain this season in both the super-stock and claimer divisions.

Time trials tonight are at 7.

SUPER-STOCKS
1. Terry Forsyth	1,293
2. Roy Haslam	1,110
3. Bob Collins	1,050
4. Rick O'Dell	890
5. Larry Pollard	792
6. Chriss Van de Water	566
7. Vic Bing	407
8. Ron Hancock	396
9. John Currier	380
10. Jerry Ferrie	305
CLAIMERS
1. Gary Rowe	810
2. Glen Hay	582
3. Tom Patenaude	518
4. Ray Birtwistle	411
5. Dave Ireland	396

Canadians at Moscow Blanked on Final Day

MOSCOW (CP-Reuter) — The United States added to its gold medal total Friday, but Canada was shut out during the final program of the World University Games.

The U.S. won the men's basketball final, 75-67 over the Soviet Union, and the Americans emerged supreme in swimming. But the Russians proved superior in the over-all competition, picking up 135 medals, including 68 gold.

Canada, with two silver and five bronze medals, lost 80-79 to Brazil in another men's basketball game. The Canadians had a chance to win a bronze medal against Brazil, but Ken McKenzie of Port Coquitlam, B.C., missed a driving layup shot with three seconds left.

Americans registered five victories Friday for 16 out of a possible 22 gold medals in swimming.

For the U.S., towering Jack Tingley picked up his second gold in two days as he won the 1,500-metre freestyle.

Other individual U.S. victories were registered by Mary-Ellen Feldmann in the 100-metre backstroke and Olympic Medalist Susie Atwood in the 200-metre individual medley.

The U.S. also won the men's 400-metre freestyle relay and the women captured the 400-metre medley relay.

Jane Rogers of Vancouver was eighth in the women's 200-metre medley with a time of two minutes, 40.35 seconds.

The Canadian men's 4-x-100-medley relay team did better, finishing fourth in 4:03.9. The U.S., however, won in 3:55.1.

UVIC GIRLS IN REPECHAGE

MOSCOW — The University of Victoria women's crew Friday was relegated to the repechage heats in the European rowing championships.

Bennett's Boot Poses Problem

Keeping big-kicking Phil Bennett down to a respectable number of points could be one of the major tasks facing the Victoria Rugby Union President's XV Tuesday night.

The Victoria team meets glamor club Llanelli of Wales, considered by many to be one of the best teams in the world, at 6:30 at Royal Athletic Park.

So far on Llanelli's Canadian tour, Bennett has given the opposing sides headaches with his pinpoint kicking from all angles. He contributed 32 points, mainly with his boot, when the Welsh club crushed a combined Manitoba-Saskatchewan Selects side 48-6 Thursday.

Bennett is one of six full Welsh internationalls (including two who have played also for the British Lions) on the Llanelli team. Captain Delme Thomas and Derek Quinell are the two former Lions and the other internationals are Tommy David, Roy Bergiers and Andy Hill.

As well, Llanelli boasts five players who have turned out for the Welsh international "B" team.

Coach Alan Rees will play in the fullback berth for the Victoria team and he has included fellow-Castaways members Peter Gallagher and Gillie Greig.

Rees, Greig, Barber, Wilke and Eckhardtwill all play again for the Victoria Crimson Tide Reps against Llanelli at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 1, at Centennial Stadium. Rees will name the rest of the squad during the week.

Today, the President's XV warmed up with a match against a Victoria Select side and on Sunday the Crimson Tide will play the Selects in an exhibition game at 11 a.m. at the University of Victoria.

Panasiuk Retains Two-Stroke Margin

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Al Balding glanced at the scoreboard Friday night and suggested "Panasiuk, Kern and Balding, what a helluva threesome that would make."

The veteran Toronto golfer was only speculating, but the luck of the draw later brought the three together for today's third round of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship.

Bob Panasiuk holds a two-stroke lead with a 137 total after Friday's 68—nine under par for 36 holes.

The $25,000 championship, with $5,000 going to the winner, winds up Sunday. A tie for first will necessitate an 18-hole playoff Monday.

carved out a 65 for the opening 18 holes Thursday and observed the Burlington Golf and Country Club's lush 6,375-yard layout was just made to order for his long drives off the tee.

Panasiuk, who led the tournament by two after the first 18 holes, retained that margin in the face of two new challengers.

Phil Giroux of Montreal, with a 68, was in a tie with Ben Kern of London, Ont., who scored his second eagle of the event en route to a 66—a round that included five birdies and two bogeys.

Another two strokes off the pace at 137 were Balding, Gar Hamilton of Toronto—with another eagle—and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

Joe Porter Made His Pars And Goes Against Nicklaus

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Joe Porter figured he had an advantage when he and six other players went to the tee in a sudden-death playoff for the last spot in the rich United States' professional match play championship.

"Those other guys are exempt players," said the obscure Porter. "They don't have to qualify. I'm out there every Monday trying to fight my way into the tournament. I get in playoffs for the last spot all the time. It was nothing new to me.

He made five of them in a row in the gathering gloom of early evening Friday and won a prolonged playoff over Dave Stockton, Rik Massengale, Paul Moran, Bob Smith, Bobby Mitchell and Lanny Wadkins.

The triumph gave the 28-year-old Porter the dubious honor of playing Jack Nicklaus in the first round of the $150,000 match play championship today.

"I've got no pressure," the stocky Porter said. "I've got absolutely nothing to lose."

He's right in one respect. First-round losers in the match play receive $5,000.

He's won only $1,622 this year, quit the tour for the fourth time and returned only when he was offered a new stake and some advice by his father in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Porter, along with his playoff partners, tied for eighth in the Raleigh open, a $100,000 event, after 36 holes with a 140 total.

Under the unique format for this, pro golf's only double-header, the top eight players after two rounds of the open drop out of that tournament and move into the match Play, which has a $150,000 total purse and offers $40,000 to the winner.

Those to peight join eight exampt players in the match play. Both the match play and the final two rounds of the open will be played simultaneously on the 6,786-yard, par-71 MacGregor Downs Country Club course.

J. C. Snead has a pair of 68s for 136 to lead through two rounds of the open. John Schroeder is second with 138 after a course record 65 in the second round.

Dan Sikes, DeWitt Weaver, Allen Miller, Buddy Allin and rookie Artie McNickle tied at 139 and clinched their spots in the match play.

That set up these pairings for the first round of the match play: Nicklaus vs. Porter, Lee Trevino vs. Sikes, Tommy Aaron vs. Allin, Grier Jones vs. Schroeder, Johnny Miller vs. McNickle, Archer vs. Weaver, Tom Weiskopf vs. Allen Miller and Jerry Heard vs. Snead.

There was one consolation for the playoff losers. They now share first place in the third round of the open.

Also moving up in the battle for the open title were Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, who has a two-round total of 142 following a 69 Friday, and George Knudson of Toronto, with a 73-70—143 score.

Wright Blasts Par

Eric Wright turned in a superb display of accuracy Friday at the Gorge Vale course to romp away with majors honors in a Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association tournament.

Four under par after nine holes on his home course and five under after 11, Wright combined trap and putting troubles on the 17th for a double-bogey six before finishing with a par for a three-under 69.

Wright's round, which included six birdies, 10 pars, one bogey and two-over count on 17, gave him a comfortable eight-stroke lead over Doug Peden, who took low-gross laurels in the A division with 77.

Another Gorge golfer, George Kulai collected the tourney's second major award, leading the chase for low-net honors by firing a 79 to wind up with a net tally of 66.

In the 14-to-17 handicap division Alan Snell of Victoria was the low-gross leader with a 81 and Ken Alexander of Nanaimo the handicap winner with a net 68.

Ray Spouse of Gorge set the pace in the 18-to-20 section with 86 as Harry Forse of Uplands notched a net 69 to take the handicap award.

Bradshaw Reaches Final

OTTAWA — Glen Bradshaw of Victoria has reached the final of the boys 16-and-under singles in the Canadian Open junior tennis championships.

Bradshaw had to fight hard to beat Kevin Cook of Michigan 7-5, 2-6, 6-4 in the quarter-finals and then he downed Walter Berliner of Holliswood, New York, 6-3, 6-1 in the semi-final.

The Victoria player meets Dave Becker of Vancouver in the final. Becker beat Tom Jones of The Bronx, New York, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5 in the semi-finals.

Chris Kachel, who with fellow-Australian Dave Carter recently won the doubles title in the BC. Open tournament in Victoria, reached the boys' 18-and-under singles final.

Kachel defeated top-seeded Canadian Mike McLoughlin of Toronto 4-6, 7-6, 6-3 and meets Chile's top junior, Hans Gildemeister, today. Gildemeister reached the final with a 6-4, 6-1 win over Mike Czarnecki of Michigan.

In one of three finals decidd Friday, Noaka Sato, Japan's top junior, downed Heather Dahlgren of Kailwa, Hawaii, 6-4, 6-2 to take the girls' 18-and-under title.

Anne White of Charleston, West Virginia, beat top-seeded Caroline Kates of Toronto 6-2, 6-1 in the girls' 12-and-under final.

And in the other final, Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa and Nuala Dwyer of England beat Miss Sato and Candy Senn of Toronto 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 to win the girls' 18-and-under doubles.

Seaboard Pounds Polz in Opener

Glen Bullen won out over Bill Polz Friday night in the battle between the top two pitchers in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

And the result was a 10-2 win for Seaboard Construction over Century Inn and a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven league playoff final.

Seaboard batters tagged Polz, top winner in the league, for six hits and six runs before Ron Fetterly took over in the sixth inning.

Scott Sinclair, who hit a homer and a double and drove in four runs, and Brian Grexton, who had a single and a double and scored three times, did most of the damage for Seaboard.

Bullen, who finished second to Polz in league pitching, scattered six hits, striking out four batters and giving up no walks, for his third straight playoff win.

The second and third games in the series will be played at 1:30 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Winning Streak Gives Orioles Lofty Perch

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles are flying rings around the rest of the American League East and haven't come down to earth yet.

"Now, we need another one," said an unquenchable Earl Weaver after his soaring Birds beat Kansas City Royals 6-0 Friday night for their 11th straight victory.

The longest winning streak in major league baseball this season has given the Orioles a pretty high perch in their division race.

Involved in a tight, four-team fight as recently as Aug. 14, the Orioles hold a four-game lead over Boston Red Sox, 4½ over Detroit Tigers and have virtually knocked New York Yankees out of contention—sending the skidding Bombers seven games to the rear.

It isn't enough for Baltimore's pessemistic manager, however.

"We're not home safe yet," said Weaver. "We've got to avoid injuries the rest of the way."

Oakland Athletics tightened their grip on the American League West lead by beating the Yankees 5-1. The victory gave Oakland a three-game lead over the Royals.

In other American League baseball games, the Tigers beat Chicago White Sox 6-5; the Red Sox whipped California Angels 3-2; Cleveland Indians ripped Texas Rangers 11-5 and Minnesota Twins blanked Milwaukee Brewers 3-0.

Bobby Grich stroked four hits and knocked in three runs to back Dave McNally's three-hitter for Baltimore. The Orioles used single runs in each of the first four innings and a two-run eighth to help them tie their team record for consecutive victories.

Jim Hunter and Darold Knowles combined on a five-hitter to pace Oakland to its win. Hunter, who suffered a broken thumb in the all-star game last month, gave up his only run in the fifth inning on a double by Graig Nettles, a walk and a single by Gene Michael.

Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with singles in the first and third. Dick Green blasted a two-run homer for Oakland in the eighth.

BANTAM GRID SEASON OPENS

Warriors play Hornets in the first game Sunday when the Vancouver Island Bantam Football League season is launched at Royal Athletic Park.

That game is at 1 p.m. and then Invaders meet Vampires in a second encounter a 3 p.m. Chiefs have a bye.

League games are scheduled every Sunday and occasionally on Thursdays. Playoff finals are set for Sunday, Nov. 4 and the B.C. final will be on Nov. 18.

Ottawa Hears Air Woes

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air machinist representatives met here Friday with transport department officials and MPs to present their views on problems and issues that have hampered resolution of a four-week-old strike by their union against the company.

The union leaders, representing 1,300 machinists, presented letters to the office of Transport Minister Jean Marchand and met briefly with civil aviation branch officials.

However, Marchand was not in town to meet the union spokesmen.

One of the major complaints of the machinists has been that the airline is having its planes serviced at Oakland, Calif., while the strike has been on.

They also charge that management personnel checking the aircraft are not sufficient in number to be giving proper safety checks to the planes.

Despite recent efforts to get together on some common ground and resume contract talks, there have been no meetings and sources indicate there is little flexibility on either side.

2 Canadian Women Held

ALGECIRAS, Spain (AP) — Customs officers in this Spanish seaport detained two Canadian women after finding 85.9 kilos of hashish hidden in their car on arrival from Ceuta, a Spanish stronghold on Morocco's north coast.

The women, identified as Anne Dranitsaris, 24, of Toronto, and Mario Etna Fiddis, 27, of Vancouver, were taken into custody pending trial on charges of smuggling and violations of public health.

IT TAKES more than talent to make it in the pop music scene, so Ian Anderson, leader of the British rock group taking North America by storm, has to be a clown, wit and zany showman as well as leader and singer-flutist of Jethro Tull.

Proud Race Turns to Theft

Washington Post

NAIMEY, Niger — The tall, lean Taureg chiftain sat in the midst of his few remaining possessions and half-starved family telling of the long and devastating trek south.

It had taken almost four months to cover the 275 miles down the Niger river from Gao, in Mali, to Niamey, a forced death march in a desperate search for pasture lands to feed his herds — the pride of his life.

One by one he watched his 60 camels, 50 cows and untold number of goats drop dead from starvation until, by the time he reached here, not a single animal was still alive.

Out of the 95 persons he rules as clan chieftain, 15 died along the way, mostly babies and young children.

Cattle Feed

Now Alimou Gamar is squatting in a disease-stricken refugee camp, his life of some 70 years shattered, his only job fighting for a meagre handout of wheat pellets normally fed to cattle.

For the first time he is learning what it means to beg, bargain and perhaps sometimes steal just to keep himself and his family alive another day.

There are 2,000 like him here in this sprawling refugee camp on the edge of Niamey, and several hundred other Tuareg living in similar plight in and around dozens of towns and villages in northern Upper Volta and throughout Mali and Niger.

For the Tuareg, the blue-robed and black-turbaned aristocrats of the Sahara, an ancient way of nomadic life is now imperiled.

Indeed many here wonder whether seven consecutive years of ever-worsening drought in West Africa have not finally put an end to nomadism as the Tuaregs have always known it.

Stamina Famed

For centuries these handsome nomads, famous for their stamina and prwess at war, have moved across the Sahara oblivious to frontiers and nationalities.

They have been a thorn in the side of newly-independent African governments, which have sought to subdue and tax them with only limited success.

Mali fought a brief war against the Tuareg in the mid-1960s, a strugle it finally won with the help of neighboring Algeria and Soviet-supplied arms.

No one knows exactly how many Tuareg there are, but most estimates put their number somewhere around 500,000, spread across southern Algeria and Libya and northern Niger and Mali in vast desert wasteland.

Regarded as thieves and pillagers by the sedentary peasants living along the southern border of the desert, the Taureg are generally unwelcome and distrusted guests.

Most of them no longer have the means to return to their old way of nomadic life, and many are reluctant to go back to Mali because they feel they are persecuted by the government there.

But neither Upper Volta nor Niger wants the Tuareg to stay, for they have placed major additional burdens on their already swollen welfare rolls.

The Taureg hate the cities and yet they must now beg for food from hostile or, at best, indifferent city officials.

They creep up to the hotel doors at dusk and try to peddle their warrior wares of knives, swords and long spears.

Slave Keepers

Like other aristocratic classes of the world, the Tuareg detest manual labor. For centuries they have had a caste of black slaves, variously called Belas and Harratins, doing all their tent chores, arms forging and occasional farming for them.

For the first time in their lives, many have blisters on their hands from doing the work traditionally done by their Bela slaves.

Perhaps the worst agony for Tuareg is the loss of his camels and cattle, the former "his fleet" and the latter his ambulatory bank account.

Thousands have lost their entire herds, some as many as 2,000 head of cattle, sheep and goats.

"We sometimes hear them crying out at night after their dead cows," said one local official in Timbuktu, Mali, where nearly 8,000 Tuareg refugees have gathered.

There are even reports of Tuareg who have lost their entire herd committing suicide, an act their moslem faith strictly forbids.

What to do with these fallen aristocrats o fthe desert is a question governments throughout the drought-stricken area are now asking themselves with considerable uncertainty.

Too Costly

For most of these states, it would be far too costly to buy enough camels and cattle to put the Tuareg back into business. But none wants thousands of destitute Tuareg as wards of the state, either.

There is talk in some countries of changing their life style and making at least semi-sedentary peasants out of them, "recycling the nomad," as one western aid expert put it.

Niger's minister of Saharan affairs and nomads, Mouddour Zakara, said in an interview that this government wanted to settle them down for good.

"I think it's the end of grand nomadism, traveling hundreds of miles over enormous distances the way they have been doing it. You can't be a nomad without animals and we can't let them become beggars in the cities," said the minister who wears a long, flowing white robe and white turban.

"The only thing left is to settle them down."

Zahare Zakara, who is himself from a settled Tuareg family near Agadez in northern Niger, said he had been talking to his people for five years about the need for learning to cultivate the land.

New Land

Now Niger has a project under way to settle 30,000 to 40,000 of the country's 300,000 to 350,000 nomads on land that is just being irrigated in a valley just south of Agadez.

Zakara wants to make them at least part-time farmers so that they will not be totally dependent on their herds.

"It won't be difficult," he said. "The nomad is proud of his way of life, but now he no longer has the means to continue it. It's a question of life or death."

But in Alimou Gamar's eyes there is still a defiant sparkle.

"I have no feet so I can't leave right now," he said, referring to the loss of all his camels.

"But if I get my feet back, I will go back to the desert again."

$12 Million Raid

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Police arrested two Mafia suspects Friday and seized $12 million worth of heroin reported being smuggled to the U.S. from France via Italy.

The two under arrest were identified as Sicilians Giuseppe Palmeri, 58, and Pietro Ingoglia, 53.

NOTICE OF INDUSTRIAL ROAD CLOSURE – NITINAT LAKE

The road to the North side of Nitinat Lake will be closed August 27th through to September 7th inclusive to permit repairs of the Little Nitinat Bridge. It is suggested that persons wishing to go into the Nitinat area use the launch at the M & B Campsite or at the North end of Nitinat Lake.

B.C.F.P. regrets this closure during prime recreation time, however these repairs must be carried out during a non-operating period and when streamflow is low in accordance with instructions of local Fisheries and Wildlife Officers.

CBC Men in News Hassle

TORONTO (CP) — Three CBC personages got into a mild hassle Friday over the quality of TV news at a communications seminar.

Peter Gzowski, a CBC radio host was lined up against Knowlton Nash, the corporation's director of English TV information programs, and Lloyd Robertson, who reads the national news at night.

After Nash had praised TV for "doing a far better job of informing the public than the newspapers except in a few big cities," Gzowski commented:

"If the newspapers are superficial, what's the word for TV? ... glib ... contrived ... How do you describe a medium that puts visual impact ahead o finformation?"

Gzowski, also a writer and magazine editor, said he is "unhappy with TV's total artificiality" and its insistence of putting style ahead of content in news programs.

"How come there is only 19 minutes and 50 seconds worth of news every night — 12 minutes and 50 seconds on Saturday?" he asked.

"What if there's 40 minutes worth of news in the world?"

"Why can't a person just come on and tell me the news?" he added.

A woman in the audience of the conference of the Canadian Speech Association had a different complaint.

Robertson was "a lovely person" but the news he read was "in general as dull as ditchwater."

"I suppose the New York Times is duller than the News of the World the British sex and scandal sheet," Nash replied.

"The priority on the national news is content." It would not be brightened by distorting priorities.

"And my concern," Gzowski retorted, "is that I see many stories that are on only because of their visual interest, though they are of no importance."

Before the disagreement, Nash told the conference that the chief news editor of the CBC is "by far the most important" editor in Canada. The impact of TV news men was enormous.

However, he conceded that this medium "still has a long way to go in informing society."

Raped in Jail 50 Times

WASHINGTON (WP) — A 27-year-old Quaker war protester arrested at the White House Aug. 14 and held in the D.C. jail was released Thursday after what he said were two days of "terror" in which he was beaten and raped more than 50 times by jail inmates.

Robert Martin, who says he is a former reporter for the Norfolk, Va., Sun, Associated Press and Overseas Weekly, held a press conference at Quaker House here Friday night "in the hope" that rapes of inmates can be prevented in the future.

D.C. Corrections department officials said the assaults are under investigation but said that jail guards do not usually venture into cellblocks during nightly recreation periods — when Martin was attacked — because the guards themselves might be attacked.

Martin was taken to D.C. General Hospital late Wednesday night but had to wait for treatment, he said, while jail officials unsuccessfully sought to get a police sex squad down to investigate.

They were told, and police officials confirmed that police no longer investigate crimes committed at the jail or any district corrections facility, except for homicides.

Corrections officials expressed ignorance of this new policy, adopted by police June 12, although police say copies of the policy were delivered to corrections officials.

Martin, currently unemployed, said he became a pacifist and Quaker after getting out of the navy in 1972.

He was one of a number of protesters arrested after they sat down in the White House visitors line to pray for a halt in U.S. bombing of Cambodia.

He was arrested Aug. 14, the last day of the protests, but refused to post bond because, he said, "I wanted to see what jail conditions were like."

He was held for a week in a "quiet" cellblock along with many older inmates and convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy until he was transferred to a different cellblock late Tuesday afternoon.

When the recreation period began at 6 p.m. less than two hours after he arrived in the new cellblock, Martin said a gang of men came into his cell, began beating him, forced him to strip, and then raped him for almost five hours until the recreation period ended at 11 p.m.

At no time during the five hours did a guard come near Martin's cell, he said, despite a large crowd outside the cell.

Martin said he did not scream because he was told he would be killed if he did.

Corrections officials said their preliminary reports show that a guard saw Martin sitting in the cellblock at breakfast the next morning, surrounded by a group of men and called Martin aside because "it looked like Martin might need assistance."

When the guard asked Martin if everything was all right, officials said, Martin replied that he would handle it himself.

Martin said he was too terrified to tell the guard because the inmates had said they would kill him if he mentioned a word about what had happened.

"I was threatened with death if I talked . . . I was terrified . . . something inside of me snapped."

Chokecherry Wine Export Planned

REGINA (CP) — Dick Smith wants 40 tons of chokecherries.

The purpose: To transform them into wine, liqueur, jam and jelly for Europeans and Japanese as well as Canadians.

Smith, owner of Western Winemaking Supplies Ltd., said he is getting 75 to 100 calls a day from people willing to sell him chokecherries at 10 cents a pound, and he expects to have his 40 tons shortly.

He and three partners plan to start a cannery operation this fall, under the name Golden Prairie Canning, that will — they expect — employ 15 to 20 persons and surpass $1 million in sales within five years.

SUPPLE HEAVYWEIGHT, a sea elephant bends over backwards for her lunch at Frankfurt zoo. The sea elephants, which roam the Pacific coast of South America and California in their natural state, weigh up to about three tons, but are noted for ability to bend themselves double.

TEL STRIKERS ORDERED BACK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of B.C. Tel began returning to work late Friday, following a victory by the telephone company in British Columbia Supreme Court.

A back-to-work order was issued by Mr. Justice Harry McKay, ending a walkout by 4,000 B.C. Tel employees that started early Thursday.

Only the Vancouver, Lower areas were affected. Supervisors manned B.C. Tel facilities during the walkout, and there were no serious disruptions of service.

The walkout was called by the Federation of Telephone Workers after 32 repair men were suspended for refusing to work overtime.

Mainland and Fraser Valley

The company maintained an interim agreement signed by the Federation and B.C. Tel June 12 was in force, and that the overtime dispute should be settled through normal grievance procedures.

Mr. Justice McKay concurred, saying the walkout was an unlawful breach of the agreement.

Federation president Gordon Cooper, after ordering the strikers to report back to work on their normal shifts, said he hoped union and company officials would meet soon to settle the overtime dispute.

CHESSMASTER

By GEORGE KOLTANOWSKI
International Chess Master

PROBLEM
By Ted Cook, USA
BLACK: 8

WHITE; 6

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

BROTHERS UNDER THE SUN

For music lovers, and lovers of Old World atmosphere, one of the happiest occurrences of the California summer is the series of concerts given at the beautiful old Paul Masson winery in the hills high above Saratoga, 40 miles south of San Francisco.

This year marks the advent of what we can hope will be a parallel tradition, a summer chess festival on the same site.

In the early morning, dust clouds rose from the road running to Masson vineyards and winery as hundreds of cars wound up the hill. They came from all over California and beyond, from Phoenix and Seattle, Portland and Las Vegas. When play started under the clear, sunny sky, there were 537 players.

What U.S. chess needs is more sponsors of the Masson stripe, people who care not only for chess but for the creation of an atmosphere so thoroughly in consonance with a game of thought that the tournament becomes a happy experience to be remembered with pleasure by winners and losers alike.

The First Paul Masson Chess Festival was a four-round Swiss tournament. Winner of the Master Group was Ken Commons, 22, of Huntington Beach. he was the only player o fthat group to win all his games. His play is such that he should have little trouble winning his International Chess Master title soon.

Tied for second were John Dedinsky of Palo Alto and Roy Erwin of Santa Monica. (Frank Marshall, the legendary U.S. champions, used to supplement his income by setting up a table and board on the Atlantic City Boardwalk where he would take on all comers. Roy Erwin, a continent and a half century away, does exactly the same thing on the beach at Santa Monica.)

While the winners of the various classes, like the bulk of the players, were predominantly Californian, "A" Division had a winner, Mitchell Montchalin, of Portland, and "B" had one in Ben Vandiver of Indianapolis.

She Says It All in Kites—Symbolically

By BERNIE GOEDHART

EDMONTON (CP) — The room is alive with colors and surprises, cluttered with painted rocks and paintings lined four or five deep against the walls.

On the floor near the door is a large, colorful painting of two youngsters flying a huge red kite. It is a cheerful, happy painting but Jean Richards says something is missing.

There is another one she's pleased with. It shows a flat, broad patchwork ground which somehow resembles a runway, some transparent wisps of white clouds, a pinkish sky, and high above all this one pale orange kite.

Ms. Richards is serious about kites. They're fun, she says but they also have meaning.

She likes nothing better than to be out in a decent wind with her fishing rod in one hand—she uses it to launch the kite—and the kite string in the other. She says it gives her a feeling of elation, "as if I'm right up there myself."

FOUND RICH LORE

The Edmonton artist, who prefers the Ms. prefix because she feels it's irrelevant whether a person is a Miss or Mrs., became interested in kites about a year ago. It occurred to her that the kite was a ritual object, so she went to the library, borrowed some books on kites and immersed herself in the subject.

She discovered that kites are seen as religious objects in some cultures—"Some thought they were the soul on a string."

She learned about using a kite to symbolize all the misfortunes that might occur in a person's lifetime. In China, a kite would be released on behalf of a child in the belief this would spare the child evil and misfortune for the remainder of his life.

When Ms. Richards gets on the topic of Indonesian or Indian kite fighters, she becomes even more enthusiastic.

TRY TO CUT STRINGS

"Everybody in the village, men, women and children, rushes to the scene with their kites." The kite strings have crushed glass on them and the object is to cross strings and try to cut the other person's kite down, she explained.

"If you can get that kite, it's yours."

Ms. Richards, who has not seen an actual kite fight, is determined to introduce the sport here.

Ms. Richards admitted when she became involved with kites she thought people might think her a little strange. "Mind you, most people know the things I do are a little offbeat."

The idea to launch her kites with a fishing rod came from a man in New York.

"It makes you taller," she explained.

"There has to be a pretty decent wind. You hold the kite until the wind catches it and then reel it out.

"You don't need to run with it unless it is a small kite or it's a heavy kite with a poor wind. I don't run with it very often."

She began making kites last year. There are about 25 homemade kites of various colors, shapes and sizes in her basement.

She is also continuing work on her series of paintings incorporating kites. "I hope to have a show of my kites and kite paintings," she said.

Duncan May Hire Paramedics

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley Regional Board will consider hiring two paramedics to work at the district hospital as well as drive the ambulance during the day.

The board's ambulance service is in a serious situation because not enough volunteers are available for the day shift in the area between Chemainus River and the Malahat.

Twenty-three volunteer drivers in the area are still willing to serve, according to Cobble Hill director Murray Turner, but not between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Milk Price Plea

RED DEER (CP) — The Public Utilities Board Thursday promised a quick decision on applications for milk price increases and said it does not see a need for a two-price system unless it can be shown to be to the advantage of consumers.

Board member W. D. Abercrombie said there is recognition of the urgency for a prompt decision on an application by Alberta Milk producers to raise the price by $1 a hundredweight to $7.85.

Red Tape Bandage Scratches

WASHINGTON (WP) — G-man sees G-girl. G-man doesn't watch where he is going, walks into hedge, trips over same, cuts hand on glass.

That brief explanation tells the story of a run-of-the-mill accident, except that it happened within the red-tape confines of some U.S. property. The result was a don't-stick-beans-up-your nose report filed by the National Bureau of Standards where people are taught to be precise. Here is Uncle Sam's unexpurgated version in memo number DI-14-1973:

"Date: May 22, 1973.

"Time: 10:10 a.m.

"Agency of accident: Plant (ornamental hedge).

"Source of injury: Glass.

"Details of accident: While walking on the lawn south of building 230, employee tripped, fell to the ground and contacted broken glass.

"Nature of injury: Several small lacerations of right hand resulting in eight lost workdays.

"Remarks: Employee stated he was distracted by a passing female that attracted his interest and attention. While in a state of distraction, employee tripped over an ornamental hedge and fell to the ground. There was a broken beverage bottle on the ground where the employee fell and his hand contacted the broken glass.

"This employee was involved in another lost workday injury (seven days) in January, 1973, which resulted in leg injury when he tripped over a flexible electric cord that was energizing portable equipment which he was using." (The government report here does not list the cause of that particular state of distraction, if any).

"Recommendations:

A. Employees should maintain an awareness of their surroundings and footing so as not to become involved in accidents causing injury to themselves or others. If one is to be overwhelmed by distractions herein described, such activity should be practiced with undivided attention to preclude accident involvement.

B. "Supervisory personnel shout reiterate in safety instructions to employee the importance of maintaining safety awareness in the performance of assigned tasks."

Bureau officials say they are not sure how the man explained the accident at home but they suspect his verbal report may have omitted a few of the details spelled out in the official government account.

Rent-Aid Seeks Furnishings

Victoria Rental Aid needs donations of furniture to outfit two emergency shelter homes scheduled to open in Esquimalt and Victoria by Oct. 1.

Director Jim Nelson said today the housing facility is open to families who find themselves without shelter because of fire, eviction or when "families simply find themselves without a house at the end of a month."

Both locations will be equipped to handle two families, he said.

Furniture can be donated by phoning Rental Aid at 385-3401 or the Community Action Group at 382-5911.

Chemicals Blamed For Psychoses

BOSTON (UPI) — Phenylketonuria, an inherited chemical disorder commonly called PKU, may be causing severe psychiatric disturbances in adults, according to a group of Canadian researchers.

The group published a report on its study in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study, done by Dr. Thomas Perry and several colleagues at the University of British Columbia, describes two sisters who suffered from PKU and had psychoses severe enough to require admission to a mental institutiion.

It also said the two women and a third sister produced nine children with mental defects, but none of the children had PKU.

Routine PKU screening for psychotic patients in mental hospitals would prevent misdiagnosis of illnesses, the report said, and PKU associated psychotics might be treated with a special diet rather than drugs or shock therapy.

PKU is a defect which makes the victim unable to convert the common amino acid phenylalanine into another essential amino acid, tyrosine. The buildup of phenlalanine in the blood causes irreversible brain damage.

However, when detected in infants, a special diet may be used to correct the disorder and many states require testing for PKU at birth.

Because the Canadian sisters produced offspring without signs of PKU, but with mental defects, the study strongly suggests that the mother's unrecognized disease caused brain damage in the developing fetus.

For that reason, the study advocates routine testing of every woman for PKU either at the time of a premarital gynecological visit or at the time of a marriage licence is issued "even if she is apparently mentally normal."

ALBERTA AID FOR AGED HIKED

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial government will assume the cost of optical services and materials, dental care and medical and surgical appliances for all 127,000 Alberta citizens 65 years old and older and their 25,000 dependents, Consumer Affairs Minister Bob Dowling said Friday.

He told a news conference the government will increase the guaranteed income supplement for 75,000 old age pension receipts by $10 to $80 a month effective Oct. 1.

Cost of the medical assistance program is estimated at $1,280,000 while the increase in the income supplement is expected to cost about $9 million.

"We still are seeking more ways to help our senior citizens through this inflationary period," Dowling said. He refused to specify areas under study "because I wouldn't want to raise people's expectations, and then fail to come up with a program."

He said the government's action was prompted by recent cost-of-living increases.

In announcing the medical assistance program, Dowling said lifting the burden of such expenses is crucial to seni citizens.

He also said the provinc government will ask the fe eral government to advan by two months the starti date for the announced i crease in monthly per ch allowances to $20.

Provincial and fedceral go ernments share the cost of t program. The increase scheduled Jan. 1, 1974.

PAN AM HELPS HOOKERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prostitues in five of the world's major cities have been given a little help courtesy of Pan American World Airways.

Tucked away in a tourist guide that Pan Am has been selling for about a year is a card that tells where to meet the ladies of the evening in New York, London, Paris, Rome and Amsterdam.

A Pan Am spokesman said the trust of the card "is not really to get people seduced. The point is that in many areas of the world prostitution is a tourist attraction."

Tasty VD Cure

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Gonorrhea, which strikes more Americans than any disease but the common cold, now can be cured in almost all cases by a glassful of good-tasting medicine.

"Just fill up the bottle with water and the powder at the bottom will dissolve, drink it and you'll be well within 48 hours," says William T. Robinson of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's division of anti-infective drug products.

The new drug is a combination of ampicillin and probenecid. It is now available with a doctor's prescription but quantities are limited.

Previously, the only cure was prolonged periods of taking penicillin pills or a painful series of penicillin shots.

"Patients have been forced to take up to 20 million units of penicillin and even then it was hard to kill all the gonococcus because they've grown so resistant to penicillin," Robinson says.

He noted that this country experienced a similar epidemic after the Second World War and in that case the disease was almost eradicated with penicillin.

"We're hoping that we can eradicate this one, too, and we think we can because we've found probenecid keeps the ampicillin in the body long enough to be effective," Robinson said.

He explained that probenecid works on the kidneys so that the ampicillin is not immediately excreted.

"So far, we've found no evidence of any side effects from using this one-dose combination of ampicillin and probenecid," Ralph Henderson, a physician with the Venereal Disease Branch of the Public Health Service, says.

But he warns that anyone allergic to penicillin should not use the drug, and adds prolonged use of probenecid can cause itching, anemia, blood in the urine or pain in the ribs or kidneys.

Even these side effects can be avoided, he says, if the patient drinks enough other fluids such as water or juices.

He foresees no problem with the oral suspension drug because it is to be released only under a doctor's supervision.

The combination of ampicillin and probenecid was recommended last October by the PHS centre for disease control after conducting tests which showed 90 per cent of the people treated with the drugs were cured.

Although patients in the tests were given the medicine as pills rather than as a drink, Robinson said the results indicate the combination is effective. He added that results of tests done with the oral suspension show similar results.

Caver gropes his way

Like Watergate, No One Knows Where It Leads

LAKE COWICHAN — Cascade is the cave's present name but the cavers who found it are thinking of renaming it Watergate because nobody knows where it might eventually lead.

Cascade-Watergate is in the Lake Cowichan area. Cavers don't like to be overly specific because of the danger of amateurs coming in and getting themselves killed.

The great pleasure of going underground here is that you no longer have to look at the mad-made mess up top.

Caver Paul Griffiths talks about the brief history of the cave and logging, as seen from a caver's perspective.

"Most of these things are plugged with logging debris," he complains. "So our problem is we have to find a way underneath the debris. If this was in virgin timber, these would be beautiful entrances."

Cascade was plugged until around the beginning of May when Paul, on a caving reconnaissance, felt an air current coming out of a hand-hold. "We dug that out and found the cave."

Paul and Ron Frederick, stalwarts of the University of Victoria caving club, went down below with Kelly Powell and Dennis Ford, two other Victoria residents who have fallen under the spell of spielunking.

Laurie is also a below-grounder, renowned for her radar-nose ability to discover caves through a finely-refined sense of smell. Nobody can sniff out limestone formations like Laurie.

"They have a down-to-earth smell," she claims.

On the 45-mile drive from Victoria, Paul has drawn a map so his fellowcavers will know roughly what to expect.

After the entrance there is the Waiting Room, where you try to catch your breath after the first crawl. This is followed by an increasingly difficult obstacle course that includes a double waterfall and a 30-foot waterfall.

But, barring panic in the crawls, Watergate-Cascade is not a particularly dangerous cave. The waterfalls are the worst barriers. Here you have a choice of using a chimneying technique — legs straddled on opposite rock ledges — or simply coming down through the rush of water.

The cavers emerge after a three-hour crawl. And following a short rest they're off and exploring again.

Amid the slash and deadfall, Dennis makes a discovery — a new entry hole. Paul goes down on a rope, discovers there are passages in two directions and lets out a scream of excitement.

There is no time for a full-scale exploration now but the cavers will be back tomorrow to see if this turns out to be their prize discovery.

Wagner Returns to Warsaw

By JAMES NELSON

WARSAW (CP) — The Polish state opera house will mount a German opera this fall—Wagner's Tannhauser—for the first time since the Second World War.

Zdzislaw Sliwinski, director of the opera house, said in an interview it was not lack of appreciation for the German opera repertoire that has prevented performance of German works for almost 30 years.

But the Polish people were so oppressed by the German invasion and occupation, and htd so much Wagner forced upon them in those days of the Second World War, that no audience would have turned out to hear German opera.

Tannhauser will be sung in a Polish translation, in line with the policy of the opera house.

Its practice is to use up-to-date translations of all its works, though occasionally a foreign star will sing a role in his or her own language, or in the original Italian or French, while the rest of the cast sings in Polish.

During this spring's European tour by the National Arts Centre Orchestra of Canada, many of the visiting musicians spent a night off at a performance of Bizet's Carmen in the rebuilt opera house.

It was levelled during the war, except for its stone colonaded facade, which was preserved while the inside of the opera house was rebuilt in modern fashion.

Carmen, the story of a Spanish tobacco factory worker's love for the toreador, Escamillo, and the young officer Don Jose's love for her, was sung in Polish to the original music.

The set was remarkable, both for its size on the cavernous stage and for its conception. It appeared to the Canadians as a middle European impression of Spain, influenced by the hard work philosophy of a people's state.

The Act II Bohemian quarter of Seville was set in the Warsaw production in what might have been a building excavation, and the mountain pass scene is Act III, during which the cards foretell of Carmen's death, was played on and between the wooden trestles of a wrecked railway bridge.

The set, in a way, represented the prodigious effort that went into rebuilding opera in Warsaw after the war.

Sliwinski, who has been director of the opera for 20 years, said the great theatre was only rebuilt in 1965. It now runs around the year except for six weeks in July and August when vacations are taken and the house is closed for refurbishing.

It is one of the biggest in Europe, employing 1,500—450 artists, 450 technicians and 600 administrators and clerks. Included in the total are 50 soloists, 140 musicians, and a ballet corps of 125, serving the 2,000-seat main theatre and a 250-seat studio.

The repertoire runs from the classical to the avant-garde.

One-fifth of the opera's budget comes from ticket sales, and four-fifths is a direct state subsidy. The highest priced ticket is 70 zlotys, equivalent to $2 at the official rate of exchange or $1 on the black market. Prices run down to 20 zlotys, and tickets are half-priced for young people.

MP RAPS MISUSE OF ENGLISH

VANCOUVER (CP) — A New Democratic Party member of parliament says the misuse of language results in confusion, and cynicism on the part of the public.

Grace McInnes (Vancouver-Kingsway) said the public should "look behind the language and see if it's describing reality."

Examples of misuse could be found in all sectors of life, but particularly in the news media, politics and advertising, she told delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Council of Teachers of English.

She accused the media of sensationalism and said the "current sensation" of meat was confusing some women. There were conflicting reports that the problem is because of worldwide shortage or because large quantities of meat must be sold before it goes bad.

She said politicians have deliberately misused language to mislead people, and she criticized the extravangance of language used in some advertising, giving as an example a soup that claimed "it satisfies the soul".

Mrs. MacInnes called for an examination of the real meaning of words such as pacification in Vietnam, which she said actually meant bombing unarmed peasants.

Dictator Returns Democracy to Greece—His Way

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

ATHENS — For the first time since George Papadopoulos and his fellow colonels seized power here six years ago, hard-line regime newspapers are publishing statements by the regime's foes. Greek jails have been emptied of their political prisoners. The authorities are even thinking of lifting the ban on the music of Mikis Theodorakis, the exiled left-wing composer.

Do not be deceived," warns one of the shrewdest diplomats here. "This country is still a dictatorship and Papadopoulos and the few hundred army officers that matter are still very much in control."

But for now at least, it is a dictatorship with a less inhumane face and it is promising to lift even further the heavy hand it holds over Greek life.

In October, Papadopoulos plans to remove from his cabinet all the military men who helped him make his coup, replaciag them with civilians. He has publicly announced as much.

According to those in a position to know, he intends to appoint as prime minister a well-known right-wing politican, Spyros Markezinis. Next year, Papadopoulos, who now styles himself "president," intends to hold elections for a parliament with sharply limited powers.

His hand-picked "constitutional court" will pass on the eligibility of all candidates and political parties. Sources familiar with Papadopoulos' thinking claim he will let anybody run except Communists and right-wing "extremists."

If Greece's first president sticks to his present intentions, he will allow all the parliamentary candidates to hold meetings, distribute literature and even get some time on the government-controlled television and radio.

The Papadopoulos blueprint calls for his weak parliament to be dominated by two parties of his own followers. One a "right-wing" will be led by Markezinis and former colonel Nicholas Makarezos, the president's chief deputy. The other, "left-wing" will be captained by Vyron Stamatopoulos, the regime's ambitious chief spokesman.

To give this show the color of a more open government, Papadopoulos now plans to permit the election of a few political figures from Greece's democratic, pre-coup days. He expects them to break their present unified opposition and pslit into little conservative and liberal groupings.

There is not much question that Papadopoulos can bring about almost any election result he wants. He demonstrated this in the plebiscite here last month that confirmed him as president for the next eight years. His aides produced the desired returns almost at will.

The president had arranged things so that the parliament will have no voice in the three critical areas of internal security, defence and foreign affairs. Its 200 members will include 20 picked by him.

If there are any doubts about what is expected from this new order, the country's new vice president, Odysseus Angelis, cleared them up. In his farewell address to the troops he has led as commander-in-chief, Angelis urged on his countrymen "patriotism, discipline and obedience."

Nevertheless, the regime hopes that all this will make it more acceptable to world opinion and persuade the countries of the Common Market to melt their freeze on Greece's associate membership. At home, Papadopoulos thinks his measures will soften the opposition of those Greeks attached to a genuinely open society.

Even these modest steps towards liberalization are far from secure. Papadopoulos has promised elections in the past reneged. In the words of Panayotis Kanellopoulos, the prime minister ousted by the colonels' 1967 coup:

"I believe it is psychologically and morally impossible for these people to become democratic or liberal."

Papadopoulos could stumble over his very first step.

Some of the ex-colonels have made tidy fortunes in office and are reluctant to leave. One is said to have told Papadopoulos bluntly, "George, we came into this together and we are leaving together."

The president's backers are convinced that the former military men will go quietly on schedule, eased out with comfortable jobs in state agencies. But this remains to be seen.

Papadopoulos' next big test is likely late in the fall. University students, who broke the political ice here last year with big demonstrations for an open society, will be back in school and plan to demonstrate again. Can a man of Papadopoulos' authoritarian temper tolerate visible signs of dissent? Can he dampen down student protests by accommodating their chief demand, restoration of their historic right to elect their own leaders?

Another pitfall lies in the raging inflation here. To back up demands for higher pay, workers in the government-run unions have already begun a slowdown as any traveler who has suffered with Olympic Airways this summer can testify. Can a president Papadopoulos accept this benignly?

Finally, the pliticians of the pre-coup era intend to use every opening to condemn the remnants o fterror here and call for a return of genuine sovreignty to Greek citizens.

How much of this can Papadopoulos and the army take?

There are no simple answers to these questions. Friends of Papadopoulos say he is deeply concerned about his place in history. That he wants to be remembered as the man who cleansed Greece of "political excess' and gave power back to a "reformed" people.

If he does, the regime symbol — a phoenix rising from the ashes — will reflect a reality that is barely evident now. At the very least, Papadopoulos has cut some of the chains holding nine million Greeks. This sort of thing awakens appetites. Putting chains back on again could prove too much even for a man as tough and resourceful as the nation's first president.

HEART TEAM OFF TO YUGOSLAVIA

TORONTO (CP) — A medical team from St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto will leave Oct. 11 to teach open-heart surgery in Hungary and Yugoslavia, the team's head said Thursday.

Dr. Clare Baker, chief of cardio-vascular surgery at St. Michael's, said in an interview the nine-member team will spend two weeks in Europe.

He said some Hungarian doctors visiting Toronto several months ago complained they were encountering problems in performing by-pass graft surgery.

Persons with plugged blood vessels in the heart can be helped dramatically by such surgery in which a piece of vein from the leg is implanted as a detour around a blocked heart artery. Many such operations have been performed successfully in recent years at St. Michael's.

Dr. Baker said the Toronto medical team will operate on three patients in Budapest.

Public Pressure Restores Riviera

By JOHN VINOCUR

NICE, France (AP) — The long, grey concrete sore that has spread down the Riviera may have run its course.

After nearly 10 years in which 20-storey buildings sprouted at the edge of the Mediterranean, blocking out the sky and the sea, court decisions and public pressure have arrested the savaging of a remarkable landscape.

In the space of five months, a civic group claims that about $12 million in building projects have been junked, halted by judicial order or indefinitely suspended.

Among the best examples are administrative court decisions that stopped a half-completed waterfront apartment project at Bormes-les-Mimosas, near Hyeres, and withdrew the building permit that would have authorized planting a 266-unit apartment and marina alongside the old port of St. Raphael.

When a private suit was brought against a builder who wanted to construct a marina at Eze-sur-Mer and run a cable car from it to a group of luxury apartments he planned to graft onto the magnificent medieval building at Eze village, 1,500 feet up a mountain, the government cancelled the construction permit.

Most of the counteroffensive against the concrete explosion is the work of a citizens' group called The Regional Union for the Safeguard of Life, Nature and the Environment.

Pierre Feijoo, the union's general secretary, places the start of the construction boom on the Riviera in the period between 1965 and 1968 when, he said, "you could probably have got a permit to tar over the beach at Cannes for stock car races."

The best moneymaker, the builders soon found, was a combination apartment complex and marina. Some of the biggest, most aggressively ugly projects were built on reclaimed land, waterfront areas which were filled up with soil behind dikes. The price of this operation was about four times less for a promoter than buying land under normal circumstances.

At Cagnes-sur-Mer, the project called Marinna Baie des Anges, which is visible to every air traveller to Nice, plops two immense triangular buildings in a setting where fishermen used to mend their nets.

Once the union began to try to bring some of the builders to court, the battle turned in favor of the conservationists through a favorable interpretation of the French law which makes all coastal land public property to the point inland reached by the highest tide. All the projects built on reclaimed land now fall under jurisprudence that states that the coastal strip is there for "satisfaction of the leisure needs of the citizenry as a group."

The civic group's first suit at Bormes-les-Mimosa established that the coastal land was to be free of construction. Plans to build 360 housing units at Bormes were blocked at 145.

EARLY START to the hard work of life is faced by children in Kashmir. Here, a young girl carries a load of earthenware to market beside her mother. Travel is often possible only in the summer months as avalanches and deep snow often coses the remote mountain valleys from the neighboring villages.

Tourist Condominiums Scar Alpine Slopes

By PAUL HOFMANN
New York Times

INNSBRUCK, Austria — From the smiling lakes near Salzburg to the majestic Engadine Valley in Switzerland, the Alpine scene tends this season to have a building crane in the foreground.

The big thing throughout the vast Alpine arc from Grenoble, France, to the Yugoslave border is not mountain climbing or yodeling but buying into a "residence" (the English word is used everywhere) — a condominium building in mock-Tyrolean style with basement garages, elevators, apartments on three or four floors or even more and a cable hookup with the nearest mountaintop community television antenna.

"Mass tourism and the second-home movement are threatening to create a huge Alpine slum from Munich to Milan," a Swiss official said.

"Rich people from Zurich, Paris, Frankfurt and the big cities in northern Italy want to have their three rooms with a bathroom and terrace and all household appliances right at the edge of some glacier. They are destroying the unique Alpine world."

A Bavarian state geographer, Walter Danz, warned: "If the present building boom in the Alps goes on at the current rate, the last construction gap between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden will be closed in 50 years, and a compact settlement will then exist."

A coalescing Alpine exurbia is already skirting the northern flank of the Tyrolean ranges on a 150-mile front. New roads, hotels and motels, cable railways, ski lifts, outdoor swimming pools for just three or four warm weeks every year and, above all, the craving of well-off West German city dwellers for holiday homes in the mountains are rapidly transforming many once-solitary Alpine sites into an almost urban ambience.

Bulldozers are tearing open the flanks of the sunny Lenzerheide-Valbella defile in the Swiss canton of Grisons to develop the area for mass tourism.

And here, in Innsbruck, the administrative and industrial centre of the Austrian Tyrol, the solemn wall of the northern range has become a backdrop for a jagged new skyline of towers buildings — and more construction cranes.

Everywhere "residence" projects are the big moneymakers for Alpine real-estate developers. Municipalities are less enthusiastic about the second homes for city slickers, because they remain empty most of the year and do not broaden the tax base appreciably.

The building boom in the mountainous core of Europe has also given rise to a "save the Alps" movement that is sweeping across national boundaries.

In the last few months a number of international groups have started discussing problems common to the Alpine countries. The International Press Institute sponsored a conference on cooperation among the Alpine regions here last March with French, Swiss, Italian, West German and Austrian experts participating. The conference heard a violent attack on skiing by a Swiss conservationist, Prof. Fritz Schwarzenbach.

"Skiing is becoming an antisocial sport," he charged. "The local population is being expelled from its villages, which are being transformed into centers of real-estate speculation, fostered by tax relief.

"Disastrous roads are being built at public expense to please contractors of condominium apartments and chair lifts. All this to sell a million pairs of skis a year. We are promoting an absurd sport that causes huge social costs and enormous damage to the territory."

Amid all the debate on the Alpine environment and way of life, some are doing something about it. In a 912-to-110 referendum vote, the citizens of Coldrerio and Novazzano, two Swiss towns, have rejected a plan to create a Disneyland-type holiday and fun center — with an Indian village and a Western saloon — on their territory.

Soviet Cash, Technique Builds Dam in Syria

By The Associated Press

The Middle East's largest hydroelectrical project after the Aswan High Dam on the Nile has been inaugurated in Syria. Like its egyptian counterpart, the new dam was built with Soviet financial and technical aid.

In a recent ceremony at Medinat Al Thawra, tons of cement blocks, released when Syrian President Hafej Al-Assad pushed a button, tumbled into the waters of the Euphrates and stopped the flow of that river.

Assad paid tribute to the thousand Soviet engineers and technicians who have worked on the project for four years with 11,000 Syrian technicians and laborers.

With the closing of the river waters, a reservoir began filling up behind the dam which rises 200 feet above the riverbed. The reservoir will form a lake stretching 50 miles upstream and storing 12 billion cubic yards of water.

This vast store of water will eventually permit irrigation of more than 1.5 million acres of land that have not been cultivated in the semi-arid Syrian plain.

On one end of the dam, protected by cement blocks, is a vast powerhouse where eight turbines will be installed to produce 800,000 kilowatts of electricity.

This is expected to double Syria's present electric-power output. It will provide energy for industrial plants from Aleppo which is 95 miles northwest of the dam to the Syrian capital of Damascus.

Syrian authorities are hopeful that by damming the Euphrates and providing flood control throughout the valley, they will eventually be able to double the country's average under irrigation.

The Euphrates which rises in the mountains of western Turkey, flows through Syria where it represents 80 per cent of the country's water resources. The river continues on to Iraq where it joins the Tigris River before emptying into the Persian Gulf.

Both Turkey and Iran are constructing dams which will contribute to harnessing the turbulent waters of the Euphrates. Water flows from the river vary from 200 cubic yards a second in the dry season to 6,000 cubic yards in the winter floods.

THE PROJECT COST $300 MILLION

The dam, second biggest in the Middle East, extends three miles across the Euphrates River in northeastern Syria. The reservoir forming behind the dam will stretch 50 miles and store 12 billion cubic yards of water for irrigation.

Hafez al-Assad

10-Year Rape Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP)—An American who previously had been barred from Canada has been sentenced to 10 years for rape. Stephen Trigg of Seattle, who also received three three-year concurrent sentences for gross indecency, robbery and possession of a dangerous weapon, tied a 19-year-old girl up in his apartment and forced her to perform sex acts with a straight razor at her throat.

The girl's ordeal April 19 lasted four hours.

Judge Patricia Proudfoot told Trigg in provincial court that his act was beyond description. She said the victim would be scarred for years, possibly for life.

Tourists Jailed For Shoplifting

LONDON (CP) — Scores of foreign tourists, most of them well-heeled, are being given jail sentences instead of the traditional fines in a continuing crackdown on rampant shoplifting in fashionable stores.

The sentences have meant hardship for some, particularly those travelling with children and others who have to give up their places in prepaid package tours to serve their terms.

Twenty-one persons appeared on the charge Thursday before Marlborough Street Court magistrates, within whose jurisdiction are the tempting counters of busy Oxford and Regent Streets.

The Court campaign started last week after several magistrates said large fines had made no apparent dent in what one described as "an almost daily procession" of foreign shoppers through the courts.

The latest batch included an Italian woman whose millionaire son shouted to her to plead guilty as she entered the dock.

Maria Falcioni, 56 and a diabetic, was charged with stealing goods worth about $67.50 while shopping with her chauffeur.

She was one of the few to escape jail, the magistrate saying that "the only thing that saves you is your age and condition."

A Canadian consular spokesman said no Canadians had been sentenced on such charges this year.

Foreign Ownership Question Plagues French Vineyards

Manchester Guardian

PARIS — Frenchmen are worried about the increasing amount of farmland, particularly vineyards, being bought by foreigners.

The chairman of the Communist Party's parliamentary group has tabled a question in the national assembly asking Pierre Messmer, the prime minister, whether he does not consider such purchases contrary to the national interest, and what steps he proposes to take.

Jacques Chirac, minister of agriculture, has just advised one of the biggest Bordeaux wine exporting companies not to sell out to a British group, at least until it has tried to find a French purchaser.

Robert Ballanger, the Communist deputy, claimed that thousands of acres of vines in the major wine-producing areas of France, including Burgundy, Bordeaux, Beaujolais and the Loire, had been sold to or passed under the control of foreign companies — mainly British, American, German, and, more ecently, Japanese. Twenty-eight vineyards in the Bordeaux area currently are foreign-owned.

Ballanger added that foreign capital had penetrated agricultural and food industries, with the British particularly active since their entry into the Common Market. Foreign speculators had also been buying up thousands of acres in tourist areas, Ballanger said.

In Alsace, he said, Germans and Swiss had bought between 33 and 45 per cent of all land offered for sale last year. France is far less populated than other European countries, and her land, particularly in the more remote parts, is substantially cheaper.

Ballanger's objections were twofold. First, the purchase of agricultural land by foreigners would lead to land speculation and to a steep rise in land prices (indeed, this has already begun). This would be hard on French farmers, particularly young ones, who wanted to expand their holdings.

Second, unless measures were taken to stop foreign acquisition of French vineyards, the Frenchman "will be deprived of one of the most prestigious products of our country."

The Bordeaux wine exporting firm sought by a British group, De Luze, was apparently willing to sell, but first permission had to be obtained from the French ministry of agriculture. The ministry insists that its suggested "French solution" does not amount to a veto of the sale, only the expression of a wish.

But there is speculation in the Bordeaux area that the government may be thinking of exerting its powers to prevent or limit such sales.

GARDENING
jack beastall

Cabbage, in its different forms, seems to be as difficult to grow by some home gardeners as onions are by others. Yet the basics for success are minimal. Any good book on vegetable growing plus a fairly recent issue of a comprehensive seed catalogue will provide all the information we need.

The greatest number of complaints come from gardeners who purchase started plants. Their purchase rarely produces the kind of plant they consider to be a cabbage.

Until these gardeners become more specific when buying, they will continue to receive what the salesclerk think is a cabbage, or whatve rhappened to be in stock at the moment.

We have yet to hear of the man who asks the supermarket clerk for $5 worth of food and willingly accepts the clerk's choice, yet every year we hear gardeners asking for a dozen cabbage plants without specifying variety, type, or the time they wish them ready for use.

The word "cabbage" is loosely used to cover any of the leaf type brassicas, which include cauliflower, broccoli, kale, Brussels sprouts as well as the loose leaf and solid-head types.

Each gardener seems to have a mental picture of a definite plant when he uses the word, which makes it difficult to communicate with a gardener whose picture is not the same.

There are eight pages under the heading "cabbage" in the catalogue of a seed firm that supplies gardeners, commercial market gardens, and farms. Each variety of the different types is suited to a particular climate or soil, or is specially bred to some commercial requirements.

Early cabbage grow in the cool days of spring and mature rapidly as summer warmth increases. Mid-season kinds need warmer soil to start and summer heat to mature, and are ready for use in late summer and early fall.

Late varieties and storage types need summer heat to start and cooler days for maturing. Winter and spring types are sown during mid and late summer, remaining in the soil over winter.

Although found as purchased plants in many gardens, the storage types are of little interest to the average gardener. The heads are harvested in fall, placed in controlled storage, and sold in stores over winter and early spring. Excellent for coleslaw after three months storage because they do not bleed when cut.

Even a rough grouping such as this indicates the need for selecting a specific type and a variety within that type that will suit the family's requirements.

Since a packet of cabbage seed will store from four to six years the home gardener is ahead to grow his own plants of the kind he prefers.

Among the true cabbage some form loose heads (leaf cabbage) others tight ball-heads. The leaf cabbage will never produce a solid head, and the solid head types can range from six to twelve inches in diameter according to variety.

Brussels sprouts form miniature two-inch heads (buttons) at each leaf axil. Sprouts are a long season crop, the early indoor sowings providing the sprouts for Christmas, and the first outdoor sowings are ready in February.

Cauliflower produces a six to eight inch whitish colored head. It needs carefully prepared soil with considerably more humus than for cabbage, and a position not exposed to cold drafts which could cause check in growth.

Broccoli cover two distince types of plants. Straight broccoli produces a small whitish head similar to cauliflower and a few smaller heads after the first has been cut. This type is not popular here although many have bought plants expecting to have sprouting broccoli.

Italian broccoli is the local favorite, either the green-sprouting or the purple sprouting. The part eaten is the cluster of green or purple flower buds which forms at the end of every shoot. The newer "perennial" types remain over winter and produce in early spring.

Savoy cabbage is grown for late fall and early winter use, but generally considered too large for the average family today.

Kale remains in the soil over winter. Only the leaves are used, the plant continuing to produce more laves until it goes to seed in spring. It is not damaged by cold and leaves can be gathered from under a foot of snow.

All brassicas are adverse to an acid soil, therefore will not tolerate peat-moss nor acid type fertilizers. Hydrated lime is necessary in the soil mixture for seed germination, and a small handful should be mixed with the soil in each planting hole.

Failures with brassicas are generally due to planting in a loose soil. The soil must be tight around the roots in order to make strong plants and solid heads.

It is best to prepare the soil well for some other crop, such as early peas. The young plants are then set into the walks between the pea rows where the soil has been trodden firm as the peas were picked. Any well trodden walk in the vegetable garden is perfect without further cultivation.

After the plants are set the soil is rammed tight over the roots with the handle of the trowel or heel of the boot. A cabbage mat, illustrated in an earlier column, is placed on the soil around the stem to keep the cabbage root-maggot fly from laying its eggs.

In exposed gardens all brassicas should be staked and tied to prevent wind rocking and the consequent breakage and loosening of the roots.

Grey aphides, and eggs of the cabbage butterfly, are eaily destroyed with thumb and finger if the plants are regularly checked. A serious infestation indicates the gardener has been sleeping on the job.

The importance of brassicas in the human diet is indicated by their vitamin content. Kale is an excellent source of vitamins A, B2, and C and a good source of B1. Broccoli and cabbage are excellent in C, good in B's, and fair in A. Brussels sprouts are similar but lower in vitamin C.

Some have given up eating cabbage because it "disagrees" with them. It is of more than passing interest to note how many of these people can enjoy a lightly cooked fresh cabbage, cut a few minutes before going into the pot, without any discomfort.

WEEK'S WORK

Bedding annuals such as snapdragons, African marigolds, and others with noticeable seedpods forming should have faded flowers constantly removed to prolong blooming. Edging plants like white alyssum, ageratum can have old flowers carefully cut back. Petunias rarely need this; they continue blooming all summer.

Heathers coming into bloom now, and those making buds for winter should be sprayed with water frequently in dry weather. Irish Heath (Dabeocia) needs water at roots too to prolong summer bloom.

Cut off the ends of old flowers when they fade.

If you can get them, the fall crocuses and the colchicums should be planted this week for blooms this fall.

Pick tomatoes as they ripen, and have covers to throw over the plants some night when frost is forecast for early morning. Squash plants are also vulnerable, but protection for a few nights often extends the growing season for several weeks.

CMHC's New Director Aims for Low Costs

TORONTO (CP) — When June Rowlands, Toronto mother of five, got tired of the foibles of her upper-middle-class gridge club. She discovered the major involvement of her life — working on housing for low-income families.

In a recent interview, she welcomed her appointment as the newest director of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., Ottawa, as a great opportunity to implement her strong convictions about public housing.

Mrs. Rowlands said she is enthusiastic about the CMHC announcement earlier this week of a 10-point program to broaden opportunities for home ownership and renovation.

"The plain truth is that home ownership is in decline," she said. "We have to find ways to help people — particularly low-income people — build equity in their homes."

She said she hopes the new CMHC legislation marks the beginning of a movement by public agencies at all levels toward reversing the trend that has reduced home ownership by eight per cent in Metropolitan Toronto in the last five years.

"New solutions are needed. The old, set approaches have done nothing but reduce the number of people who can look forward to home ownership. Social housing is a field full of myths and misconceptions."

Mrs. Rowlands said her experience on the Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto has taught her that poor families often face two choices — whether to eat properly or keep a decent roof over their heads.

Low-income families are caught in a trap created, perhaps unnoticed, by the economics of society, she said.

Mrs. Rowlands, who began her three-year CMHC term in July, said she hopes to see 50 per cent of public housing made available for sale through assistance with down payment and subsidies on mortgage payments.

What she would really like to hear, she said, is an announcement from Ontario politicians supporting the federal initiatives and supplementing CMHC mortgage subsidy plans with a complementary program.

Was There Really a Plot To Assassinate Nixon?

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The alleged assassination plot that led the U.S. Secret Service to urge President Nixon to cancel his New Orleans motorcade focused on a meeting, a week before Nixon's arrival, of six black men who reportedly discussed the desirability of "wasting" Nixon, according to law enforcement sources.

But several officials now agree that the government does not, at present, have enough evidence to charge any of them.

During the week between the meeting and Nixon's scheduled visit, a number of occurrences, which now appear to be unrelated to the blacks' meeting, created confusion, which one source described as stemming from "trying to make a statue of at least five unrelated parts."

Sources described the blacks at the meeting variously as "Panthers," "remnants of the Black Panthers" and "black militants." One of the group is described by federal agents as a "known hitter — a bad actor known to carry guns."

Also in the group was a man described as a "plant" — a police informant. None of the suspects has been identified by name.

The day after the first meeting, the informant and two of the six met again. This time, according to reports, the "hitter" was in possession of a rifle, was flashing a roll of bills and was boastfully implying that he had been paid to kill the president of the United States.

Precisely which law enforcement group the informant way reporting to is not clear. The fact is that he reported and, shortly afterward, the Secret Service, charged with presidential security, was on the case along with the New Orleans police department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

According to New Orleans police department sources, the Secret Service asked them to arrest the suspects and "keep them in the icebox until Nixon leaves town."

New Orleans police superintendent Clarence Giarusso is said to have demurred on the ground that there was no cause for action. If the Secret Service wanted the men arrested, Giarusso is said to have contended, let the Secret Service arrest the men themselves. There was a compromise: a surveillance was ordered on the suspects.

Federal sources suggest that the suspects slipped from view at this point; local police sources suggest that the suspects were and are being watched.

The authorities were unable to resolve the nature of charges that could be made against the suspects and none have been made so far.

The Secret Service, for reasons on which it declines to elaborate, did not exercise its unique "arrest authority" which enables detention, without warrant, of persons considered an immediate threat to the life of the president.

Into this whole jurisdictional eddy, shortly before the arrival of the presidential party, were thrown these additional elements:

—The Secret Service issued an order to arrest former New Orleans policeman Edwin Gaudet, a man of known erratic behavior who had tossed a burning flag at the presidential car during an earlier Nixon visit and had been heard to say the president should be killed. Gaudet was not at his last known address. He was marked a fugitive and tracked to a commune in New Mexico, where he and his wife were living. He took off and a posse chased him into the hills. Reports came back that he either was or was not armed and had or had not exchanged fire with the posse.

—Superintendent Giarusso's official police car was stolen on the night before the president arrived. It was soon recovered, but not before being tentatively included in a speculative assassination plot.

—A uniform belonging to a New Orleans policeman also was stolen on the same night.

—Shortly before the Nixon arrival, a group of white hoodlums with assorted police records were said to be meeting at a New Orleans apartment project. Police raided the location but found it vacant. Reports that these men had fled became confused with speculation that the suspected assassination plotters had dropped from sight. As far as can be determined, the white hoodlums had nothing whatever to do with plotting presidential assassination.

On the weight of all these disparate actions, the Secret Service strongly urged the president to cancel a planned motor procession along Canal Street en route to the Rivergate Auditorium where he was to speak.

The Nixon party arrived, was sped into town along an alternate route; the president addressed Veterans of Foreign Wars and departed for San Clemente, all without incident.

Later this week, Gaudet, who appears to have had no connection whatever with the Panther group, walked in from the hills and surrendered to officers on charges of threatening the life of the president of the United States.

Friday, the charges were dropped, but Gaudet is still being held in an Albuquerque jail on state charges of assaulting a police officer during arrest.

A Secret Service press spokesman said of the alleged Panther suspects that "if it were known where they were, we'd grab them," but he refused to say specifically that the men were missing. He said that they were "wanted in connection with a conspiracy plot" but that there is no warrant out for their arrest.

"Briefly," said a justice department official "we're not satisfied with what we've got."

To further muddy the situation, the New Orleans police officials who were said to be heading the investigation and/or surveillance efforts locally were reported at home Thursday night looking very relaxed and off-duty.

Associated Press reported from New Orleans Thursday night of a 10,000 dollar "contract" on the president's life and a plot to blow up the presidential car with hand grenade.

Asked to comment on this report, one official shrugged: "If we had solid information like that, we would have made an arrest, wouldn't we?"

Bombs Found

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Police found more than six bombs planted in doorways of office and apartment buildings in Belgrade last week, informed sources said Thursday. Only one of the bombs exploded, resulting in minor damage. Police said they believed the bombs were planted by terrorists belonging to anti-Yugoslav organizations outside the country.

BOAT FREEZE NOT BAN

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Don Jamieson, minister of regional economic expansion, said Thursday it was never the intention of the federal government to stop boat building when a three-month freeze was clamped on federal funds available for fishing boat construction.

Jamieson said the policy was designed to make a survey of the needs for small fishing craft.

He said provoncial governments have been requested to provide information about how many applications are on hand for fishing boat subsidies, how many boats are under construction and the number of boats about to be built.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis announced the freeze on subsidies to allow the department to undertake a review of current Atlantic fishing fleet development programs and to insure the catch capacity does not exceed fish resources.

Switch Blamed for Bombs

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States Air Force investigators Friday blamed the accidental B-52 bombing of a Cambodian village on the radar navigator's failure to turn on a key switch in the aiming computer.

Announcing results of the investigation of the bombing which killed and wounded more than 400 Cambodians at Neak Luong on Aug. 6, Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said air force commanders "are in the process of taking corrective and disciplinary action."

He declined to identify the radar navigator or other members of the B-52 bomber crew which dropped its load about 7½ miles away from its target.

"The investigation has determined that the bombs from a single B-52 impacted in the Neak Luong area," Friedheim said.

"This error was caused by the radar-navigator failing to active his offset switch in the bombing navigation computer. This resulted in the aircraft actually bombing the offset aiming point rather than the intended target."

Saturday Movies

The Magician (xx), on 5 at 8. A 1973 pilot preview of a new fall series starring Bill Bixby (Eddie's Father) as a sleight-of-hand artist who uses his skills to help people in trouble. Kim Hunter and Barry Sullivan co-star.

Thank Your Lucky Stars (xx), on 13 at 8. A 1943 musical comedy containing all the Warner Brother stars of that year including Eddie Cantor in a dual role—as himself, and as a guide in the film colony who aspires to be a movie star. Others in the cast include Dinah Shore and Humphrey Bogart.

The Magus (xxx), on 8 at 9. Anthony Quinn, Michael Caine and Candice Bergen star in this 1968 film adaptation of John Fowles bizarre novel. It's an enigmatic tale about a young Englishman who comes to the Greek islands to teach school and forget an unhappy love affair and is swept up into an exotic nightmare that blends reality with illusion.

Summer Interlude (xxx), on 9 at 9. Bergman's lyrical tragedy, filmed in Sweden in 1950, about an ill-fated love affair between a young ballerina (Maj-Britt Nilsson) and a youthful shy student (Berger Masten).

Guns of Darkness (xx), on 11 at 9. David Niven and Leslie Caron portray a businessman and his wife caught in the turmoil of a South American revolution in this British-made 1962 drama. James Robertson Justice and David Opatoshu co-star.

Chase (xx), on 5 at 9:30. A 1973 pilot film for a new crime drama series produced and directed by Jack Webb, focusing on undercover detectives assigned only the toughest beats of the Los Angeles Police Department.

Suddenly Single (xx), on 6 at 9:30. Hal Holbrook and Barbara Rush star in this made-for-TV 1971 comedy-drama about a just-divorced man trying out a swinging new life style.

Chubasco (xx), on 7 at 11:30. A 1968 drama about the San Diego tuna fishing fleets of a wayward youth who chooses working on the boats as an alternative to jail. Cast Richard Egan and Susan includes Christopher Jones, Richard Egan and Susan Strasberg.

To Sir, With Love (xxxx), on 8 at 11:30. Sidney Poitier is excellent in this good-humored and touching 1967 story about an idealistic ex-engineer and his experiences in teaching a group of rambunctious high school students from the slums of London's East End.

The Golden Treasure (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Primarily a children's adventure, this 1961 French-made movie stars Tintin and Milou and is all about a retired sailor who returns to the sea to hunt for buried treasure.

It Came from Beneath the Sea (x), on 13 at 11:30. Routine science-fiction.

Big Carnival (xxxx), on 2 at 11:40. A superbly-made and well-acted tale that tells a grim story of a down-on-his-luck big city reporter stuck in the sticks who capitalizes on a mining disaster story to ride himself back to the big time. Filmed in 1951 and starring Kirk Douglas and Jan Sterling.

Mister Moses (xx), on 4 at 11:45. The plot and the cast (Robert Mitchum and Carroll Baker) take a back seat to the glorious on-location African scenery in this 1955 adventure tale about gem smuggling and a trek across the desert.

Bedazzled (xxx), on 5 at 12:30. A delightful 1967 British-made comedy based on the Faustian legend of the seven deadly sins, starring Peter Cook, Dudley Moore, Raquel Welch and Eleanor Bron.

The Bamboo Saucer (xx), on 13 at 1. Dan Duryea, John Ericson and Lois Nettleton star in this 1968 sci-fi tale about the U.S. and Russia investigating a downed saucer in Red China.

Saturday Specials

Tribute to George Gershwin, on 9 at 7. A 75th birthday salute to composer George Gershwin by the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus. (90 mins.)

Farewell to Doc, on 7 at 7:30. A documentary profile of the 42-year career of Lauren "Doc" Donaldson who is with the fisheries department of the University of Washington.

Model of the Year, on 7 and 12 at 10. Twenty-four aspiring models vie for a contract worth $25,000 in this annual event. Cybill Shepherd, who won this title in 1968 and went on to a film career, crowns this year's winner. Hugh O'Brian and Rona Barrett are co-hosts and guest performers include the Supremes. (90 mins.)

World University Games, on 5 at 11:30. From Moscow, highlights of the swimming, diving and track and field events. (60 mins.)

Sunday Movies

Apache Drums (x), on 13 at 10. Routine 1951 western starring Stephen McNally and Coleen Gray.

Untamed Frontier (xxx), on 13 at 11:30. A better-than-average 1952 western set in Texas during the time of the range wars; starring Joseph Cotten, Shelley Winters and Scott Brady.

Gunsmoke (x), on 13 at 1. A 1953 Audie Murphy western.

My Little Chickadee (xxxx), on 13 at 2:30. The W.C. Fields-May West combination was one of the funniest ever and this 1940 film is a permanent reminder. Recommended!

The Sword of Ali Baba (x), on 7 at 4. Mediocre 1964 adventure.

Chain Lightning (xx), on 13 at 4. Excellent aerial photography highlights this otherwise routine 1950 drama about new safety devices on airplanes starring Humphrey Bogart and Eleanor Parker.

Escape from Red Rock (x), on 11 at 4:30. Brian Donlevy and Gary Murray star in this 1958 western.

The Inn of the Sixth Happiness (xxxx), on 11 at 6. A well-made and superbly acted 1958 drama about a missionary woman in China and her attempts to lead some children to safety on a perilous trek through enemy territory. Excellent cast with Ingrid Bergman, Robert Donat and Curt Jurgens.

Kings Go Forth, (xx), on 12 at 9. A 1958 drama mixing Second World War action and romance starring Frank Sinatra, Tony Curtis and Natalie Wood.

To Sir, With Love (xxxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See Saturday, 11:30 p.m. on Channel 8 for details.)

The Sound and the Fury (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. An excellent cast (Yul Brynner, Joanne Woodward, Stuart Whitman and Ethel Waters) highlights this 1959 film adaptation of William Faulkner's novel of the decadent South. It's about a young woman trying to find a life of her own away from the tyrannical rule of her uncle.

Three Bites of the Apple (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. An English bus tour guide wins a fortune gambling and becomes prey to a wily and beautiful Italian adventuress in this 1967 comedy starring David McCallum, Sylvia Koscina and Tammy Grimes.

The Princess Comes Across (xxx), on 2 at 11:35. An amusing 1933 mystery-comedy about the adventures of a bogus princess aboard a luxury liner starring Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray.

Sunday Specials

James George Leaves India, on 2 and 6 at 10. A profile of veteran diplomat James George focusing on his final eight weeks in India as the Canadian High Commissioner. (60 mins.)

Harold Robbins, on 8 at 10. A profile of author Harold Robbins whose novels, including The Adventurers, The Carperbaggers and The Inheritors (his latest), have sold close to 100 million copies. (60 mins.)

IN ONE OF THE LAST ROLES of his long career, American character actor Ed Begley starred in a CBC-TV drama, Who's the Fat Cat? to be seen this Sunday, August 26 at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

CBC-AM-FM Radio Highlights

Saturday

August 25

8:00 (FM) The Entertainers — Today: An interview with and the music of blues singer Lou Rawls; another memory music box with words by Doug Lennox and music by Heather Conkie, a nostalgic look at childhood and love; an interview with and music specially recorded for the program by Quebec fiddler Ti-Jean Carnignan; singer Cleo Laine and John Dankworth and Ensemble in a live concert from the Wavendon Festivbal, England, entitled, Ain't We Got Fun, music of the 20's and 30's.

8:03 (AM) CBC Stage — "The Farm Show", by Paul Thompson, a radio version of the successful production at Toronto's theatre Passe Muraille. It's an appreciation of rural communal life drawn directly from the sojourn of Thompson, his wife, actress Anne Anglin, and four other actors near Clinton, Ontario during a six-week period in the summer of 1972. In the cast are Anne Anglin, Fina MacDonnell, Janet Amos, Miles Potter and David Fox.

10:03 (AM) Anthology — The Way It Was in the Summer of '31, a fictional memoir by Sam Roddan; a selection of new poetry by various writers.

10:03 (FM) Remember When? — 1934 — The year the Americans devalued the dollar, John Dillinger was shot to death, Donald Duck made his debut in the movies, Mitch Hepburn became Premier of Ontario and the big entertainment stars included Russ Colombo, Bing Crosby, Rudy Vallee, Shirley Temple, Grace Moore, Ethel Merman and Jane Froman. Songs of the year included You and the Moon; Stay As Sweet As You Are; Cocktails for Two; and On the Good Ship Lollipop and the program features the original recordings of these and more memorable hits from the year.

Sunday

12:05 (FM) BBC Concert — Part 1 — From the 1st Commonwealth Arts Festival: Sydney Symphony Orchestra conducted by Joseph Post: Symphony No. 99 in E flat (Haydn). Part II — Music for Chorus and Organ: Martin Neary, organ; John Marson, harp; BBC Chorus conducted by Peter Gellhorn: Two pieces for Organ, and Otcenas (The Lord's Prayer) for chorus, organ and harp, both by Janacek. Part III — From the 78th season Henry Wood Promenade Concerts: Andre Watts, piano: Masonic Funeral Music, K.477 (Mozart); Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major (Brahms).

4:30 (FM) Studio '73 — "The Visitors", by Chris Johnson, directed in Toronto by Jean Bartels. It tells what happens when a couple of conniving railway bums intrude on and threaten the peaceful life of two outcasts. The cast features Eric House, David Hughes, Richard Davidson, and Rex Hagon. Special music is composed and conducted by Ricky Hyslop.

5:00 (FM) Mosiac — A summer series from Winnipeg which samples the music of some of the nationalities making up the Canadian mosaic, with songs and dances arranged for chorus and orchestra. Host: Mary Nowell Birt. Today: Jewish music performed by the chorus of Rosh Pina Synagogue with orchestra conducted by Richard Seaborn. Soloists include chorus master Miriam Breitman, Candice Cohen and Cantor Judah Smolack. Program includes songs from the Hebrew liturgy — Hashkiveinu, and Kiddush; Hashanah and Yom Kippur; Sirati, songs sung on Rosh the boat of life floating over the waves of time; and four Jewish dances.

5:03 (AM) Rockworks — Host, as of this date, is Keith Hampshire, a former disc jockey turned singer whose first album is titled, The First Cut. Hampshire has also done a lot of revue work, on stage, and appears periodically on the summer series, That's The Way It Goes on CBC radio.

5:27 (FM) Identities — A program about Canada's cultural minorities, hosted by Lubmyr Mikitiuk. Today: "Kosher Meat and All That"; Shevchenko Dance Ensemble; and "Ethnic Diseases".

7:03 (FM) Opera Theatre — Commentator: Don McGill. An Evening of Spanish Zarzuela: Highlights from several zarzuelas, including El Barberillo de Lavapies (Barbieri); Gigantes y Cabezudos (Caballero); and La Verbena de la Paloma (Breton).

7:03 (AM) The Entertainers — (See Saturday, 8:00 p.m. (FM) for program details.)

11:03 (AM) Quebec Now — The language issue in Quebec: No longer is this dispute between English and French, but rather which French — joual or 'real French'. Michel Garneau, Jean-Claude Germain and Raoul Dugay talk to Judith Walle with the joual point of view. A humorous, tongue-in-cheek piece that pleads for sanity on the language issue in Quebec. Gretta Chambers reviews the joual issue in Quebec literature.

Rising Cost of Living Swells the Picket Lines

By ROBERT BENTLEY
Canadian Press
Staff Writer

Soft drink salesmen, garbage collectors and mushroom processors are a diverse bunch but all have one thing in common — somewhere in Canada, they're all on strike.

They are not alone.

Bartenders, steelworkers, retail clerks, upholsters, woodworkers, power plant employees, telephone workers —you name them and chances are that somewhere across the country some are on picket duty.

A survey by The Canadian Press showed 54 strikes in progress in Canada Thursday involving almost 16,000 workers.

In addition, 56,000 non-operating railway employees switched from rotating strikes to a national walkout Thursday and 1,300 machinists remain locked in dispute with CP Air across the country.

Some of the strikers have been out a long time, such as 47 salesmen and assistant salesmen for a soft drinks firm in Quebec who went on strike in January, 1972. In some cases the strikers number only a handful, as with 12 county power board workers in Nova Scotia.

As the cost of living climbs, wages, predictably, are at the root of the contract haggling. Coast to coast, unions are demanding deals to keep pace with rising costs—sometimes seeking cost-of-living clauses — while the besieged companies counter that they are hurt by increased costs just as much as their employees.

Reports by region, excluding the national rail and CP Air strikes:

With 27 strikes in progress involving more than 7,500 workers, Ontario is the province most embattled on the labor front.

The pulp and paper industry in particular is hard hit. About 1,500 employees of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Co. plants in Fort Frances and Kenora have been out since early July, closing the plants and seeking a nine-per-cent wage increase over two years. The machinists, electricians and engineers, members of three unions, turned down the company's last offer of a six-per-cent wage increase over three years.

On Aug. 3, 380 workers went on strike at the Canadian International Paper Co. plant at Hawkesbury in the extreme east of the province in the Ottawa Valley.

The company's other mills at La Tuque, Trois-Rivieres and Gatineau, Que., and Dalhousie, N.B., have been strikebound since late July with wages and length of contract at issue.

The walkouts have contributed to newsprint shortages in Canala and the United States.

Four lumber companies at Hearst in Northern Ontario have been closed by a sawmill workers' strike since July 16. And 500 workers were laid off Aug. 17 for 72 hours at the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. at Kapuskasing, also in Northern Ontario, because of a shortage of box cars created by the then rotating rail strikes. The company supplies the New York Times and Washington Post, among others.

In the south of the province, the biggest stink—literally—has been raised by the strike of garbagemen in Hamilton, now in its seventh week. As the garbage piled up, 600 inside civic workers walked out July 30.

The strikers are members of two locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and bargaining now has boiled down to a single issue —a cost-of-living allowance. Said Charlie Murray, president of Local 67 which represents the inside workers:

"Bargaining has been far tougher this year because of the upward spiralling cost of living. Costs have risen beyond all expectations since last August and both management and unions are afraid because neither know just where and when this is all going to end."

Other strikes in Ontario each involving more than 300 workers include machinists, steelworkers and auto workers.

QUEBEC

Among the province's 10 strikes is one by 315 workers at the mushroom processing plant of Slack Bros. Ltd., in Waterloo, which produces about 40 per cent of Canada's mushrooms. The plant, 50 miles southeast of Montreal, has been shut for three months as union and company representatives remain deadlocked over wages, hours and conditions of work.

Forty-seven salesmen and assistant salesmen have been on strike at Seven-Up Ltd. in Quebec City since January, 1972, with no negotiations held since last November. Wages, and the company attempt to remove from collective agreement a clause forbidding subcontracting, are in dispute.

About 2,200 paperworkers are out at two Price Co. Ltd., plants at Alma and Kenogami and 50 unionized employees at a Jonquiere radio and TV station have been locked out since January following a sit-in to protest work schedules.

Twenty-four members of the National Federation of Service Workers have been out since March, 1972, at a home for the aged in Quebec City. They are seeking their first collective agreement to put salaries on a par with similar private institutions. The management, the Dominican Sisters of Charity, say they can't afford the increase and will rehire only 14 of the strikers.

Among seven strikes are those involving 400 steelworkers at Weiser Lock Co., Vancouver, 120 members of the Retail Clerks Union at Shoppers Drug Mart stores, 260 woodworkers against two separately owned mills, 310 pulp and paper workers against the provincial government-owned Canadian Cellulose Ltd. at Castlegar, and more pulp and paper workers against a chemical company at Nanaimo. There is also a strike against a telephone company.

Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America, said the union is prepared to keep shut for five years the Red Band shingle mill of MacMillan Bloedel, strikebound since June 19, 1972, in a union quest for shorter work hours and an end to the piecerate system.

The only strike in Manitoba is by 53 upholsterers against Acme Bedding and Furniture Co. of Winnipeg. They have been off since July 6 seeking a 22-per-cent wage increase over 30 months against a company offer of 11 per cent.

Saskatchewan has no strikes and Alberta has just one—at the Royal Canadian Legion's Strathcona branch in Edmonton which has led to members often carrying their own drinks from the bar.

About 24 full-and part-time bartenders and waitresses went on strike March 15 asking for an increase of about 10 to 15 cents an hour on wages of $2.45 an hour for waitresses and slightly more than $3 for bartenders. The legion wants to terminate the closed-shop clause of their contract and is continuing with non-union personnel.

NEWFOUNDLAND

About 1,200 people are involved in four strikes.

Premier Frank Moores has asked the American Smelting and Refining Co. of Buchans to bring in someone from its New York office to resume negotiations with 550 workers on strike since March 15.

The workers seek implementation of an industrial inquiry report—rejected by the company—that recommended increases of between 58 and 69 cents an hour in a two-year agreement. Before the strike they earned $2.80 to $3.48 an hour.

At Corner Brook, 325 non-professional hospital employees with a lowest wage of $55 a week, and on strike since Aug. 8, are seeking a $25-across-the-board weekly raise, and another 225 non-professional hospital workers went out Aug. 15 in St. John's, seeking unspecified higher wages after rejecting an offer the government said ranged from 16.5 per cent to 17 per cent in increases over two years.

At Memorial University, St. John's, about 100 security and maintenance people have been on strike for two weeks after rejecting a conciliation board recommendation for 12-per-cent increases. A union spokesman said they want "substantial" raises.

MARITIME PROVINCES

No strikes are reported in Prince Edward Island.

There is one in New Brunswick—at the Canadian International Paper Co. plant at Dalhousie, involving 1,200 people— and three in Nova Scotia.

Twelve employees of Digby County power board went out Aug. 20 for higher wages, 123 workers at the Canadian General Electric (CGE) heavy water plant have been out since June 21 while an industrial inquiry commission looks into the matter, and 300 Halifax-area electricians went on strike July 10 in a wage dispute with the Nova Scotia Construction Association.

In the CGE dispute, the company offered a 38-cent-an-hour increase effective June 1, 1973, another 30 cents next Feb. 1 and a 7½-per-cent increase Sept. 29, 1974. The unions want a one-year contract and a $1-an-hour increase, cost-of-living clause, safety clauses and fringe benefits.

Premier Gerald Regan and Labor Minister Scott MacNutt have been involved in the electricians' strike, in which the union has not disclosed demands.

THIRST FOR OIL SPARK FOR WAR

EDMONTON (CP) — The oil-rich Middle East will pose the greatest threat to world peace in this decade, says Dr. Norman Alcock, founder of the Canadian Peace Research Institute.

In a speech to the United Nations Association of Edmonton Dr. Alcock said evidence indicates tension caused by oil-thirsty countries could ignite the Middle East by 1975 or 1976.

Researchers are just beginning to discover apparent cycles in human affairs, said the man who founded the institute in 1961 to apply scientific methods to researching world events.

Emerging cycles are strong enough to justify serious consideration of the theory that humans, like animals, follow cycles, he said, the cycles have not been explained and could be attributed to coincidence.

Dr. Alcock said the apparent pattern shows some possibility of international conflict in the Middle East, little chance of major fighting between East and West and the probability of a series of civil wars in smaller nations.

The research institute, with headquarters in Oakville, Ont., has done research for the United Nations and related organizations.

DRUG ADDICT BEHAVIOR IGNORED

CALGARY (CP) Most drug education programs have failed dismally because little attention is paid to changing the abusers' behavior, the summer school on alcohol and drugs was told.

Dr. Stanley Einstein, executive director of the Institute for the Study of Drug Addictions in New York, said the prime goal of drug education should be to help people realize their potential and enjoy life without relying on chemicals.

Many of those who have turned to drugs as a solution to their problems cannot completely abstain so direction on the healthy use of drugs and medicine also should be a goal to minimize the misuse.

Security Regulations Leave Mali Tourists Limp

BAMAKO, Republic of Mali (FWF) — The taxi bounces past a collection of tin shanty shops, scatters a brood of brown chickens and skids across the loose gravel to a halt outside a distinctly uninviting single-storey building which sorely needs a coat of point.

"The police headquarters," says the driver. It is here that all visitors to this West African landlocked republic must report before they point their cameras at anything in the country.

The military National Liberation Committee, headed by Col. Moussa Traore, is one of the msot security-conscious regimes on the African continent and, while the tourist office tries limply to welcome visitors and assure them of a happy stay (they have to report to the tourist office in Bamako, the capital, before they report to the police), the soldiers nevertheless pursue a policy of believing that inside the tropical clothing of an innocent-looking tourist, a spy could be lurking.

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," says a hand-written sign on the wall of the office where the men in dark glasses look sternly and suspiciously at visitors and wait for them to fill in their picture permit application forms.

Two elderly American ladies were happily taking pictures of vendors selling beads in the Bamako market-place when a policeman walked up: "Your permits to photograph, please," he demanded. No one at the airport had told them that they needed to apply for permits. They watched as the policeman opened their cameras, exposed their film — and then escorted them, fear-stricken, to the police office where, after prolonged argument, they were issued with permits.

A few days later two Japanese businessmen broke the Malian bureaucracy barrier by claiming, when challenged, to speak neither English nor French. They delivered a 20-minute tirade in Japanese which so flummoxed the police that the two businessmen were escorted back to Bamako's only good hotel and the question of permits was discreetly abandoned.

"We share a constant mood of frustration with the Russians and the Chinese," an American diplomat told me in Bamako. "We complain a helluva lot. You just can't get to see the official you want to see here without a stream of excuses from him about why he will have to postpone the meeting for a few weeks.

"There is a climate of fear of decision-taking. If you take a decision and it's the wrong one, you could get fired or locked up, so many people prefer to wriggle out of taking decisions altogether, and things just don't get done. Instead, the officials spend their time in what must surely be Africa's greatest mire of misguided bureaucracy and form-filling."

Later, on a road journey across the Malian hinterland, the diplomat's point was proved to me: my passport was examined no fewer than eight times at military check-points. At each, an officer laboriously recorded the details in my visa before waving me on. The movements of citizens are equally controlled — they can go wherever they like by car but, on the main road links across the country, men in red overall-coats wave from huts at the roadside every 20 or 30 miles. They write down the make and number of the car — but take no details about the driver or owner.

What was the purpose of the exercise? Neither the officials performing the chore nor the drivers they stopped to question could tell me. One red-coated man shrugged, however, and suggested it was done "because the government needs to have this kind of information, I think."

Mali is one of France's former African colonies where the will of Paris no longer automatically becomes the policy of the government. While France still exercises considerable political sway over much of West Africa, Mali has gone its own way since independence.

First, under President Modibo Keita, it was closely allied to President Kwame Nkrumah's Ghana and President Sekou Toure's Guinea. Of the three only Sekou Toure still rules. Nkrumah was first in exile and is now dead — and Modibo Keita enjoys the dubious comforts of a malian jail along with many other former politicians.

The military rulers, though, have continued to follow left-leaning policies while simultaneously remaining reasonably cordial towards France. Colonel Moussa Traore, whose military coup took place little more than five years ago, returned from a visit to China this July.

'I'D DO IT ALL AGAIN'

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Twenty-nine years after she was injured in a Pacific air raid, disabled veteran Jeanne McLeran still is picking pieces of a Japanese bullet from her hip.

But the 52-year-old Oregon City, Ore., woman says she had a good time serving in the Army Air Corps during the Second World War and "my wounds are worth it."

Mrs. McLeran was one of 30 women attending the National Convention of Disabled American Veterans.

During her two years of service in the Pacific, Mrs. McLeran says she was washed overboard from a motor-torpedo boat, shot down over Corregidor in the Philippines and wounded when Japanese planes strafed New Guinea.

"I wasn't supposed to go out of the office, but I just bullied my way aboard the planes," said Mrs. McLeran.

"I couldn't see serving in the army and just pushing a pencil."

Mr. McLeran served as a logistical clerk with Far East Air Service Command in the South Pacific. Her job was to help set up supply depots on the islands captured from the Japanese.

"I had a damned good time during the war," she says.

"My wounds are worth it and I'd do it all over again."

Mrs. McLeran was hit in the hip in December, 1944 during a Japanese attack on an American depot at Hollandia, New Guinea. A year later, she was shot down over Corregidor helping to drop machine guns and ammunition to an army supply depot.

She was washed overboard off the coast of the Philippines in 1945 and treaded water for 4½ hours before she was picked up.

"I did some fighting, too," she says. Mrs. McLeran claims she personally killed at least four Japanese soldiers in night-time ambushes on New Guinea in 1944.

Mrs. McLeran says once she was out on a night patrol with two officers when their party was attacked and she helped fight off the Japanese.

"Other times I just joined routine patrols and when the going got tough I just took my gun and fired away," she said.

Mrs. McLeran said it was rough being a woman in a man's army but she "knew how to put men in their place."

"Don't talk to me about this women's lib business, because I'm against it," she said. "I don't go burning my bra."

Old Ideas On Age Disputed

Political science teacher Andrew Quarry talks with some of his students, all are at least 65 years old. The University of Manitoba this year decided to offer courses to older people in consultation with the Age and Opportunity Centre and the Manitoba department of health and welfare. Professor Quarry says he is surprised to find the values system of a 70-year-old is just as flexible as that of an 18-year-old when given the opportunity to participate in group learning situations.

Blue Jeans in Royal Blue, Too

TORONTO (CP) — Once the uniform of the working man and youngster's favourite knockabout gear, jeans are a smash hit with every member of the family today—even the royal family.

Every day you see jeans on the street but on the weekends even grownups wear them to browse around stores and boutiques, shop at the supermarkets and go to the cottage.

Even models and socialites are wearing jeans for radical chic or that non-fashion look which is supposed to prove they are not competing when it comes to clothes.

The more bruised and faded the jeans, the better young people like them. Manufacturers have been quick to meet the need so there are lost of faded denims around.

They've even come up with faded jeans bearing silver studs or fancy embroidery for the more sophisticated.

"We've been selling jeans for 30 years but they took off as leisure wear five years ago," says Irving Lerman, owner of a chain of stores in Toronto.

"People have more leisure today," he says. "Jeans are comfortable to wear and there's a big demand for them today.

But in New York, retailers who sell blue denim jeans may be losing their pants.

As denim increases in popularity, with designers using it for everything from capes to placemats, retailers in the United States find themselves in short supply.

The shortage is being blamed on textile manufacturers who are uncertain about how much capital to put into the popular fabric.

Peter Kamins, president of the blended-fabrics division of J. P. Stevens and Co., a major manufacturer, says it takes two years to build a plant "for this single product, and if demand slackens, then what?"

Kamins says it cost $20-million to build a plant capable of turning out 20-million yards of denim a year. "It takes forever to get your money back."

Ben Samson. vice-president of Cone Mills Corp., estimates that denim demand in the U.S. outstrips supply by 100 million yards a year and, like other producers, he sees no relief in sight.

The shortage has forced a Minnesota manufacturer of industrial clothes to stop making machinists' aprons because he could not get denim.

Some manufacturers are turning to substitutes, including polyester and cotton blends. But most retailers feel there is no substitute for genuine denim. Some retailers have even gone into the used-jeans market.

"The real shortage started about six months ago, and we see no end in sight," says designer Leila Larmon of Serendipity, a New York boutique which makes 95 per cent of its merchandise out of denim.

Practical Ethics Aired

EDMONTON (CP) — The application of Christian ethics to practical problems was discussed this week by delegates at the 53rd annual Catholic Women's League of Canada (CWL) convention.

Freddie Morrish described the Edmonton women's shelter which she believes is unique in North America because food, shelter and clothing are given to transient women "with no strings attached."

When a woman comes to the shelter, which is financed by the provincial and municipal governments and private contributions, "the only thing we ask is her name."

"The women who come to us have the right to refuse rehabilitation . . . It is their right to choose the way they live, and yet, if they want help, we are there."

The 500 delegates from all 10 provinces and both territories also heard Bernice Ward, director of the Edmonton chapter of Birthright, condemn "a creeping utilitarian ethic."

"We are hearing phrases like the utilitarian being and the perfect being more and more frequently, and yet there is so much to be gained from caring about the less-than-perfect, the mongoloid, the retarded person."

She urged support for groups such as Birthright, which offers emergency counselling to pregnant women to "protect the life of the unborn."

Mary Quinlan of Montreal, first vice-president of the Quebec CWL council, said North American Christians have "a yawning credibility gap" to bridge between their own affluence and the suffering of the third world.

A meeting last September of the general assembly of the Pontifical Commission on Justice and Peace did "viable, exciting things" to relate spiritual values to practical needs.

The assembly recommended that the church make public audited statements of financial and human resources, and encourage "communal examinations of conscience . . . regarding social attitudes and lifestyles," said Mrs. Quinlan.

It also asked the commission to study "the right to more active participation on the part of developing countries in decisions on monetary and trade issues."

Emily Maier, past-president of the Saskatchewan CWL council, said Catholic women should "speak more about life pollution" which can be fought only by finding in others the centre of life.

Pollution Cripples

MINAMATA, Japan (Reuter) — Shortly after the birth of Toshiyuki Hayashi in 1963, it was obvious something was wrong.

At five months his neck was not strong enough to enable him to lift his head.

At one year he still couldn't roll over in bed and doctors diagnosed that Toshiyuki was a victim of industrial pollution, condemned to a life of paralysed helplessness.

He joined a growing list of victims of what has gone into medical annals as "Minamata disease."

The victims suffer paralysis of the nervous system and limbs, speech problems and malfunctions of the eyes and ears. In severe cases they die.

Ten years before Toshiyuki was born, individuals around Minamata Bay in southern Japan began to fall prey to the paralysis.

Scientists at nearby Kumamoto University finally tracked down the cause — poisoning of fish and shellfish in Minamata Bay by mercury-contaminated waste pumped from the local factory of Chisso Chemical Co.

But it wasn't until 1968 that the Tokyo government confirmed the findings, opening the way for official recognition of victims and providing life-long financial assistance.

It also began a bitter confrontation between the victims and the polluter. The result was two major court victories for the victims.

Minamata disease is no longer confined to Minamata Bay. An equally serious outbreak has been confirmed at Niigata in northern Japan and every unexplained case of paralysis anywhere in the country is likely to create a "Minamata panic."

At Minamata the government has designated more than 480 people as official victims, including 78 who have died in the last two decades.

In Niigata the toll is 71 deaths and 380 officially designated victims, although more than 600 persons claim to have been afflicted.

In Minamata, 138 victims and survivors of some of the deceased won a court decision ordering Chisso to pay $3.25 million in compensation for negligence in having discharged the mercury-laden waste into the sea.

At Niigata the Showa Denko Chemical Co. was ordered in 1971 to pay compensation totaling nearly $1 million to 77 plaintiffs.

Other victims and bereaved families are continuing their private battle against the two companies for compensation.

At Minamata, Chisso Chemical faces a new threat.

The bay is so badly contaminated with mercury that all fish in it have been ordered caught and destroyed. Then the bay will be filled in as part of a land-reclamation scheme.

Some local fishermen are demanding compensation for loss of earnings. But Chisso has so far refused to negotiate on the grounds this will create a precedent for thousands more fishermen.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Color makes a world of difference! . . .

Noticed how every night it's getting darker a little earlier? . . . Soon the evenings will be longer . . . and conducive to TV viewing . . . All the new fall programs will be starting too . . . Important sports events, musicals, spectaculars and new shows of all kinds . . . every last one of them in living color! . . . People who don't own color TV's will be missing out on a great deal . . . and if, perchance, you're one of them . . . but thinking about remedying the situation this fall . . . we'd like to point out that later on it might not be too easy to get color TV's when you want them . . . so maybe this would be a good time to start looking, before the crunch is on! . . . Color TV's have changed radically in the last couple of years . . . They have automatic tuning and color lock so it's just a matter of flicking a button for perfect reception . . . none of the fiddling around which may have put you off in the past! . . . For the best selection of TV's in town, do shop at Standard Furniture . . . They have a huge selection of all the major makes, in every style and wood you could wish for . . . All pre-tested and guaranteed unconditionally . . . And for that "extra" TV set for private watching in bedroom or den . . . in your camper, boat or mobile home . . . there are little AC-DC black and white portables . . . Very lightweight . . . very inexpensive at . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Princess Anne's wedding dress will be made by a young British designer who specializes in ready-to-wear fashions.

Especially for back-to-schoolers . . .

Soon the youngsters will be poring over their books again . . . and one of the best things you can do for your back-to-schoolers is make sure they have the proper sort of desk lamp to save their eyes . . . make studying easier . . . Just such little lamps, in fact, as we saw in the Lighthouse on Monday . . . They're metal . . . in a variety of bright cheery colors . . . with flat bases which a child can put his books on . . . and adjustable heads . . . Take up practically no space on a small desk . . . can even hang on the wall . . . and give excellent light . . . Great for carrying school books . . . (your daughters will love 'em) . . . are the Levi blue denim tote bags . . . and new canvas tote bags with plastic lining and three pockets on the outside . . . in a variety of colors . . . And for "with it" gals . . . the back-to-school combs . . . strong chunky combs in wild colors! . . . New to the Lighthouse . . . and most attractive . . . is the "Lunar Range" ovenproof stoneware by Govancroft of Scotland . . . There's a complete range of this, in either oatmeal or sycamore green . . . as contemporary as tomorrow . . . In fact this design was selected by the British Council of Industrial Design to be exhibited in the Design Centre in London . . . We love the shapes of this top quality stoneware . . . and could hardly believe that it's only $16.80 for a 5-piece place setting at . . . The Lighthouse, 1005 Broad St., 383-6633.

Scarves for your every mood . . .

Visions of soaring Alps, geranium-splotched chalets and tinkling cowbells arose nostalgically before our eyes when we saw those big cartons from Switzerland arriving at Wilson's last week . . . Not that the contents were rustic by any manner of means . . . in fact they're quite devastatingly sophisticated! . . . Scarves by Kreier and Vetter brought cheers from everybody in sight! . . . Patterns are mostly geometrics, abstracts, stylized flowers and free-form designs . . . in the most luscious colors, blended and combined with the eye of an artist . . . They're big . . . but not TOO big . . . squares . . . Hand rolled and hemmed, in the case of the pure silk ones . . . while the wool challis squares have fringed edges . . . In a year when scarves occupy a top position in fashion accessories . . . you'll certainly want at least one of these Helvetian beauties! . . . Also in the Swiss shipment . . . some swinging little sleeveless pullovers which should set Wilson's more youthful customers back on their heels! . . . In 100% wool . . . one style has V neck and wide ribbing at the waist . . . white with an orange pattern, or black on red . . . $25 . . . Cute hats and gloves to match, with an $8.50 price tag . . . Another style has high square neck . . . groups of big purple, pink and mauve dots on a black background . . . Matching hat and gloves for this one too . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Complete with paws, claws, nose and fur the fox has snatched the limelight for fall fashions.

Some of Dogwood's many delights . . .

We saw some really lovely hand-made copperware from Holland at the Dogwood this week . . . Helmet-shaped coal scuttles with either Delft or wooden handles . . . A tall "Guild Can" which would make a handsome umbrella holder, among other things . . . A big round bucket, terrific to set beside a fireplace filled with chopped wood . . . or equally impressive used as a planter . . . All these copper pieces are faithful reproductions of objects used long ago in Dutch history . . . Well worth a visit from you . . . And don't miss seeing the Italian satin-finish glass bowls and vases painted with flower designs . . . They have a lovely soft patina and are quite unusual-looking . . . One attractive piece . . . an oriental-style vase . . . held several peacock feathers which looked absolutely terrific! . . . Incidentally, the Dogwood sells these real peacock feathers . . . which are very striking in any tall vase or container . . . So many delightful gift items at the Dogwood that we hardly know which to single out . . . but if you'd like a small quality gift for someone who appreciate exquisite things . . . we suggest you look at the hasti-notes from Switzerland . . . painted with birds, flowers and Alpine scenes . . . They're beautifully done . . . the most delicate things you can imagine . . . and not too expensive, either . . . Be sure to cast an eye on Dogwood's "Bargain Table" . . . always something to be picked up for a song! . . . The Dogwood Gift Shoppe, 2224 Oak Bay Ave., 598-3712.

New furs are so supple they're styled with shirt cuffs.

Get away from it all BEFORE Christmas . . .

We hear a lot of talk every year about the rat race of pre-Christmas parties . . . the headaches of shopping . . . the hectic pace which mounts with increasing crescendo as Dec. 25 draws nigh . . . Here's a way you can escape from it all this year . . . yet be home to enjoy Yuletide with your family . . . the 14-day Pre-Christmas Hawaii Cruise aboard the P&O's Arcadia . . . which sails from Vancouver on Dec. 6 . . . returns on the 20th . . . Not only will you relax and unwind . . . enjoy great entertainment . . . partake of marvellous meals and enjoy unrestrained pampering . . . but you can do all your Christmas shopping aboard ship . . . have an unparalleled shopping spree at duty-free prices! Besides Honolulu, the cruise takes in Lahaina, Kailua, Kona and Hilo . . . but if you don't want to spend all that time cruising you can disembark at Honolulu and either stay there for a while or fly right back . . . In fact all sorts of sail-fly combinations are possible . . . and Paulin's will be delighted to tell you all about them . . . Let them book you on this exciting pre-Christmas cruise, fares for which start at $490 . . . If you can't get away before Christmas, the Arcadia will be making an 18-day Hawaiian cruise sailing Feb. 27 . . . Aloha! . . . Paulin Travel, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

Relief for aching hands . . .

Talking about our ailments bores us to death so we're not about to start it here . . . except to mention that at times our hands get so stiff and painful . . . due to that old enemy arthritis . . . that we're almost beside ourself! . . . Picture our joy, then, we discovered that Surgical Supplies carries something very new . . . and, we understand, very effective . . . in the way of relief . . . Kayser Supp-Hose gloves . . . They don't cure anything . . . but they DO relieve that unpleasant tingling feeling . . . relieve the nagging ache, and permit more restful sleep when the old hands are acting up! . . . They're made of a newly-developed two-dimensional stretch fabric . . . with what they call a Honeycomb Comfort Zone in the palms . . . a mesh-covered opening which allows the air to get at your hands . . . keeps the temperature comfortable . . . These Supp-Hose gloves come in either white or natural . . . and in a one-size stretch to fit all . . . and extra large for the large hand . . . They're so smart and good looking that you can wear them on the street as well as in bed . . . or any place and any time you want temporary relief for painful hands . . . They wash like a charm, so you can always keep them spanking fresh . . . Well, that's the story . . . and a mighty happy one it is, too! . . . If you've any doubts, consult your doctor about the benefits of these gloves! . . . Surgical Supplies Limited, 1012 Broad St., 384-8433.

Smart brides register at Eaton's . . .

Getting married soon? . . . Then one of the most thoughtful things you can do right now . . . for your family and friends . . . is to decide what you'd like for your home and register your preferences at Eaton's . . . Explosion Curb Sought

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuter) — The government of the Dominican Republic is conducting a birth-control program aimed at slowing down one of the severest population explosions in the Americas.

The republic, which shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with Haita, has one of the fastest rates of demographic growth in the Western Hemisphere at 3.4 per cent a year.

The government's program was launched in February, 1968, and as a result, there are at least 60 family planning clinics in the Dominican Republic now, six of them in this capital.

The program is administered by the National Council of Population and Family, and since its work began, more than 80,000 women have registered for help in planning their families.

They are able to receive, free of charge, contraceptive pills, inter-uterine device, vaginal foams or condoms. But non-reversible methods of contraception, such as vasectomy and sterilization, are not available.

The council, and the Dominican Association for Family welfare, produce a radio program which is broadcast by 13 stations around the country for one hour every day, with the object of informing people in rural areas of family planning possibilities.

A team of social workers is carrying out an education campaign on a national scale using lectures, teach-ins, short courses and group meetings.

Leave Wig Alone

DEAR ABBY: I am serious about a young man I've been dating for nearly a year. Since we've been dating he has been slowly losing his hair. He is far from bald, Abby. His hairline IS receding a little, and he's getting a bit thin on top, but he certainly doesn't give the impression of being bald. I knew he was rather self-conscious about it, but I never realized how much until last evening when he showed up in a full toupee! I nearly fell over.

It is so full and unnatural looking it looks ridiculous. He thinks it looks great, and it has given him so much confidence, I hate to tell him the truth. But I want the old HIM back. What should I do? — Missing Him.

DEAR MISSING: — I don't care if a man wears a rug he can fly to Bagdad on, if he thinks it looks great and it has restored his confidence, keep quiet. In time, you might suggest he have it "trimmed" a bit — or replaced with a more natural-looking one. But for the moment, don't undermine his confidence.

DEAR ABBY: Something bothers me. Whenever I clean out my closets and drawers I have a lot of clothes, shoes, purses, and lingerie I want to discard because I know I'll never wear them again, but I honestly don't know what to do with them. I hate to throw them away so I just pack them in boxes and store them in the attic. Most things are good as new. Some I hardly wore — they are "mistakes" I made by buying them.

I don't want to offer them to friends, relatives, or neighbors because I don't want them to think I think they are "in need." Don't recommend Goodwill or The Salvation Army. I want to give my things away on a more personal basis.

I'd like to hand them over to the people who can use them so I will feel that I have been personally charitable. Can you help me? — Things To Give.

DEAR THINGS: You don't say how old you are, or what size you are, but every church auxiliary is aware of "needy" families who could use whatever you have to give. (So is your local County Welfare Department.) Trust their judgment to give your things "directly" to needy people, and forego the satisfaction of personally handing it to one who is in need. (Accepting things can be humiliating.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a gentleman friend who is 15 years my senior. (I am a widow.) My girl friend (another widow) and I were seeing him off at the airport after he had visited me.

Just before he left he kissed me goodbye, then he took $20 out of his wallet and handed it to me, saying, "I didn't know what to buy you. Get yourself something."

I became very angry and said, "That's an insult. I don't charge for my kisses!"

He became angry and departed on that note.

My girl friend said I was wrong to have acted that way because he didn't really mean to insult me by offering me money. I can't imagine any gentleman thinking it would be all right to offer money to a lady.

Was I wrong? Or should he be excused because he was raised in Italy? — Wondering.

DEAR WONDERING: He should have been excused not because he was raised in Italy, but because he probably meant well. You should have accepted his somewhat clumsy gesture with grace.

Peach dessert can be assembled after travelling

The Peach Shortcake Kit

Today's Creamy Peach Shortcake is a must for all dessert lovers.

I made the cake at home but assembled it in Doon, Ontario. We were invited to Doon School of Fine Arts by Ruthe and Tom Clayley, owner-director-artists and their hospitality and the fun was abundant. Every Canadian within driving distance should visit this home of Homer Watson, see the art exhibit and meet these charming people.

PEACH SHORTCAKE

Cake:
1 c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. butter
½ c. hot milk
2 Eggs
1 c. sugar
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Filling:
½ c. sugar
3 tbsp. cornstarch
½ tsp. salt
1½ c. milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. almond extract

Topping:
3 c. sliced peaches
3 tbsp. granulated sugar
½ pt. whipping cream

To make the cake grease a 9-inch square cake pan and line the bottom with greased waxed paper. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Melt butter in hot milk. Cool to lukewarm. Beat the two eggs until thick and lemon colored. Gradually add 1 cup sugar until light and fluffy. Add lemon juice. Remove beaters. Fold in sifted dry ingredients, alternately with milk, combining lightly after each addition. Pour into prepared pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 25 to 30 minutes. Cool in pan on wire rack 10 minutes. Remove from pan; peel off paper. Cool completely.

To make filling in saucepan conbine the ½ cup sugar, cornstarch and the ½ teaspoon salt. Gradually stir in the 1½ cups milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until thickened and mixture comes to the boil and 3 minutes longer. Stir a little of hot mixture into the two eggs. Return to saucepan and cook over low heat 1 minute longer. Stir in butter and almond extract. Cover and chill.

To assemble combine peaches and the 3 tablespoons sugar. Whip cream until softly stiff. Split cake crosswise into 2 layers; fill with cream filling and half the peaches. Top with whipped cream and remaining peaches.

Luscious!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, August 26
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold off on speculative matters. Be sure rather than sorry. Children can be difficult if you forget to "draw the line." Means be adult in your attitude. Treat young and old equally. Patronizing obstreperous persons would be error.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take special care in traffic. Don't write or sign letters in anger. Cycle is such that you lose by giving in to impulse. Self-control is a necessity. You have something of value. Don't risk it on a mere whim.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight humor, versatility. Fighting with brothers, sisters in nonproductive. If trip to relative must be cancelled, so be it. There is no need for vituperation. One who holds views opposite to your own will play significant role.

CANCER (July 23-Aug. 22): You enjoy yourself, even though some disputes could rage. Gemini, Virgo persons might figure prominently. Accent is on your personality. You might find that mate, partner wants too much, too fast. Ride with the tide.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tread lightly. Don't overstep bounds. One behind the scenes is trying to smooth ruffled emotional feathers. You may be surprised at results. One whose standing is solid will back you. Taurus, Libra persons are involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends and money may not mix. See facts as they are, not merely as they might appear on suface. Pisces, Virgo persons could figure prominently. You will be able to perceive future trend. Key is to listen to inner voice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be considering a business transaction. Key is to accept responsibility but also to be sure you receive proper credit, reward incentive. Capricorn could play important role. Contract that had been delayed may be expedited.

SAGGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You finish rather than begin — your influence spreads, your product, efforts appeal to more persons in more places. Travel, publishing and advertising are part of the picture. Expand horizons. Eschew the petty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creativity is emphasized. You imprint your own ways, style. Set pace. Mate, partner or another who is close to you wants to co-operate. Know it and be receptive. Object of your affection responds in meaningful manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You receive benefit of doubt. Others adopt generous attitude. One who taught you in past makes reappearance. You have opportunity for genuine progress. Leo figures prominently. Aim high — sky is the limit!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find your views changing, being shaded. Some around you are handicaped, temporarily restricted in their movements. Adher to principles of Golden Rule. You make most gains through humor, intellectual curiosity.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are an organizer; powerful statements, beliefs are your hallmark. This month, August, is marked as one of your most significant of the year. You attract persons born under Capricorn and Cancer. You seldom do anything in a lukewarm manner — It's either hot or cold.

Forecast for Monday, August 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on consolidation—getting assets together. Basic issues dominate, including home and property costs. Take inventory; review tax schedule. Co-operate with older family member. Make effort at reconciliation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romantic interests, creative endeavors are likely to be highlighted. Change, travel and variety are featured. Young persons—young ideas—tend to make you come alive. Shake off doldrums. Socialize. Shake up routine!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Aries message. You get chance to enhance security. Key now is to be thorough—and truthful. Means frank approach to any dilemma, problem; question brings most constructive results. Save subtleties for another time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Brothers, sisters could figure prominently. Your mind is active and ideas flow. Be analytical. Find reasons. Reject superficial explanations. Gemini, Virgo persons may hold keys to significant decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be purchasing luxury item for home. Spending is featured. You could locate genuine bargain and make family member happy. Taurus, Libra persons are likely to be in picture. Review income potential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle is high; take initiative. Make new start. Be independent. Select quality. Refuse to sell short. Your judgment, intuition are on target. Don't be bullied into decision. Set your own pace.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Activity is indicated in connection with special group, club, organization. You may also be visiting hospital. You could be cast in role of money raiser—your prestige is enhanced. You are given more responsibility.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start — make contacts with those who have previously been indifferent. Many now will give you second chance. Aries, Libra appear to play significant roles. You make friends and influence people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New opportunity to prove major contention is available. But you will have to be a self-starter. No one is handing you anything on silver platter. Know it and get going! Career aspects are highlighted. You are in position to drum up business.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect now coincides with travel, study, philosophy. You ask, "Why am I here?" It is possible you could obtain the answer! Cancer person is in picture. Make long-range plans. Adhere to principles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could become involved in "amusing mystery." Don't take others—or yourself—too seriously. Money question is put forth by partner, mate. Hold off on making final judgment. Study alternatives. Sagittarius may be in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent is on co-operative efforts. Your own concepts will have to be modified. Mate, partner takes lead. Your role now is to observe, gather knowledge. Be aware of public relations. Refuse to get involved in knock-down-drag-out.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have knack for finding ways to aid the oppressed. You are fascinated with law, medicine and the rights of people. You are a fighter, capable of marshaling forces when the well seems dry. You attract many born under Aries and Libra. In September, you will be more creative, will go places, do things and your life will take on a romantic hue.

All Is Not Well in the Kitchens of France

By FRANCIS HOPE

AVIGNON — "One thing about France," said my companion. "You can be sure of getting a good meal." I made a doubtful noise, not just because I find it hard to be sure of anything, but because, after four months of living in France, I find that foreigners' impressions (including my own) tend to be anything between five and 50 years out of date.

"You can still get the world's best cooking in France," I said. "But you can also get some of the worst. And some of the most expensive." We were sitting in the Hotel de l'Europe in Avignon, in a spectacularly beautiful courtyard under a sensational umbrella-like tree. We had come to the hotel to make an urgent telephone call to London, and had been told, at seven o'clock on a Saturday evening, that there was three hours' delay (but the obstacles to telephoning in southern France are another and grislier story.) It seemed a reasonable excuse for an exceptionally long and excellent dinner. It turned out to be a gold-plated can of worms.

To describe bad expensive food may always irritate the reader, who feels that the writer must suffer from having more money than sense. Let me just say that piperade basquaise shouldn't be a leathery vegetable omelette, that brochette d'agneau in a good restaurant should offer better quality meat than a shish kebab at a student canteen, that a few limp lettuce leaves in a watery vinaigrette do not make a salade de saison, that no restaurant at any price should serve for dinner bread which has been cut into chunks that morning, or even earlier, and that two good dishes — a salmon galantine and a creme caramel don't justify a bill of 305 francs (around $75) for four people.

I put down 310 francs in notes; although 15 per cent had been added to the bill for service, nobody saw fit to bring me the change or the bill. I therefore lost my opportunity to complain about one remarkable item. In arriving we had asked for a bottle of dry white wine de la maison which should be equivalent to asking for the cheapest they have. We were in fact slipped a bottle of moderate but pretentious local wine for 63 francs. Discovery came too late for complaints. One can just resolve not to be caught again.

Has French gastronomy then, gone to the dogs? Not at all. It is still a national passion.

One may still queue in a butcher's shop beside a serious middle-aged couple who inspect every shred of meat together and argue its merits with the butcher and with each other. Even the most serious newspapers carry regular features on la table.

The established gastronomic guides are still in excellent health. There is the fat red Guide Michelin, with its famous crossed spoon and fork symbols for class and comfort, and its rosettes for outstanding cuisine; the more modest Guide des relais routiers, with its solid list of the places favoured by France's long-distance lorry-drivers, still the tourist's best bet in the search for good value; and the newer, smarter, more personal Guide de France by Henri Gault and Christian Millau, the Gilbert and Sullivan of French guide-books, full of waspish little jokes and a sprinkling of chef's-hat symbols.

Anyone who thought French devotion to eating was finished might find Gault and Millau an instructive phenomenon. As well as their guide (now in its second year, though their guides to Paris and London are established institutions), they have a weekly column in the magazine Le Point, a weekly programme on the radio station Europe Numero Un, and a weekly magazine which goes some way towards being a French equivalent of Which or Consumer Report. For them, France still marches on its stomach—and pays for it.

The true foundation of a nation's eating is private rather than public, and since the average French private house is still about as accessible as a diplomatic reception in the Kremlin, intelligence is hard to come by. But spies' reports suggest that only the French bourgeoisie is having to take in its comfortable belt a few notches. Underpaid and overworked servants are harder to find, and transatlantic business habits like le quick-snack are gaining ground in a class whose more energetic members prefer wealth to leisure.

The French working-class, on the other hand, are probably eating better than ever before not just because they can afford better materials (wine every day was almost unknown among the peasantry at the beginning of this century), but because their wives have more time and education, and regard good eating as something half-way between self-indulgence and self-improvement. As the bourgeoisie sheds its habits the working-class adopts them.

Gadgetry also makes their adoption easier. I recently tramped the streets of Paris looking for a device called a mandoline, a wooden board with a steel blade set in the middle, for slicing or dicing vegetables. Ten years ago the incomparable English author of cookbooks, Elizabeth David, was able to assure her readers that one could find such things in any French hardware shop.

After I had tried 10 which hadn't even heard of them, I began to sense that French society was changing. "Is that a musical instrument?" asked an incredulous assistant. "Ah, yes" said another. "I think my grandmother used to have one." A hand-driven, or even an electric grater made by the ubiquitous firm of Moulinex, has put the mandoline on the rubbish-heap of history.

But restaurants, as our experience in Avignon showed, are changing in a less hopeful direction. Some are simply responding to the universal Americanization of French life; the restaurants along the motorways, for example, where chains of standardised eating houses are making the fortunes of entrepreneurs like Jacques Borel, whose 674 restaurants dish up 100 million meals a year, and who proclaims the end of sauces as a part of France's future.

As against this, the smart thing in Paris now is to open a small but expensive bistro which proclaims its links with some specific region — sometimes even to the point of having all its supplies delivered daily from some country village. Far from spreading Parisian sophistication to the sticks — one of the Jacobin ideals of 19th century gastronomy — the small restaurant, like the health food store, desperately tries to restore a breath of "authentic" fresh country air to a stifling, standardized metropolis.

The Hotel de l'Europe in Avignon is, of course, a four-star establishment much frequented by rich foreigners, not the place for a cheap or even an original meal. But and Millau give it 14 points points out of a theoretical maximum of 20, and a chef's hat — although they warn customers that it is better to order in advance.

Some 30 miles away from Avignon, overlooking the spectacular hill town of Gordes, is a restaurant which has no such excuses. Gault and Millau give it 14 pointy and a chef's hat; Michelin gives it three forks and spoons and one rosette. My wife and I recently went there with the traditional high hopes of the English abroad.

We might as well have tried a really pretentious English hotel. Highly-vinegared hors d'oeuvres seemed to have been decanted from bottles, a good piece of steak had been split open and filled with paper-hanger's paste (which had also spoiled a few truffles), the chicken was run-of-the-spit and the cheese ordinary. For this, and a half-bottle of wine, we paid 130 francs (about $31.)

Women Rangers Take to Woods

WENDIGO LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario's first female Junior Forest Rangers have been manning a bush camp here on the edge of Algonquin Park this summer.

One of four camps for girls in the province set up by the ministry of natural resources, Wendigo Lake attracted 24 of 100 female applicants selected for the program, previously the exclusive preserve of high school boys.

None of the 17-year-olds admitted finding the man-sized work of tree-pruning, road work, culvert installation, camp and park cleanup too difficult.

There were some blisters the first few days, said Jo-Ann Shuel of Strathroy. "But everybody's all right now."

Buying workboots in size five and small work gloves has been a problem. Some have been sharing a pair on a temporary basis.

Lack of privacy in bunkhouses where lacy lingerie hung for the first time since the program began in the 1940s, was another complaint of the girls.

The distance to boys' camps was another feature of camp life the girls found hard to accept.

"It's a bit of a rip-off that there are separate camps for boys and girls," said Gillian McRuer of Ottawa. "But I can understand why they do it."

Only one of the 24 dropped out and went home because she was too homesick to stay, the other Rangers said.

Camp foreman Jerome Hummel, a veteran of eight years supervising boys in Junior Rangers, said he was delighted with his all-girl crew.

"They're easier to work with than the boys and they don't seem to try to slide out of work."

The ministry offered 75 spots for girls in the program this year. More than 200 applications were received and another 25 openings were added.

Camp Wendigo, about 45 miles southeast of North Bay, was originally a reformatory bush camp for men.

LAPORTE DEATH SWAP DENIED

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said Friday any suggestion that Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister, died so James Cross, a British trade commissioner, could live was "completely ludicrous and quite irresponsible."

Pelletier was commenting in a telephone interview on remarks made Thursday by Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque in an address at the Canadian Speech Association here.

Levesque called for full disclosure of all the facts of the October, 1970, crisis when Cross was kidnapped in Montreal by members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ)

Cross eventually was released but Mr. Laporte, kidnapped by another group of FLQ supporters, was murdered.

Camels Free to Roam In Moonfire's Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Since when do camels run loose in Southern California? Or llamas? Or African pygmy goats?

Since Louie Moonfire decided to import an assortment of friends to his 50-acre mountain kingdom on Topanga Canyon, west of Los Angeles.

Moonfire's friends include a camel, llama, African pygmy goat, two sheep, a dog, a deer, a black Angus cow, 12 peacocks and a flock of chickens. An elephant is on the way.

Moonfire was born Louis Beach Marvin III. He is the wealthy son of a board chairman of the S. and H. Green Stamp firm.

He is in his late 30s or early 40s. He won't tell his age.

In this sanctuary, he does as he pleases and so do the animals. They wander through the property, with house privileges.

Moonfire is also the name of Louis's home. It is a whitewashed concrete structure, resembling an overturned tea saucer, hand built and designed by Moonfire.

The structure is crumbling. There is no electricity, gas or toilet. Water is drawn from a storage tower.

When Moonfire returned from a trip to the East a few years ago, he found the place had been inhabited by Charles Manson and friends.

The home has been the setting for two movies, Harper and The Complete State of Death, soon to be released.

Visitors are welcome as long as they come on foot and abide by Moonfier's laws. He is a pacifist and a vegetarian.

Moonfire is part owner of the Love Animals — Don't Eat Them Restaurant in Laguna Niguel and once brought a camel into the place to dramatize what he considers mistreatment of animals.

General Ma Was Brave, But a Poor Planner

By PETER MUNCIE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Right-wingers, especially right-wing generals, and particularly right-wing Laotian generals, are in disrepute these days with those who make and carry out U.S. foreign policy.

So few, if any, tears are being shed in Washington over the news that General Ma, exiled to Thailand since 1966, and former commander-in-chief of the Royal Lao air force, was shot down and killed during a coup attempt in Vientiane this week.

In the case of Ma it was a case of two coups and you're out.

He had tried once before — in the summer of 1966 — and failed. He never was much of a planner.

All except Ma, that is.

Ma was a peasant. He had no large and influential family that needed enrichment and protection. He was born in 1920 in Saravane in Southern Laos, and it was rumored that he had Vietnamese blood in him. This fact, Laotians concluded, explained his courage in the face of enemy fire.

Like many other Lao, Ma fought with the French army against the North Vietnamese after the end of the Second World War. Sergeant Ma was caught by the Vietnamese at Dienbienphu in 1954, refused to surrender, and led a contingent of Lao troops out of the encircled valley to safety in Laos.

I knew Ma when he was a general and at 35 years old, the commander-in-chief of the Royal Lao air force, headquartered in Savannakhet in Central Laos. In U.S. eyes, he could then do no wrong.

Almost single-handedly, he broke up one attempted right-wing coup led by General Phoumi against government forces in Thakhek in 1965.

He was brave, and daily led his ancient T-28 fighter-bombers against North Vietnamese troops and supplies coming down the Ho Chi Minh Trail on their way into South Vietnam.

Those were the "glorious" days of our Vietnam involvement, days when only a handful of people in this country were speaking out against the war.

Ma didn't care about politics. He just hated the North Vietnamese, and the U.S. supplied him with everything he needed.

Though he was "our" general, he really wasn't.

"I would tell the Americans to get out of Laos tomorrow," he told me, "if the North Vietnamese would get out too."

Ma felt no hatred toward the Pathet Lao, for he considered them — by themselves — no threat to his country, and Ma was, mirabile dictu, incorruptible.

He actually lived on his salary of $20 a month. But sad to say, his incorruptibility led to his downfall.

General Ouane Rattikone was, in 1966, chief of staff of the Lao armed forces.

General Ouane was also the chief heroin producer in the country. He needed planes to transport his goods, and he wanted Ma's cargo planes to do the job. Ma refused.

The general staff then pressured the government of Souvanna Phouma to transfer the air force headquarters to Vientiane and away from Savannakhet, where right-wing and separatist feelings have always run high. Ma refused to go. Shortly afterward, he was betrayed for the first time, when a trusted subordinate planted gold bars on a Lao Air Force cargo plane that was being flown from Saigon to Laos.

The police waited for the plane to land, found the gold, and Ma was accused of smuggling.

The pressure for him to move his headquarters were intensified. Ma remained adamantly opposed.

Because of this adamancy, however, the Lao boat began to rock, and if there was one thing the Americans and the Russians agreed upon in Laos, it was that there should be no boat-rocking. American support for Ma evaporated.

Ma then plotted his first coup attempt. His principal co-conspirator was Colonel (now General) Nouphet Daoheung. Nouphet was Ma's most trusted companion, and was the commander of groupe mobile 18, consisting of three crack battalions.

While Ma sent his planes to bomb army headquarters in Vientiane, Nouphet was to parachute his troops into the city. The plot was found out.

Nouphet had enormous gambling debts and sold out, so when Ma was bombing the army base, Nouphet stayed home. The planes may have got off the ground, but the coup didn't.

Ma fled to Thailand.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

New Religions Almost Epidemic

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

New religious, and quasi-religious movements have become almost epidemic in recent years. Some are breakaways from the churches and appeal to people who have found conventional church-life unsatisfying and unhelpful, but most seem to have few or no ties with traditional religion and their appeal is to people, especially the young, who yearn for something firm and authoritative around which to build their lives, something that will enable them to cope with the anxieties engendered by the confusions and menaces of life today.

Some of these movements train people in methods of meditation which can help the individual adjust, if not to the total environment, to himself or herself. Others are, in effect, enterprises in psychological technology, but often with an esoteric metaphysic or a semi-secret mythology which is taught to the person who gets through the initial stages of the program.

Others are forms of oriental religions, often edited and amended for Western consumption, and they profess to convey a deep wisdom to their initiates, along with colorful rituals and devotional disciplines.

There are elements of secrecy in many of these movements, with the secrets disclosed to adherents on a progressive basis — often in classes which must be paid for, and with some of them the cost of instruction is quite high.

Some of these movements seem to be very profitable for their leaders or proprietors, profitable both in power and money. The role of the religious enterpreneur in our society has not yet been comprehensively investigated: here is a fascinating field for sociological research.

Most of these new movements are sustained by a dogmatic package of metaphysics and mythology and discipline which make even the most dogmatic segments of the churches seem terribly flabby. Leadership in these movements is authoritarian (a smiling, soft-spoken leader can be as toughly authoritarian as a noisy, muscle-flexing bully); and here is the secret of their success. The tidy, authoritative package, with everything provided and no loose ends, can be very comforting to persons caught in anxiety and confusion and painful feelings of emptiness. Part of the comfort, obviously, is in feelings of superiority to outsiders.

These movements are giving their adherents assurance and comfort, a sense of belonginess and of purpose in life, some healing for their anxieties. They are dong things for persons which biblical faith can do, but the churches have stumbled badly in recent years in making available the resources of faith, and in training persons in the devotions and disciplines of faith. The churches must not dismiss these new religious movements with cheap sneers, and they must recognize that the success of their appeals is a challenge to the churches to show, in very practical and credible ways, that in biblical faith there are resources which enable persons to cope with all that life thrusts at them.

Catholic Women Urged To Be Better Witnesses

EDMONTON (CP) — The question of women becoming priests is less important than the need for women to be better witnesses for Christ, says Most Rev. Hubert O'Connor, incoming national director of the Catholic Women's League of Canada, said in an interview during the 53rd annual CWL convention.

A native of Huntingdon, Que., he has jurisdiction over 300,000 square miles and about 6,000 Roman Catholics in Northern British Columbia and the Yukon.

The bishop was principal of an Indian residence school at Williams Lake from 1961 to 1967, and has also worked in Ottawa and Nova Scotia.

"The Indian people have always had deep religious convictions," he said. "In many ways they have a greater respect for life than we do.

"They see life in trees and animals. They never cut more wood than they need for one particular occasion. Whites say it's a lack of foresightedness, but native people have more trust in providence."

One reason there are no Indian priests in the North, said Bishop O'Connor, is that becoming a priest is a lifetime commitment and "Indians aren't used to looking that far ahead."

He criticized young people who move to the country to escape society's pressures, saying they are evading the responsibility of "God's broader mission."

Abortion also was an evasion of responsibility. "There is a trend to do away with capital punishment . . . it's only logical that man hasn't the right to take the life of an unborn child."

Artificial Human Life Long Way Off: Scientist

VANCOUVER (CP) — Visions of the artificial creation of human life by man won't be fulfilled, at least in this century, according to a prominent United States scientist.

Dr. David Jackson of the University of Michigan said Friday the complexities and problems of creating a human life "are too vast to be imagined. There is no way to see creation of any higher life in less than 50 or 100 years."

The 32-year-old scientist, presenting a lecture at the University of British Columbia, said in an interview that even when science can create some of the cells of higher life "it's doubtful we could make them hang together."

Dr. Jackson said if the "incredibly finely tuned balance" of all the cells in the body was not perfectly reached "we wouldn't have a monster, we'd only have a dead blob."

He said his work on genetic transplants has raised the eyebrows of some other scientists who he said "see spectres when there is nothing there."

His work involves injecting genetic information into a cancer virus which affects monkeys. His goal is to understand the working of the cancer virus with the hope of stamping out the disease. But he said some scientists have expressed fears about possible misuse of his work by others to exploit it in some horror of genetic engineering.

"Since the atomic bomb there has been a tremendous guilt feeling in the scientific community," he said. "Many scientists are worried about the misapplication of their work."

But in any event, creating the monster — or the superman is out of the picture for now, he said, adding that each human cell has about three trillion units of DNA — a certain life giving substance. A bacteria cell, with only three billion units of DNA and about 1,000 times smaller than the human cell, "is still a total mystery to us," he said.

And then there is the tiny virus which attacks the 100-times-larger bacteria and has a mere 30 million units of DNA. "We are just beginning to understand how that works," he said.

"It's a very long step from there to the human cell," he said.

Confucious Fails Marxist Test

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Confucius, a Chinese sage who lived between 551 and 479 B.C., has been denounced in China as a stubborn supporter of slavery, the New China news agency reported Friday.

A Peking People's Daily article quoted by the agency says Confucius stood obstinately on the side of the declining slave system and resolutely opposed reform of the rising feudalism taking place in his period.

The article, written by a professor of philosophy, says the system of slavery was collapsing, but Confucius wanted to revive the slave states so that the moribund slave-owning aristocracy would resume its rule.

Ranked as an equal of Aristotle in the West, Confucius has been regarded by the Chinese as a great thinnker and great teacher.

The article says Confucius concepts upheld the rule of the slave-owning class and justified their exploitation, enslavement and governing of the "laboring people."

"For this reason, in subsequent periods the exploiting classes made use of Confucianism to hoodwink the working people in order to maintain their reactionary rule.

"This explains why Confucius has been honored by the reactionary ruling classes over the last 2,000 years and more as the greatest of all sages."

The article says a historical figure should be judged, from the Marxist viewpoint, on whether he stood on the side of the progressive classes and advocated reform or stood on the side of the jeactionary classes and advocated conservative ideas.

Twelve-year-old Phillip Hodgdon, who plays an American boy in the film, Visit to a Chief's Son, blinks as the African chameleon in his hand lashes out at him, making tongue-to-nose contact. This unusual photo was taken in Kenya, where the film recently completed shooting on location. Phillip and the chameleon became friends after the colorful creature crawled onto his sleeping bag during a sequence of the motion picture.

Jewish Aid Urged To Help Arabs

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Mayor Harry Veiner proposed Thursday that Jews across the world should finance the immigration to Canada and other countries of hundreds of thousands of Palestinian Arab refugees.

The mayor ,who once proposed that the federal government open up a tract of land in Alberta for settlement by 250,000 Jews who were being persecuted by Hitler in Nazi Germany, said financial aid for Arab immigration to various countries would help establish peace in the Middle East.

"It would probably be necessary to spend about $20,000 on each refugee in order to provide each person with enough money to get established in another country," the Jewish mayor said in an interview.

"If some 500,000 refugees were to receive that amount of assistance, the total bill would be in the neighborhood of $10 billion."

Mayor Veiner said that although this amount might appear astronomical at first glance, "it is by no means impossible that such an amount could be raised by the world Jews with assistance from the government of Israel and perhaps from some other governments."

He said Israel has a special responsibility and should be prepared to take in a substantial number of the refugees and to cover a substantial share of the over-all cost.

The mayor said he would personally be prepared to make "a very substantial contribution" to such an undertaking.

The refugees would be unlikely to cause any dangerous social or economic problems in the countries they settle in, he said.

However, the biggest problem in starting the plan, woould be "overcoming the almost fanatical hatred of many of the Arab politicians."

Dam Work Precedes Environment Studies

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Results of the first environmental impact studies on the multi-million-dollar, mammoth James Bay hydro-electric project will not be made public until the spring of 1974, if that soon.

By that time, a 450-mile-long road and three airports in the James Bay development area will have been completed. And construction on the first and largest of four dams on the La Grande River, in northwestern Quebec, will have already started.

Perhaps more important, most of the true environmental impact studies being undertaken jointly by Ottawa and Quebec under a $4-million plus agreement will not be started until next year.

This would mean the results from the bulk of the environmental impact studies would not be available until late in 1975 or in 1976, by which time even more work will have been completed and other construction started.

Power from the first phase of the James Bay development is supposed to be surging down ultra-high voltage lines to Montreal and, almost certainly, to American users starting in 1980.

In many respects, then, the much-touted and much-doubted federal-provincial environmental impact studies on James Bay will be "after-the-fact," perhaps at most causing minor changes in the plans of the James Bay Development Corporation and the James Bay Energy Corporation.

Under an agreement signed last November, Ottawa and Quebec are sharing the costs 50-50 of a series of inventory and environmental impact studies over a five-year period which started last year. The studies will cost between $3 million and $5 million, not including additional Ottawa studies on matters solely in federal jurisdiction, such as on climate effects and migratory birds.

R. J. McCormack, the federal environment department official in charge of Ottawa's half of the joint federal-provincial environmental research, said Wednesday that some of the studies started last year should be finished by federal scientists this year.

He said that only when "hard data" are available will results be made public. He estimated this would be the spring of 1974, at the earliest.

At that time, Ottawa and Quebec are scheduled to make an annual report on the environmental impact studies.

Mr. McCormack said that preliminary results, either those available already or those which will be ready in coming months, will not be released to the public. Neither will any recommendations based on such preliminary results be made public.

At the same time, he revealed that such preliminary information and recommendations for changes to "engineering design and operating procedures" based on preliminary findings are being passed on by federal scientists to the James Bay Development Corporation. The practice began about three months ago, he estimated.

Meanwhile, J. C. Tremblay, the official in charge of federal-provincial relations at the James Bay Development Corporation, said Wednesday that by next spring three airports and a 450-mile-long road in the Jmes Bay development area will have been completed. And construction will have already started on the LG-2 dam complex, the largest of four on the La Grande River in phase one of the hydroelectric development.

Mr. Tremblay also said that in fact few, if any, of the true environmental impact studies scheduled under the federal-provincial agreement have been started yet.

So far, he explained, scientists have been doing preliminary inventory studies. None of these have yet been finished. The true environmental impact studies, the ones which will attempt to pinpoint problem areas and provide a basis for recommendations to change plans to protect the environment, will not start until next year, Mr. Tremblay said.

This would mean that the bulk of the environmental impact studies could not be completed until late in 1975 at the earliest.

By that time, the work on the first LG2 dam complex would have to be well on its way. And work on the other dams would probably be starting.

Mr. Tremblay said the committee "wants to keep pace with the development."

He said it is the aim of the committee to have the studies done either before construction starts — something that seems impossible for the LG2 complex, largest in phase one — or at least before construction is so far along the necessary changes can still be made.

For example, if a study suggests a dam should only be 400 feet tall, and the dam is only 300 feet high, then there would still be time to make the necessary change, he suggested.

But what if the study says the dam shouldn't be built at one location, or that it shouldn't be built at all?

A Million-Dollar Mall

VANCOUVER (CP) — A seven-block section of downtown Granville Street will be a pedestrian mall after next July 1, except for two lanes for buses, Mayor Art Phillips announced.

He said conversion of the street, now six lanes wide, would cost between $1 million and $2 million. It could take two years to complete the project, patterned after the Nicollet Mall in Minneapolis, although the traffic restrictions would start July 1.

Discarded Paintings Recycled as Art

EDMONTON (CP) — Six years ago Silvain Voyer was bending over a garbage can when an old, discarded painting caught his eye.

It was of a boy fishing in a tranquil-looking harbor, probably one of thousands of prints sold for every boy's bedroom in 1955.

"I either had to throw it back or find some way of making it more exciting," said Mr. Voyer, in his mid-20's. He chose the latter and a new local industry was born—art recycling.

"If your paintings have not stood the test of time," says an advertising card, "creative, sensitive artists will attempt to recycle them back into the mainstream of contemporary art."

The fishing scene was changed entirely by the presence of a huge, green Chinese dragon floating downstream to take the boy's hook.

In another painting, purchased from a local dime store for $3.33 (including frame), a glaring red barn is given a weathered look with a few brush strokes and neon yellow blades are turned into dying brown grass.

Mr. Voyer took a common painting of six ducks flying over a pond, added flight numbers to their wings, a flight plan log to the painting's corner, complete with flying time from Hairy Hill, Alta., to Miami Beach, and a pollution index.

Mr. Voyer, a graduate of the Alberta College of Art in Calgary, has almost as many reasons for recycling art as he has paintings.

"Recycling is, of course, topical," he mused. "Some of the paintings are social comment, some reflect on the nature of art itself and some are just fun."

One "old masters" painting of an English farmyard, complete with chickens and thatched roofs, was altered by putting colorful, abstract forms in the sky in the style of Russian painter Kandinsky.

Mr. Voyer hasn't sold many of his recycled works yet but is pricing them at $100 apiece, "just to show it's art."

He makes his living by selling small, intricately painted landscapes and "prographics," black and white photographic images silk-screened onto stiff board.

The Canada Council
Offers assistance to professional artists for creative work or study, and to critics in the arts, arts administrators and other persons whose contribution is important to the professional arts.

Senior Arts Grants
For professional artists who have made a significant contribution over a number of years and who wish to carry out a well defined program or to undertake a period of free work. Up to $15,000 to cover living expenses, program costs and travel allowance for the duration of the program, which must require at least four months to complete. (Applications are accepted at any time of the year.)

Arts Grants
For artists who have finished all basic training, are not yet eligible for senior arts grants, and would benefit from a period of 4 to 12 months of free work or advanced study. Up to $4,000, plus program costs and travel allowance, if needed. (Closing dates: October 15, 1973, and April 4, 1974.)

Short Term Grants
To enable professional artists to devote themselves to a particular project for up to 3 months. $550 a month for artists who have made a significant contribution over a number of years and $350 a month for artists who have finished all basic training and are not yet eligible for senior arts grants. Plus program costs and travel allowance if needed. (Applications are accepted at any time of the year.)

Travel Grants
For professional artists to travel on occasions important to their careers. Cost of transportation only. (Applications are accepted at any time of the year.)

Project Cost Grants
For costs of a particular project which are beyond the financial means of the artist, such as the purchase of materials for work in various media, the mounting of an exhibition, temporary rental of studio space, special voice coaching or tuition fees, typing of manuscripts, music copying, film editing. Up to $2,000. (Applications are accepted at any time of the year.)

DENNIS THE MENACE

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our new house is nicer but it is a lot noisier than our old one. We now live near the airport. Something has been wrong with my mice since we moved. They no longer love each other. At least I don't think they do because they haven't had any babies since we moved here. Mother says that noise could have a bearing on that in mice, too. Is that why, do you think?—B.B.

DEAR B.B.: Yes, it certainly could be. Mice do have an acute sense of hearing. It is a known fact that rodent romance can really be ruined by too much noise. Some strains of mice are even thrown into seizures, sometimes severe enough to cause death, by moderately loud explosive noises.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Pat and Mike, our cats, are getting on a bit and we are getting concerned about their health. That's the reason for this question. Would they be less likely to have heart disease if we give them water that has gone through our water softener?—B.F.

DEAR B.F.: Unfortunately, many cats don't drink enough water for its mineral content to be of any significance. Besides, heart disease is not a common problem in cats.

Concern for a cat's health should begin while it's still a kitten and should carry on through its whole life. Preventive medicine even at this stage is certainly commendable. Better late than never! Pat and Mike could probably benefit from physical check-ups. From there on, depending on their general condition, aid might range from dietary adjustment to teeth and gum repair to the often overemphasized vitamins.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sammy, my little salamander, is a fussy eater. I wonder if it would be all right to try him on spiders as someone suggested? — O. G.

DEAR O.G.: If Sammy Salamander is quite small, or should he be on the puny side, you would want to be quite sure the spiders were even smaller (and punier). They would then be an excellent mealtime choice. Inviting a large spider to supper might not be to Sammy's benefit . . .

Time for Action on Convention-Cultural Centre Plan

audrey johnson

It is with some sense of disorientation that one returns from vacation at such a between-season time as this.

Summer performers are catching some well-earned relaxation and about all there is to do is reflect on past impressions and peruse available brochures on the up-coming season.

Still this inert period of formless activity can be quite pleasant—a sort of drifting gently back into the main stream.

This year though, there is a disquieting thought that keeps intruding.

What sort of a professional season will Victoria be looking toward at the end of August, 1974?

A good deal depends on the facilities available and the present situation in that regard is so precarious that there is good reason for concern.

Unless some decision is made soon, some action taken, Victoria could find itself completely devoid of facilities that virtually every other city large and small, in Canada possesses.

FACTIONALISM

Divided by factionalism, by personal prejudice and ambition, confused by uninformed opinion and possible political manouevring, we could come face to face with at best a compromise.

And that, it is hardly necessary to point out, gives satisfaction to no one in the long term.

Let's look at some of the facts.

The capital city of one of the "have" provinces in Canada, Victoria and environs has a population rapidly approaching the 200,000-mark. As it has not been and has no likelihood of becoming an industrial centre, this otherwise happy prospect means few big payrolls and consequently less active circulation of money and a slimmer tax base.

Everything points to tourism as a major industry and we promote this with some vigor.

BIG BUSINESS

Conventions are also big business in the experience of many places but so far our moves in that direction have never gone beyond the discussion phase.

Counting heavily in our population are large numbers of retired people with settled incomes and established interests.

As the seat of government and with a lower than average industrial labor force, there is a heavy representation of civil service, the professions, teachers and artists of many kinds.

It would be interesting to discover what a computer would make of that information if asked to define Victoria's immediate requirement in the form of a major project.

With Premier Barrett's announcement that the subject is soon to be discussed with city officials it is more than ever intriguing to consider the probable answer.

ALTERNATIVES FEW

As things stand the alternatives are not many but they deserve the most earnest and informed consideration.

If — and this is not at all clear at the moment — a convention centre pure and simple is on the government's mind, Victoria could end up with the compromise situation of a costly building limited to occupation by conventions, trade shows, meetings, some indoor sports activity.

There is a vague possibility that we might also have the Royal Theatre, as a makeshift solution to the concert hall problem.

But suppose the Royal goes into limbo and suppose optimistically that the provincial government should embark on a concert-convention centre.

We would then have at least a three-year hiatus as far as the Victoria Symphony Orchestra is concerned. A serious matter.

The foundation's brief is the only thing going that offers in broad detail, a plan based on thoughtful studies.

COMPATIBLE?

The directors do not claim for it originality — its prototype has already been built and is working well in Regina. Nor do they consider it the final word. Nor even of necessity their baby if some other agency is willing to assume resonsibility.

There are quite rightly criticisms of the proposal for this and any other scheme from whatever source, should not be accepted without the closest examination and discussion.

The most general criticism expresses doubts as to the practicality of incorporating a convention hall, concert auditorium and other facilities in the same building.

This major argument led me to a telephone conversation this week with Mrs. Eleanor Hollihn who is assistant director of Regina's Saskatchewan Centre for the Arts, the building upon which the PCCF based its brief.

The building, now in its fourth year of operation, has convention facilities on the lower concourse, an exceptionally fine concert hall and many other activity centres on the upper.

The question put to Mrs. Hollihn was, is the combination successful—how well does it work?

She replied emphatically that it worked "very well indeed."

NO PROBLEMS

"We have had as many as five separate functions in the building at the same time," she stated, "with no major problems arising."

She mentions a 2,400 member Canadian Legion convention, auto shows, and an increased use of the convention facilities each year though Regina is only now setting up a convention bureau.

The Regina Symphony Orchestra performs its subscription season in the 2,029-seat concert hall as well as holding all rehearsals in the building.

Mrs. Hollihn also says that the centre's activities are shared by people over an area far beyond the boundaries of the city.

More conclusive evidence on the Regina Centre and the quite different operation in Saskatoon, is being gathered this weekend by Pacific Coast Centre president Allan Purdy, who has travelled to the two prairie cities for that specific purpose.

SEAGULL GIVEN MERCY FLIGHT

CHURCHILL (CP) — When it came down to a choice between a mercy flight and a mercy killing, there was only one thing for Rev. Gerry Stretch to do.

The Anglican minister flew the wounded gull he found on the streets of this Hudson Bay port to a Winnipeg animal hospital.

The minister said he doesn't know what the expenses will be but he's worried about two things only — getting the bird on the wing again and out of his son's bedroom where it left its calling card.

Exile to Return

ATHENS (UPI) — Composer Mikis Theodorakis has decided to return to Greece in December, the newspaper Nea says.

The newspaper quoted the 48-year-old composer-politician as saying, "My lawyers tell me there is no obstacle to my return and I plan to return and settle in Greece as soon as I complete a tour of South and North America."

The composer of Zorba the Greek who was once jailed by the military regime said he was included in the general amnesty granted by President George Papadopoulos last Sunday.

Although songs of Theodorakis' are played privately and in some Athens night clubs, Athens police director Nickolas Daskalopoulos told newsmen the music of the controversial composer is still banned.

"In accordance with existing police orders, whoever plays or sings his songs in public will be arrested," Daskalopoulos said.

GRAFFITI SUCCESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A year ago, director George Lucas couldn't get studio bosses to return his telephone calls. Today they're calling him.

What made the difference is American Graffiti.

It is a hauntingly accurate portrait of a teen-age night in a California town of 1962. To the background of 42 songs of the period, the young people do their thing at the high school prom, on the main street, in the drive-in and lover's lane.

"Easily the best movie so far this year," wrote Stephen Farber in the New York Times.

"One of the most important American films of the year," said Charles Champlin in the Los Angeles Times.

Lucas wears his new-found praise well. He has just turned 29 and might look like a teenager except for his trimmed brown beard. His view of the film world is understandably mature. He has been through the mill.

"I took American Graffiti to every major and minor company in Hollywood," said Lucas, "and every one of them turned it down . . .

"I finally got Universal to agree to back me, but only because I got my friend, Francis Ford Cappola, to serve as producer. We made theh deal the week that The Godfather came out, and they were impressed with Francis."

With Cappola as overseer, Lucas filmed American Graffiti in California in 28 days. Or rather, 28 nights, because the entire action takes place during a single night and early morning.

"I budgeted the picture at $800,000, but Universal insisted I make it for $600,000," Lucas said. "It ended up at $700,000, plus about $50,000." Lucas is a shining example of the new breed of film-maker emerging from the universities.

Bullfighters' Hospital Offers Special Skills

Dispatch of The Times, London

MADRID — Spain's bullfighters are angry because their private hospital in Madrid seems to be about to disappear under a mountain of red tape.

The Bullfighters' Hospital, founded in 1927 and owned by the Bullfighters' Benevolent Association, is staffed by specialists with long experience in treating the kind of injuries suffered by toreros. Many members of this dangerous profession owe their lives to surgeons there.

Their special medical skill is not much in demand in most countries, and it is one that ordinary traumatologists, whose experience is almost exclusively with the victims of traffic or work accidents, are not specifically trained to deal with.

For nearly half a century, bullfighters injured in distant provinces have been given first aid treatment, occasionally emergency surgery, and then sent to the Madrid hospital.

SPEED THROUGH TRAFFIC

More than once a week during the ring season, bullfighters' cars battle with holiday traffic to speed to Madrid, with members of an injured man's team cradling him in their arms on the long journey.

Sometimes they do not make it. Two years ago Pepe Mata, a young bullfighter, died on the trip to the capital from southwestern Spain because of a badly placed tourniquet. Manolete, one of the most famous bullfighters of all time, died in 1946 on the way from Linares in Southern Spain to Madrid.

In spite of the obvious risk of being taken a great distance before having an urgently needed operation, members of the profession have always had such confidence in surgeons at their own hospital, which admits only members of the bullfighters union, that they have preferred to accept the hazard.

When, early this year, Spain's bullfighters finally convinced the government that they should be entitled to the same social security benefits as those in trades and other professions, they won the right to free or inexpensive treatment at government-controlled hospitals.

SOCIETY ABSORBED

The Bullfighters' Mutual Aid Society, which had run the hospital under a rent-free contract with the Bullfighters' Benevolent Association, was absorbed by the national social security system. But instead of paying their voluntary dues to the Mutual Aid Society, bullfighters were taxed under social security laws.

The proceeds from the taxes were not passed on directly to the Mutual Aid Society, which in effect had become a small government sub-agency. So the Mutual Aid Society no longer had the money to operate the Bullfighters' Hospital. Neither had the Benevolent Association, which owns the hospital, but had never had to pay its running costs.

In fact, it seems that the Mutual Aid Society has not been able to find any government regulation authorizing it to run a hospital, much less one which admits only members of one profession.

As far as the social security system is concerned, the hospital does not exist officially, at least not as part of the string of government-controlled hospitals under its administration. There is apparently no provision in the laws or regulations for financing a bullfighters' hospital.

The president of the Benevolent Association, bullfighter Marcial Lalanda, and government officials have maintained a discreet silence, perhaps hoping to find a solution. Meantime, the bills are mounting up at the hospital, and creditors, as well as matadors, are wondering who is going to pay them.

Mediterranean's Own Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

ALMERIA, Spain (AP) — They call it Hollywood on the Mediterranean. The desert battles of Lawrence of Arabia, the armored victories of George Patton and uncounted shootouts between Italian actors disguised as western desperadoes all have been recorded on these plains of Spain.

Since 1954, Almeria has been host to more than 175 film companies from America, Italy, England, France—and even some from Spain. Why should the film makers descend on this placid Costa del Sol city of 120,000?

Why? Because of California-like weather; hills and canyons that resemble the old west. Sand dunes that can double for Arabia or Death Valley. Western towns better than those in Hollywood. An abundance of gypsy extras willing to work 10 hours a day for $8, plus $1.50 an hour for overtime vs. $35.65 daily for Hollywood extras.

STAR LEE MARVIN

Latest of the companies to visit Almeria is Harry Spikes, a western starring Lee Marvin. Director Richard Fleischer explains:

"This is a 'traveling western'—one in which the characters move from one town to another. It would be impossible to make in the United States, because the building of western sets would be prohibitive. There is one in Tucson, (Arizona) but that's about all.

"Here in Almeria, the western sets are all standing. And they are not just building fronts, either. I can move right into the bars and banks and shoot the interiors."

Several key personnel of Harry Spikes are English: the rest are workers from Madrid studios. Lee Marvin, making his first film in Spain, commented that the locals are just as efficient as Hollywood crews—"and they get the work done without making a big thing of it."

HAS DRAWBACKS

Filming in Almeria has its drawbacks, admitted Fleischer:

"We've had bad weather—sunshine, then overcast, then wind, so that it's hard to match shots. Also, there is the language barrier. You have to be careful with the signs the Spaniards make. For instance, the script called for a sign on a hamlet saloon. So the sign read: Hamlet Saloon. Another sign had the dollar sign backwards."

On a recent day Fleischer was directing a scene in which the three young desperadoes — Gary Grimes, Ron Howard, Charlie Martin Smith—mosey into a western town. The extensive set, built for one of Clint Eastwood's "Fistful of Dollars" films, sat on a hill covered with cactus.

To a California visitor, the set looks exactly like the one Gary Cooper trod in "High Noon." The townspeople in western garb might have come from Central Casting.

"They're members of the English colony in Almeria." explained Fleischer. "They look fine, but when they open their mouths, they talk like Charles Laughton. For speaking roles we've had to bring actors from Hollywood or hire Americans who live in Madrid."

VACUUM IN KUNG FU STUDIOS

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The death of Chinese-American film star Bruce Lee in July has created a vacuum in the lucrative film industry here which local studios will find hard to fill.

Lee, whose swashbuckling epics have become known as "eastern westerns," died of an undisclosed illness. He was only 32, and on the threshold of international fame.

Raymond Chow, head of the Golden Harvest Co. and Lee's business partner, described his death as a big loss to the industry.

Run Run Shaw, president of the Shaw Brothers Organization, Hong Kong's biggest production unit, believes one of several actors here will fill the vacuum in due course. But he declines to speculate on who it might be.

Of the leading martial arts actors in Hong Kong and Taiwan, Wang Yu, Chen Sin, Chen Kuan-tai, David Chieng and Ti Lung are probably the most eligible candidates to compete for the top spot.

They all have talent and have starred in the highly profitable blood-and-thunder epics, popular throughout Southeast Asia.

Among these actors, Wang Yu stands out as the No. 1 contender. A black belt in karate, Wang was the first Chinese actor to star in a film which grossed over one million Hong Kong dollars $225,000 — The One-armed Swordsman.

First Step To Freedom

Age 14 . . .

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Caril Ann Fugate, the companion of mass killer Charles Starkweather on an 11-murder rampage, moved a long step toward freedom Friday. The state parole board recommended commutation of her life sentence to pave the way for parole.

The parole board found that Miss Fugate, 30, who was 14 when she accompanied her boyfriend on the slaying spree in 1958, is "an acceptable risk for parole consideration." It recommendel that the state pardon board commute the life sentence to a fixed number of years.

If the pardon board makes an affirmative decision, the parole board will then set the number of years and make a decision as to when parole will be granted.

Jacqueline Crawford, superintendent of the State Reformatory for Women at York where Miss Fugate is imprisoned, said the prisoner was "thrilled and deeply touched."

"She believes it was the hand of God that directed and guided the decision," Mrs. Crawford said.

"She deeply appreciates all of the efforts that have brought this about. She realizes that because of the magnitude of the case that the people closely involved have done much soul-searching before arriving at their decision to recommend commutation."

At Bennet, Neb., the mother of one of the murder victims said, "I don't think they should have done it," when informed of the board's decision.

"I just think she should stay there — it is a lot too early for her to be paroled," Mrs. Mabel King Swale, mother of slain Carol King, said. "When she was convicted they said it should be a life sentence. Now it's all changed."

Miss Fugate turned her efforts toward a parole in recent months when her battle for exoneration in the courts failed. The U.S. Supreme Court last year decided it would not hear her case.

Caril at 14 accompanied Starkweather from the Lincoln area to Douglas, Wyo., leaving Lincoln, a city of 140,000, gripped in terror and 11 victims of all ages dead of gunshot and stab wounds.

She was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in 1959. Starkweather was convicted and executed the same year.

Anik Refuses Medic's Pleas

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY (CP) — A Queen Charlotte Island doctor's plan to use the Anik communications satellite to experiment in delivery of specialized medical care to rural areas has been frustrated by lack of money.

Dr. Hugh McGuire complained Thursday that although there are Anik channels not being used, the government-controlled Telestat Canada Corporation refuses to make channels available without payment.

Dr. McGuire, with the support of provincial and federal officials and medical associations, has applied to the federal communications department to approve his use of a channel on an experimental satellite to be sent into orbit in 1975.

"It's not going to cost anyone anything — the equipment is already up there and three channels are not being used," he said. "And Telestat Canada is in the black, they're making money."

The proposal involves two-way television communication between a rural hospital and an urban centre which would give the rural hospital instant access to specialists and specialized facilities, cutting costly delays.

Gordon MacFarlane, B.C. Telephone Co. vice-president and Telestat director, said Telestat is sympathic but that its policy directs that it cannot give away the use of a channel when other users are paying highly for the service. He confirmed that channels are available.

The full-time use of an Anik channel would cost about $3 million yearly and would require a ground station costing about $500,000, MacFarlane said.

Telestat is a private corporation created by the federal government in 1969 to establish satellite telecommunications in Canada on a commercial basis.

B.C. Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the provincial government is interested in Dr. McGuire's plan, "but there is conflicting opinion on how successful it would be."

"There is an interest in the concept, but I don't have enough positive information," Cocke said. "We'd have to see an indication of very definite results and at the present time we just don't see it.

"We have so many other priorities."

'JUST CALL ME EXCELLENCY'— KISSINGER

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Henry Kissinger, meeting reporters for the first time since his nomination as state secretary, was asked to clear up a minor question.

Should reporters continue calling him Dr. Kissinger or switch to Mr. Secretary:

"I don't stand on protocol," said Kissinger, with a twinkle in his eye, "if you just call me Excellency that will be sufficient."

Weddings

King — Seary

On June 9, 1973, Garden City United Church was the scene of a lovely summer evening wedding at a double-ring ceremony with Reverend G. Smith officiating, when Miss Karen Seary, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Seary, became the bride of Mr. Rick King, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. King, all of Victoria.

The bride, wearing an entrain gown of embroidered Swiss dot, the neckline and cuffs of which were outlined in pleated nylon ruffles, was given in marriage by her father. Her maid of honor was Miss Linda Cockroft and her bridesmaids were Misses Cathy Zelmer, Sharon King and Anne Sheppard. The groom was attended by Mr. Robert Rowan as best man, and ushers were Messrs. Ron King, Laurie Bullivant and Sandy Bell.

The beautiful flower arrangements in the Church and at the reception were by the mother of the groom and Mrs. V. McPhee, and the wedding cake was decorated by the groom's grandmother, Mrs. R. King.

The happy couple travelled to Washington State for their honeymoon and are now residing in Victoria.

Terison — Flint

A colourful double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend Peter Isles on June 30, 1973, at 2 p.m., when Darleen Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Flint, became the bride of Mr. Graham Stewart Terison, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Terison.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a traditional full-length white gown of lagoda satin with a Gibson girl neckline and sleeves, and a detachable chapel train. The bodice and hemline were appliqued with Chantilly lace. A headpiece of organza roses "borrowed" from her sister held her full-length three-tiered veil trimmed with matching Chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and white stephanotis with rosebuds trailing from white streamers. The groom wore a matching pink rosebud. Matron of honor, Mrs. Heather Thoresen, sister of the bride, wore a blue floral full-length gown. Bridesmatrons Mrs. Marilyn Payne and Mrs. Janet Lovestone and flower-girl Jennifer Robson wore identical pink floral full-length gowns. The attendants carried colonial bouquets of white daisies with matching daisies in their hair. The groom, best man Mr. Michael Pedneault, and ushers Mr. John Corkill and Mr. Lon Lovestone, wore white dinner jackets with pink carnations and black formal pants. The bride's mother chose a pink full-length gown, while the groom's mother chose a mint green full-length gown. Both mothers wore a double gardenia. Mr. Earnest Collett proposed a toast to the bride at a reception held at the Odd Fellows Hall. Telegrams were read from Amsterdam, Barcelona and Drayton Valley. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered cake flanked by pink rosebuds and white candles.

During the reception, the bride and groom drank a toast to each other from a silver marriage cup given to them by the groom's brother, Donald. Miss Linda Brule attended the bride's Book. For their honeymoon travelling in Western Canada, the bride wore a two-toned turquoise and white fitted dress with matching white hat and accessories complemented by a pink rosebud corsage. The groom was dressed in a contemporary-styled medium blue suit with a maroon and grey overcheck, white shirt and maroon bow tie.

Harlan — Hales

A lovely double-ring ceremony took place June 30, 1973, at 5 o'clock, in Metropolitan United Church, when Reverend A. E. King united in marriage Wendy Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Hales, 1720 Ash Road, Victoria, to Robin Douglas Harlan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Harlan.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Reginald Hales. The bride's matron of honor was Mrs. Sandie Hales and the bridesmaids were Miss Wendy Harlan and Mrs. Jean Haug. Mr. Ted Marson attended as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Gary Hales and Jim Boyd.

Meloche — Rimmington

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Rimmington announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Louise, to Mr. Joseph Alexander Meloche, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blaise Meloche, all of Victoria.

The wedding took place on Saturday, August 18, 1973, in St. Patrick's Church, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Henderson Road.

McCubbin — Camozzi

Wedding vows were exchanged August 4, 1973, in the Queenswood House of Studies Chapel, between Sheena Rose Camozzi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Camozzi, Rossland, B.C., and Thomas John McCubbin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCubbin, Victoria. Father J. Jackson officiated. Miss Karen Camozzi, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. Terrance Blagdon, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man.

A reception followed at Craigdarroch Commons, University of Victoria. After a honeymoon at Parksville and Rossland, the happy couple will make their home in Prince George.

Oliver — West

Mrs. W. S. Oliver, 1575 Begbie Street, Victoria, B.C., is pleased to announce the marriage of her only son, William David, to Janet West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. R. West of Eltham Park, London, England, on July 28, 1973, in St. Luke's Church, Eltham Park.

Hewton — Thompson

Mrs. G. Ashman is pleased to announce the marriage of her daughter, Barbara, to Wm. A. Hewton, son of Mrs. H. Hewton of Toronto.

The wedding took place August 20, 1973.

Chan — Woo

In a lovely double-ring ceremony on June 23, 1973, in the Chinese Presbyterian Church, Bakke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wai Woo, was united in marriage to Mr. George Chan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wah Chan, by Reverend Ling. Attendants were Lolita Wong, Bernise Kong, Poky Togias, Marina Morgan, and flower-girl Wendy Lowe. Best man was Mr. Allen Ma, and ushers were Messrs. William Lam, Peter Lam and Clifton Mak.

O'Malley — Morrison

A double-ring candlelight ceremony was solemnized on Saturday, August 11, 1973, at 7 p.m., in Metropolitan Church Chapel, when Linda Dianné, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Morrison, Yale Street, exchanged marriage vows with Lawrence John, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert O'Malley, Quadra Street. Reverend Alex Calder officiated and soloist Mrs. Lois Klassen sang Wedding Prayer and Prayer Perfect, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Ursula Thomas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white organza trimmed with velvet lace and buttons. A pearl tiara held her chapel veil and she carried a cascade of pale pink roses and stephanotis. The bride's sister, Mrs. Pat Smith, was matron of honor, Mrs. Judy Tanner, bridesmatron, Miss Barbara Landels and Miss Karen O'Malley, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids and Tammy Smith, niece of the bride, the flower-girl. The attendants wore identical floor-length mauve dresses trimmed with white lace and carried white lace muffs, the flower-girl, a basket of ribbon flowers. Best man, Ken Nott, and the ushers were the groom's brother, Wayne, and his brother-in-law, Gary Smith.

A reception followed at Holyrood House. The bride and groom's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. Pink roses in bud vases and candles completed the table. The bride's uncle, Mr. James Watt, gave the toast. The happy couple left for a trip Up-Island, after which they will live in Victoria.

Out-of-town guests included: Mrs. L. O'Malley (Senior), Mr. and Mrs. K. McConecky, Mr. and Mrs. D. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. F. Booth, Miss Andrea Pettie, Mr. and Mrs. B. Gollob, Mr. and Mrs. James Watt, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watt, Mr. and Mrs. James Watt (Jr.), Mrs. E. Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Morrison, Miss Louise Jones, Miss Barbara Landels, Mr. and Mrs. A. Landels, Mr. Mark Mikulec, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Thomas, Mrs. J. Gibson.

Hodgins — Conyers

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend R. O. Wilkes in St. Michael and All Angels' Church, August 18, 1973, at 2 p.m., when Katheron Ann, oldest daughter of Jim Conyers, became the bride of Wayne Hodgins, elder son of Babe and Bert Hodgins.

Given in marriage by her father, the dark-haired bride chose a white sata peau de soie gown featuring a keyhole organza neckline with Venetian lace. Kathy's long train was trimmed with (her bridesmaids) hot pink, heart-shaped lace. Her chapel-length veil was of silk illusion and she carried white gladiolas surrounded with pink rosebuds. Matron of honor, Mrs. Susan Steenson (bride's twin sister), bridesmaids Barbara Conyers, bride's sister, Wendy Hodgins, groom's sister and Ev. Raine, wore identical pink polyester gowns, and carried crescent-shaped bouquets of white carnations and pink rosebuds. The groom and best man, Chris Kissinger, wore black tuxedos. Murray Steenson, bride's brother-in-law, Bruce Dobinson (cousin), and Pat Shea, ushered. Little Terry Olfrey, ring-bearer, wore a white jacket tuxedo that matched the ushers ensembles. The elegant cake was made and decorated by the bride's aunt, Peggy Dobinson. After a heavenly lawn reception at the groom's parents' home, the newlyweds motored to Disneyland. The bride chose a yellow and white suit with matching orchid corsage for going away.

Out-of-town guests were Roland Hanson's family, Strathmore, Alex Manzies' family, Nanaimo, Pat and Bill Cottingham, Comox, Kingsville, Ontario, relatives phoned best wishes to Wayne and Kathy.

Palmer — Maloney

The marriage is announced of Miss Nancy Eileen Maloney, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Maloney of Falls Church, Virginia, USA, to Mr. Patrick Lang Palmer, only son of Lieutenant-Commander E. Palmer (Ret'd) and Mrs. Palmer, 1280 Pike Street, Victoria. The ceremony took place in St. Joseph's Church, Victoria, in August 12, 1973.

The young couple are residing in Burnaby, where they are both doing post graduate studies at Simon Fraser University.

Evans — Browne

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on August 4, at 2 p.m., in the St. George-the-Martyr Anglican Church, Cadboro Bay, when Susan Elizabeth, younger daughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. O. R. Browne of Victoria, exchanged marriage vows with Rodney Ifor Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Evans, also of Victoria. The Reverend Charles Bishop officiated. The groom's father was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length white gown of flocked nylon over satin with full sleeves and a high neckline and bodice trimmed with tiny pearls. Her four-tiered long embroidered veil was caught in the arrangement of white organza flowers which framed her face. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and white stephanotis. The maid of honor, Mrs. Dianne McVean, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Miss Jill Remple, a cousin, wore floor-length gowns similar to the bride's, in cornflower blue and white dotted nylon, with large-brimmed hats trimmed to match. They carried bouquets of yellow daisies and white baby's breath. The little flower-girl, Kirsty Evans, niece of the groom, was sweet in a gown of cornflower blue with tiny flowers in her hair. She carried a basket of yellow daisies. The best man was Mr. Michael Evans, brother of the groom, and Messrs. Brian Alexander and Len Fraser were ushers. The mother of the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk organza in muted shades of blues and greens, with a large-brimmed green hat. The mother of the groom chose a long gown of champagne silk jersey with matching full-brim hat.

Schinkel — Pilgrim

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pilgrim, 4434 Rocky Point Road, are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Linda Marie, to Stephen Raymond Schinkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Schinkel of San Francisco, California.

The ceremony took place August 8, 1973, in Virginia City, Nevada.

8 CARD OF THANKS

My sincere thanks are extended to all our kind friends, relatives and neighbors who sent good wishes, cards, flowers, etc. during my recent stay in Royal Jubilee Hospital. Thanks also the wonderful staff in the Coronary Care Unit and the Doctors and Staff in the Open-Heart Surgery Unit—also to Dr. Carl Whiteside and the Central Saanich Volunteer Ambulance Service. I am most grateful to you all for the wonderful and kind attention I have received. — Mrs. E. V. (Molly) Bennett.

We would like to express our deepest thanks to the many friends, neighbors and relatives for their expressions of kindness and sympathy shown through cards and offerings and donations to the B.C. Heart Foundation in the recent passing of a beloved husband and father, Samuel S. Stentaford. Special thanks to Hull Forman dockyard, C.F.B. Esquimalt, also Padre Kendall for his kind and comforting words. — Mrs. Louise Stentaford and family.

Bernhard Schulze, parents and family wish to thank their friends for the many kindnesses shown to them following Jutta's sudden death. They have been greatly helped by the concern shown by everyone they know.

I wish to thank all my friends and neighbours, for their kindness and help, during the recent loss of my beloved husband William. My heartfelt thanks to all. Mrs. M. Graham (Marion and family).

9 IN MEMORIAM

EADE — In loving memory of my dear husband, George Eade. Loving Dad of Edwin Eade, Grandfather of Tom Eade, George and Larry Eade.
The memories I have,
From day to day,
No length of time can take away.
—In silence I remember, Ena Eade.

MAYNE — Roy L. In loving memory of a dear husband, dad and grandpa who passed away suddenly Aug. 26, 1971.
God saw the road was getting rough
And the hills were hard to climb
So He closed your weary eyelids and Whispered "Peace be thine".
—Sadly missed by his wife Florrie, daughters Brenda, Sharon and families.

McCLURE —In loving memory of Thomas Adams (Tommy) McClure, who passed away August 25th, 1955.
— Always remembered by his sister, brother-in-law and niece.

RAE — In loving memory of my beloved husband David L. Rae, who passed away August 27, 1968.
—Always remembered by his loving wife, Eileen.

RULE — In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away August 25, 1971.
Lonely is the home without you,

Life to me is not the same,
All the world would be like heaven,
If I could have you back again.
What he suffered he told but few,
He did not deserve what he went through.
Tired and weary, he made no fuss,
But tried so hard to stay with me.
Two tired eyes are sleeping,
Two willing hands are still,
The one who worked so hard for me,
Is resting at God's will.
—Sadly missed by his wife, Annie.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
TREE PLANTING PROJECT 92G11-20
SITUATED ON FURRY CREEK
Contractors are advised that the British Columbia Forest Service intends to let a planting contract in the Fall of 1973 for the planting of 185,000 trees on 307 acres, more or less, situated on part of T.L. 7500 and adjacent V.C.L., 2½ miles Southeast of Britannia Beach.
In order that prospective bidders may have an opportunity to view the planting site and acquaint themselves with conditions on the ground, the Forest Ranger at Squamish will supply directions to interested parties to the area. Interested parties are advised to examine the contract area for themselves before submitting bids.
Sealed tenders for this contract will be received by the Chief Forester up to 4 p.m. Thursday, September 13, 1973, except that for specific reasons the Chief Forester may extend such time.
Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the tender form supplied, properly signed and witnessed, and accompanied by a deposit in the form of a certified cheque or money order in the sum of $50, payable to the Minister of Finance.
Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting."
The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the Forest Service reserves the right to limit the number of contracts held by any party at any one time.
Prospective bidders are advised that this contract will be awarded only on proof that the successful bidder has arranged with the Workmen's Compensation Board for the necessary coverage of all employees and/or partners who will be working on the contract.
Note that prior to commencement of planting the successful bidder will be required to submit a deposit in the total amount of five per cent of the bid price.
Planting stock required for the contract will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service f.o.b. at a place designated by the Forest Service.
Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria; the District Forester, Vancouver; or the Forest Ranger at Squamish.

Americans Take Cup Tennis Lead

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Chris Evert and Patti Hogan won opening-round matches Friday night to give the United States a 2-0 lead over Britain in the best-of-seven Wightman Cup tennis competition at Longwood Cricket Club.

The 18-year-old Miss Evert defeated Britain's playing-captain, Virginia Wade, 6-4, 6-2, and Miss Hogan downed Veronica Burton 6-4, 6-3.

Als Place Mira On Injury List

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes have placed quarterback George Mira on the injury reserve list of the Eastern Football Conference.

Mira, who fractured his ribs in the Als' 22-21 loss to the Argonauts in Toronto last week, will sit out 30 days or four league games, whichever comes first.

Porno Marks Brazil Booze

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Despite a government crackdown on allegedly naughty magazines, movies and phonograph records, Brazil's powerful national drink — cachaca — continues to reach millions of people under brand names that would make good copy in any porno publication.

Some 300,000 distilleries throughout Latin America's biggest country annually churn out 55 million gallons of the cheap rum-like drink, whose alcohol content runs from 20 to 54 per cent. There are more than 2,000 major brands here.

Cachaca — pronounced cah-shah'-sah — is considered generally good for what ails you. Brazilian men believe a few belts of the stuff improves their sexual capacity, and some of the brand names leave little to the imagination.

Printable brands include the Portuguese translations for Super Hot, Cockold's Consolation and Temptation. One brand of cachaca features a picture of a naked woman on the bottom of the bottle. You have to drain the bottle to see it.

Made from fermented sugar cane juice, cachaca first appeared in Brazil more than 400 years ago. It originally was a drink for African slaves but now is enjoyed by Brazilians of all colors and economic levels and even by foreigners.

"Cachaca is aged by driving slowly from the bar to your hotel," a visiting American cracked.

Cachaca is the base for countless Brazilian slang expressions, terms of endearment, jokes and proverbs. For example: What is more powerful than God? Answer: cachaca, because God grants good sense, but only cachaca can take it away.

Offerings of cachaca bottles, cigars, food and candles — intended to placate the devil — can be found on city streets throughout Brazil every night. Nobody steals cachaca from these spell-casting layouts, for fear the devil will turn his wrath on such sacrilege.

Government figures show more cachaca is sold in Brazil every year than any other alcoholic drink except beer.

Cachaca is a big favorite among working men, because it is cheap. A three-ounce shot over the bar costs the equivalent of eight cents. A large bottle of Brazilian beer costs around 35 cents.

A confirmed Cachaca drinker first spills a drop out of the glass onto the floor or the side of the counter "for the voodoo spirits."

Then he gulps the drink down and follows it with a piece of spicy sausage or salted codfish — known in Brazilian slang as a "takes-the-taste-away."

Ad Case Adjourned

TORONTO (CP) — A charge of misleading advertising against Dominion Stores Ltd. of Toronto was adjourned Thursday in provincial court until Sept. 13 when a date for trial will be set.

The company is charged under a section of the Combines Investigation Act with raising prices after publicly declaring that it would not.

The indictment allows the company to decide whether it will elect trial by lower court, county court or Supreme Court judge.

73-74 Youth Council

Meet the 15 young people who will be helping Eaton's keep a young point of view

Some of our city's brightest and most energetic young men and women were chosen to make up this advisory board. For the next 10 months they will be getting practical behind-the-counter selling experience (after school hours of course); they'll learn the everyday operation of a big department store during lectures and seminars with Eaton's own staff members; they'll have the most fun organizing and taking part in fashion shows and special events where the accent is on youth.

As career people of the future and as consumers of the future their ideas and their reactions to merchandise and merchandising is important to us at Eaton's. To you, our now-customer, you'll find their genuine enthusiasm and smiling attention to your needs will make shopping at Eaton's this year extra special.

We wish them luck. More than that we hope each and every one of them will enjoy their year with Eaton's. Come and meet our new Youth Council members during Eaton's Back-to-School special events.

Halt-Strike Row Grows

Snake Dance

MONTREAL — Pressure built on the federal government today to end a crippling national rail strike by legislation, following collapse of the mediation efforts of Judge Alan Gold of Quebec provincial court.

Unions, management and Judge Gold, who tried since Aug. 8 to bring the two parties to an agreement on a new contract, told reporters after a 75-minute meeting Friday night that further mediation would be useless.

Across the country, there was a growing clamor from governments, business and industry leaders for settlement of the dispute which has produced escalating layoffs, industrial shutdowns and disruption of resident and tourist passenger transportation.

Prime Minister Trudeau meanwhile was reported "treating the strike very seriously" but has not cancelled plans for a private holiday next week in the eastern Arctic.

Within 24 hours of the general strike call, industrial curtailments and closings were reported.

In the East Kootenay, the huge Kaiser Resources Ltd. coal operation was "almost completely shut down," a spokesman said Friday.

Two service stations in Kelowna have been advised that they will receive no more gasoline until the national rail strike ends.

Most gas for the Okanagan valley is shipped via rail to Kamloops from Alberta and then distributed by tanker truck.

A spokesman for bridge service station here, a Standard outlet, said his distributor had advised him he would receive no more gas until the strike ends.

The spokesman said the station would cut its operation to 18 hours from 24, and said he expeoted the tanks would be dry by Monday.

A spokesman for Stanburn Texaco said he had received the same notice, but said his supplies would last for about two weeks.

In Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., 600 employees of Abitibi Paper will be laid off Sunday when the plant there shutsdown. Abitibi annouonced other plants would close.

General Motors in Oshawa announced a shutdown Monday "until further notice" at Oshawa and Ste. Therese, Que., involving layoffs of 8,000 and 1,500 men and Chrysler, American Motors and Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. all predicted their operations will halt by the end of next week.

With CP Air operations reduced to 45-per-cent capacity by a machinists strike, Air Canada has been left to meet most of the demands of long-distance travellers.

An Air Canada spokesman said "We've added 30 to 40 flights across the system and we're handling 40,000 to 42,000

CIGARETTES HIJACKED

MONTREAL (CP)—Three trailer trucks loaded with $500,000 worth of cigarettes were stolen from a suburban St. Leonard transport company yard Friday night, police said.

The trucks, 1973 Mack models colored blue and white with Rothman's painted on the side, were hijacked from the Imperial Roadways Ltd. lot by at least three armed men.

Police said the incident occurred about 11:25 p.m. but was only discovered an hour later when a company employee arriving on the premises found several workers handcuffed and gagged.

Some of the workers told police they had heard shots fired outside the building.

Police said the bandits, described as dangerous, had Manitoba licence plates on their vans.

IRA Bomb Hits Bank of England

Times News Service

LONDON — Three people were injured today, one seriously, when a bomb exploded at the Bank of England and 30,000 fans evacuated from a test cricket match after a bomb threat was reported at the grounds.

Police and customs officials, meanwhile doubled their guard at British airports and docks to seal the country from bomb shipments.

The 30,000 cricket fans were asked to leave following a warning that a bomb had been planted in the North London grounds.

An announcer asked everyone to "move quietly and slowly out of the ground by the main exits."

The announcer said: "No one — repeat no one — must attempt to take a car out of the ground."

Today's explosion at the Bank of England was the latest in a series of bomb attacks that have swept London during the last week. Police have linked the attacks to splinter groups of the Irish Republican Army.

Friday, a letter bomb injured two people at London's stock exchange, the first injuries in the wave of fire bombs, letter bombs and other explosive devices across this city.

The police spokesman said the incident "occurred simultaneously to other suspicious objects being found all over London."

Today's bomb exploded in the bank's post room as three men were trying to surround it with sand-bags.

The Belfast explosion demolished a garage behind a vacant house in he Cliftonville area, police said. A fierce fire followed.

Police said they found parts of three bodies. They said they suspected the garage had been used as a bomb factory for the making of guerrilla explosive devices.

A detective said police also were convinced the explosives used inthe letter bombs were stolen from a government-licensed Northern Ireland factory supposedly run under strict supervision.

Swedes Crack Vault

Times News Services

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Fifty armed police in bullet-proof vests cut through a vault with acetylene torches today and seized a gunman and a convict who had held four persons hostage in a bank in the Swedish capital since Thursday.

Police inched their way into the bank while the two and their hostages, three women and a man, were asleep in the vault.

When he took over the bank Thursday the gunman demanded $650,000 ransom and the release of convicted Swedish criminal Clark Olofsson. Swedish officials complied.

Police first believed the gunman was a confused 21-year-old bank robber, but later speculated he was an escaped convict acting in collusion with Olofsson.

Police had identified the gunman as Kaj Hansson, 21, a Swedish citizen who is married to an American. But Insp. Kark Gunnar Bjoerklund said today that the gunman may not be Hansson but a 32-year-old safecracker who recently escaped from a prison in Kalmar in southeast Sweden.

Both Hansson and the safecracker know Olofsson, police said.

Earlier in the day, a shot was fired into the bank in an effort to keep the gunman awake for negotiations on the fate of the hostages. The gunman, the convict and the hostages went into the vault Friday night.

Police tactics have been to try to wear down the gunman by forcing him to stay awake.

Police stuck to their refusal to let the gunman escape by car with some of the hostages. And Prime Minister Olof Palme went on television Friday night to say the police should not give in.

The authorities have acceded to all the gunman's other requests.

Now Canada Mail Strike Looming

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An official of the Canadian Postmasters' Association said Friday there is a possibility of a national postal strike within a few weeks.

Squire Wallace, president of the association's Ontario council and postmaster at nearby Dorchester, said in an interview that a year of negotiations with the federal treasury board has been frustrating.

Mr. Wallace, a member of a four-man bargaining committee, said the committee rejected a report by conciliation board chairman J. S. Gunn of Winnipeg because wages offered were too low.

The postmasters' bargaining team then drew up its own minority report, rejecting the treasury board offer, and this report is being distributed for approval by 8,000 postmasters across Canada.

The association has been in a legal position to strike since Thursday, Mr. Wallace said.

He added that he expects overwhelming support from members for the minority report rejecting the post office's offer.

If postmasters walk out, the Canadian Union of Postal Employees has agreed to honor picket lines and mail service would be effectively tied up across the country, he said.

William Walsh, another member of the bargaining committee, said in a minority report being mailed to members that the post office is not complying with the federal minimum wage law in its offer.

In the last postmasters' contract which expired in September, 1972, maximum earnings were $9,093, but some postmasters who worked shorter hours in small communities received only $1,000, he said.

HIJACKER TOLD HE CAN'T LAND

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A hijacker brandishing a pistol and hand grenades commandeered a Yemen Airways DC-6 passenger plane today and tried to have it land in Kuwait on the Persian Gulf, airport sources reported.

Airport officials in Beirut said, however, that Kuwaiti authorities refused permission to land. The plane was reported carrying about 20 persons and its destination, after the Kuwaiti refusal, was unknown.

Airports in neighboring Saudi Arabia also were reported to be closing to discourage the hijacker from trying to land on Saudi soil.

The unidentified hijacker, whose motives were unknown, commandeered the plane on a flight from North Yemen to Ethiopia. He ordered it to land at Djibouti, capital of the French Territory of the Afars and the Issas on the southern end of the Red Sea.

The craft stayed on the ground long enough to refuel, French officials in Djibouti said.

Only Week of Feed Left For Island Livestock

There is less than seven days feed left for chickens and cattle on Vancouver Island and the situation is becoming critical as a result of the national rail strike, the president of the Vancouver Island Farmers' Institute said today.

Brian Hoole, an Elk Lake farmer, said the feed supplymight last for a week and after that farmers will have to scrounge feed from wherever they can.

"The situation couldn't possibly be worse," Hoole said.

"When our supplies run out, we'll try to get feed from Vancouver by going over there and hauling it back ourselves, but the supplies in Vancouver are slim too."

A farmers' meeting was held in Duncan Friday with provincial agriculture minister Dave Stupich. The more than 35 farmers at the meeting voted to send a telegram to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau demanding something be done to stop the rail strike.

The telegram was sent with Stupich's blessing, who "supports our moves and is on our side all the way," Hoole said.

The situation affects all chicken and cattle farmers on Vancouver Island, Hoole said, and all those who attended Friday's emergency meeting voiced their support for an injunction to stop the strike which is now entering the second day of a 24-hour national walkout.

"So few people realize just what a state the farmers are in," Hoole said.

"We don't really expect to get anything out of the telegram we sent, but we have to do somethingabout it."

At Friday's meeting, representatives of two Vancouver Island feed suppliers, Nanaimo Co-operative and Buckerfields, told the farmers theirsupplies were quickly running out.

"They told us exactly what they have in stock and just how long it will last and it's not long," Hoole said.

Phil Moody of Buckerfield's feed manufacturers in Duncan said his company will have to shut down feed pro-

HIGHWAY TOLL usually has little impact as deaths come in ones and twos. But this year, in the Hamilton Spectator's circulation area, 146 men, women and children have died on the roads. To show what this figure really looks like, the paper arranged with police, firemen and the city recreation department to show in one picture what the highway's death toll really looks like.

Bread Probe

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said Friday the Manitoba government will launch a formal investigation of proposed increases in the price of bread if the federal government doesn't undertake a similar study.

Referring to suggestions by industry spokesmen that the loaf price may rise by as much as six cents, Schreyer said "there is no evidence that an increase of that magnitude is warranted.

He told a news conference he believes the provinces have the constitutional authority to regulate the price of foodstuffs, but it likely would require legislative authority before the government could take action.

Navigator Describes Clubbing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nigel Ingram, navigator of the nuclear protest vessel Greenpeace III, said Friday night he was clubbed unconscious last week by armed French sailors who boarded the Greenpeace in international waters.

Ingram, who arrived in Vancouver from Hao Island, about 500 miles southeast of Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific, where France has been conducting atmospheric nuclear tests, said he was below deck when he heard the Greenpeace engine accelerate suddenly.

"I heard a series of thumps on deck, then I heard one of the girls screaming," he said at a news conference.

Aboard the Greenpeace were Ingram, a 26-year-old Briton, New Zealand women Ann-Marie Horn and Mary Lornie and skipper Dave McTaggart of Vancouver.

Skipper McTaggart is in hospital in Papeete, Tahiti, suffering from an eye injury he says was inflicted by French sailors with truncheons who boarded the Greenpeace from a rubber dinghy.

Ingham said he rushed above deck and "as I emerged on deck my hands were held from behind and my head and neck were pushed forward.

"As my head was pushed forward I saw two men who were armed with clubs in their hands and knives which were strapped to their waist or thighs.

"... I saw the rubber dinghy on which was sitting, between two Frenchmen, Dave McTaggart with a rope around his middle.

"He was obviously unconscious and had been thumped but was being held up.

"The righthand side of his face and shirt were obscured by blood.

"Then I felt two sharp blows on the back of my head and I lost consciousness."

He said when he woke up on the deck of the vessel, men were kicking him about the neck, chest and groin. He then lost consciousness again.

"I can identify by description four men who were carrying clubs," Ingram said. "I can identify by description seven men who took part in the raid and I can identify by description one man with a gun."

Ingram filed a disposition with a Vancouver lawyer about his experience, which is to be forwarded to the external affairs department in Ottawa and to the British Government.

The French have denied that the sailors boarding the vessel were armed, and say the Greenpeace crew resisted the seizure of the vessel.

Allende Government in Ruins

Santiago Violence Continues

Times News Services

SANTIAGO — President Salvador Allende's alliance with the military was almost in ruins today with a third military member of his cabinet apparently preparing to leave the government.

Informed sources said Allende was organizing a major cabinet reshuffle to replace the crumbling "national security cabinet," formed only 17 days ago to include the four commanders of the armed services and the paramilitary police.

Allende angrily attacked his political opponents Friday night soon after still one more group of protesters staged violent demonstrations against his government.

The president issued a tough statement accusing the congressional opposition of virtually fomenting "civil war" and told critical legislators there was only one legal way to get rid of him — impeachment.

The students, who got to within two blocks of the presidential palace were where Allende was at his desk, were protesting a government plan to extend Chile's current southern hemisphere winter school vacations.

The military were brought in to end a crippling anti-government road transport strike, now in its 31st day, and crush an accompanying wave of terrorist violence.

But the strike, by the owners of Chile's 45,000 privately-owned trucks, was still on today.

Violence has continued with an official total of 527 acts of sabotage and terrorism and anti-government riots in Santiago.

The failure of the military ministers to end the troubles has brought them under growing pressure, from the opposition and from within their forces, to quit the government.

Only Gen. Jose Maria Sepulveda, commander of the police, appears still firmly settled in his post as minister for lands and settlements.

The national-security experiment began collapsing Monday when Gen. Cesar Ruiz resigned as transport minister and air force commander when tough measures failed to force a settlement with the truck owners.

And Friday night Adm. Raul Montero, the finance minister, was officially reported to have resumed command of the navy.

He had left the post temporarily to take up his portfolio.

Tourist Men to Sue Ferry Union

A group of Vancouver Island businessmen is going to sue the union representing 2,000 B.C. Ferries workers for damages caused by the five-day ferry strike.

"Our lawyers have said to us, 'Yes, we think you've got a good case'," said Bob Wright of Sealanl of the Pacific, one of those in the suit.

The businessmen say they suffered heavy losses during the strike because the tourist traffic was cut off.

Involved in the suit are restaurant owners, motel owners, and many other tourist operators, said Wright. The number will probably be more than 20 businesses, and possibly as many as 40, he said.

Lawyer Louis Lindholm has been instructed to proceed with the suit against the B.C. Government Employees Union, marine branch (unlicenced), he said.

The suit will be filed in B.C. Supreme Court probably next week, said Wright.

The walkout of B.C. Ferries workers began Aug. 17 and ended five days later when a new contract with the provincial government was ratified.

Wright admitted the suit may be difficult to win, but added that it involved a new area of law so he and his partners had a chance of winning. After losing so much on the strike, it was worth it to gamble a few thousand more on the court action, he said.

Also, the fact that the strike was illegal will strengthen the case, said Wright.

Sealand lost about $20,000 during the strike, said Wright, and even now attendance is way down.

"We just won't recover. The season is wiped out," he said. Small tourist operations in particular have been hit hard by the strike and its aftermath, he added.

Wright said he and some others were considering moving to get an injunction if the strike hadn't ended when it did.

WATER LOW, FIREMEN FAIL

RICHMOND (CP) — Fire destroyed the 129-room Skyline Hotel near the Vancouver International Airport Friday night after firemen were unable to get at the blaze due to insufficient water pressure from three pumpers.

None of the hotel's guests was injured.

The fire broke out in a third-floor banquet room and it took firemen four hours to bring the flames under control. Firemen were hampered by lack of equipment as well as low water pressure.

'Court' Label Upsetting

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fear of the family court system in Vancouver often prevents people from going there for assistance, two social workers claim.

Katherine Rider and Susan Poulos told the joint city-province committee studying integration of children and family services in Vancouver many people are reluctant "to approach a setting which is associated largely with criminal proceedings."

". . . Parents of delinquents or pre-delinquent youngsters are afraid of divulging information which may be used subsequently should their son or daughter appear before the court."

One means of rectifying this situation, they said, is to separate, either physically or through established and clear procedures, aid and justice departments.

Animal Feed

duction Wednesday if something isn't done.

"If the railroads don't start moving and if the government doesn't release the grain in the elevator, we have no other place to go," said Moody.

Egg producers, chicken and turkey producers and dairymen are all affected by the feed shortage, he said.

Claremont Poultry Ltd., local egg producers, use 30 tons of feed a week, and they don't have storage space to keep a large supply so they rely on delivery two or three times a week.

"We are kind of concerned," said Peter Goddart of Claremont. He was expecting a delivery Friday but the feed company didn't have it, so he may have to wait till Monday.

Another local egg producer said his production has been off five to eight per cent for the past few weeks, because the chicken's regular feedings have been disrupted.

Moody said that in a way he's glad the railroads have finally shut down completely, after weeks of rotating strikes.

"We've been crying in the wilderness because of this emergency," he said. But now the shutdown is total, politicians and the public are beginning to heed their plight.

Rockets Fly

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Guerrilla forces besieging Kompong Cham rocketed the provincial capital Friday and launched heavy rocket and artillery attacks against government defence lines only three miles from the city.

Fourth N-Test

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Prime Minister Gough Whitlam said today Australia "has reason to believe" that France has exploded a fourth nuclear device in its current South Pacific test series.

RAIL STRIKE

Air Canada also announced a total embargo Friday on air express services in an effort to cope with the demand for cargo service caused by the rail shutdown.

An air freight embargo has been placed on livestock, with the exception of chicks, turkey poults, ducklings and goslings, which require advance clearance with a local Air Canada freight office.

Perishable shipments in excess of 200 pounds must also be cleared in advance.

Truck companies, normally handling less than 10 per cent of freight tonnage in Canada were calling the rail strike a "national emergency."

Trucks cannot fill the gap, particularly in moving bulk commodities like coal, steel, grain, newsprint and lumber.

The shortage of newsprint for export already was acute because of strikes in the paper industry.

None of the three million tons of newsprint CN carries every year — two million tons of it destined for the U.S. — has moved since the national rail strike was launched.

The strikes is beginning to affect food supplies in Manitoba and northwestern Ontario, with remote communities being hardest-hit.

The northern Manitoba communities of Lynn Lake and Leaf Rapids have less than five days of food on hand, Peter Cain, vice-president of Sherritt-Gordon Mines, said Friday.

An emergency airlift of meat that started during the rotating strikes can handle the needs of the two towns for only a short period, he said.

Deliveries by chartered aircraft only supplemented existing supplies because an air supply of northern needs is beyond the capacity of available equipment, he said.

In the northwestern Ontario community of Allanwater Bridge, about 220 miles northwest of Thunder Bay, the 150 residents have been out of meat for about three weeks, a local resort owner says.

All provisions are low now, including bread and vegetables, in the community, which is completely dependent on rail and air for its supplies, he added.

A food fly-in has been arranged from Armstrong Monday.

In Winnipeg, a spokesman for Dominion Stores said the flow of products to the stores has slowed because there aren't enough trucks to meet demands.

Canadians Leave Jobs to Others

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Canadian Pacific Hotels may import at least 75 foreign workers this fall to fill hotel jobs Canadians apparently don't want, Ivor Petrak, CP Hotels vice-president, said Friday.

The company is considering bringing Mexican and perhaps Japanese hotel staff to fill vacancies at the Banff Springs Hotel over the winter, he said in an interview.

"The situation with staff is so critical now the only solution is to go outside the country.

"We will need 350-to-400 new staff when the students (who make up the bulk of summer employees) go back to school at the end of August. But we have found only 44 Canadians from Halifax to Vancouver who have replied to our cross-country advertising over the last couple of weeks."

In addition, as many as 50 students of a Japanese hotel school may be hired, he said.

But the manager of the Calgary Manpower office has advised CP the department will not approve the importation of foreign labor until it is satisfied over the next few weeks there are too few Canadians willing to take the jobs.

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

How much is a human life worth? And if a dollar value has to be put on life, who decides how much?

Questions like these are emerging as social issues because medical research has developed increasingly sophisticated and expensive treatments. And millions are being spent to find new ones, some of which are bound to be even more costly.

Some sample costs now:

● Almost $11,000 a year to maintain a patient on an artificial kidney machine at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

● Probably better than $5,000 for each open heart surgery case, with its expensive pre-op testing, special surgical team, intricate equipment and intensive post-op care.

In the U.S., a federal health department report predicts the annual cost of treating terminal kidney disease could reach $1 billion by 1980.

In Canada alone, over $26 million has been spent on heart research since 1955, just a fraction of the international total.

If every Canadian decided a twice-yearly medical check-up was a must, the country's doctors would not have time for anything else. There simply aren't enough medical resources — people, equipment, money — to give everyone everything which is available now.

How then, can the vast sums being devoted to medical research be justified?

Two prominent Victoria doctors say medical research should continue "flat out" and they spell out why.

You have to step back and take the long view, say Dr. Peter Banks, consulting physician and president of the Canadian and British Medical Associations, and Dr. G. Scott Wallace, general practitioner and Oak Bay MLA.

Banks points to treatment of tuberculosis and poliomyelitis as classic examples. Wallace points to development of drugs like chlorpromazine.

Not so many years ago there were tremendously expensive sanitoria all over the world filled with TB patients. Isolation was part of the treatment and it was costly.

When Banks came to Victoria there were about 100 patients in TB wards at the two general hospitals. Keeping them there today would be costing taxpayers $2.5 million a year.

But continuing research produced antibiotics. The TB wards, the sanitoria are all closed. That problem has been solved "with a handful of pills."

Just 20 years ago there was a "colossal" epidemic of polio which had doctors working night and day with expensive iron lungs, "incredible intravenous apparatus, people with tubes down them so they could breath."

Many got better but treatment was very costly, Banks recalls. Research produced the Salk and Sabbine vaccines. Polio all but vanished as people swallowed the vaccine on a lump of sugar. The iron lungs are gone.

Chlorpromazine is one of thousands of drugs research has produced. It acts on the central nervous system.

Wallace says he has no idea how many millions it cost to develop but it has given doctors throughout the world a capacity to treat disabling emotional and mental disease.

The benefits can't be measured but they are two-fold. The numbers of people who have to be hospitalized (at $70 a day) has been cut. But perhaps more important, many people with the help of that drug are not only no burden on the community, they can live productive lives, supporting themselves and others.

There are scores of similar examples, he says. One more is prednisone, a newer form of cortisone, which has proved vital in immediate support of patients suffering extreme stress, for example, shock after a traffic accident.

Banks describes the expensive open heart operations to install vein bypasses around clogged coronary arteries as a tremendous surgical feat.

"But, if by research, we discover how to make this operation and others like it unnecessary, by stopping the arteries from blocking, obviously this is going to be a colossal cost saving."

Wallace points to the evolution of pacemakers, which can control the rhythm of erratically beating hearts, as an advance enabling patients to get on the move "instead of sitting home twiddling their thumbs."

People think they are being taxed out of sight for such services as medical care. Then their father or mother, husband, wife or children become the beneficiaries of research "and their whole philosophy changes," he says.

"But if we can develop, as we have with some cancers, pills which will hold it in check or cure it, obviously the cost-saving is tremendous."

The pressures arising from research costs today bring to light some intriguing aspects of the problem, he says.

One is that successful research is often by "serendipity," meaning discovery by happy accident.

Example: Sir Alexander Flemming, working in the department of bacteriology at St. Mary's Hospital, London 40 years ago.

He was investigating bacteria and onto his experimental plates floated some fungus. He noted the bacteria did not grow around the fungus.

"This was pure and absolute chance but he had the genius to say, 'this is peculiar,' took the fungus and from it isolated penicillen."

Politicians, faced with the problem of funding research, don't want scientists locking themselves in ivory towers to probe abtruse problems with no apparent goal to shoot for, says Banks.

They tend to say to the researchers: "this is the problem; you solve it." But research progress frequently doesn't work this way.

Banks says President Nixon has said, in effect, to the American research establishment: 'Cancer is a problem. To me it would be a great political boon if it were solved. Here is $1 billion.'

Banks calls this approach "highly questionable" because "there probably aren't the researchers in the world at the present time, certainly not in the United States, to utilize that billion dollars productively.

WALLACE

"They can spend a billion dollars in nothing flat but they'll probably be storming up all kinds of blind alleys doing it."

Cancer is a vast, terribly complicated problem, he says, "like looking into a ball of wool a mile across. There's a thousand strands and you don't know which one's going to lead into the middle. And there are probably many middles."

Renal dialysis, purifying a patient's blood by machine when his kidneys have failed, is an expensive procedure now which may someday yield to kidney transplants.

Like many another medical puzzle, transplants lead to another problem — rejection by the body of foreign tissue. Researchers are trying to fathom that one.

Another answer would be to find the causes of diseases which lead kidneys to fail, says Banks. If these could be dealt with, kidney transplants, and their rejection, could be side-stepped.

Canada doesn't have the money, even today, to give to every citizen the products that medical research has delivered.

Because tazpayers are already complaining about costs, Banks says "we are going to be forced in the not very distant future to make choices as to who's going to get what."

That choice, he suggests, should not be made by politicians, nor the medical profession, but by the rest . . . by the people.

THEY WHEELED 'N' DEALED

"I have $20, do I hear $30? $30, do I hear $40? $40, do I hear $50?" yelled the auctioneer as the bids went as high as $80 at today's Victoria City Police annual bicycle auction.

Total return from the auction of unclaimed bicycles that have collected in the police garage on Fisgard Street over the year, have not been officially tallied as yet, but the take is expected to be well over $1,000.

A crowd of more than 200 people crammed into the garage to see the 60 bicycles offered for sale.

Esplanade Apartment Ban Challenged by Brothers

The legality of an Oak Bay council decision to bar apartment buildings from the Willows Beach Esplanade was challenged Friday in the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The zoning bylaw passed recently was "specifically designed to frustrate" three property owners in the area, lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, acting on behalf of Harold, Douglas and Kenneth Bonner, said today.

McKenzie was involved in an all-day hearing before Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins concerning the rezoning of the Esplanade area from multiple to single family dwellings.

The bylaw involved is invalid, McKenzie claimed, because it was passed as a consequence of the Oak Bay council knowing that the Bonners were considering selling their waterfront property to an apartment developer.

"The whole thing is a complicated series of actions and reactions, moves and countermoves on the part of Oak Bay council," McKenzie said.

"We are arguing that because it (the bylaw) was specifically designed to frustrate the Bonner brothers, it is illegal.

"There hasn't been an apartment building built in that area for 11 years, but as soon as it was known the Bonners had an offer on their property, a bylaw passed which now makes the building of an apartment uneconomical."

Mr. Justice Aikins reserved judgement on the question after hearing the arguments of McKenzie and Oak Bay council solicitor Marsh Gordon.

The area had been zoned for apartments for approximately 40 years, but last year, aldermen began a survey of residents to see if they would agree to have their property down-zoned.

A public hearing on the proposed bylaw was held June 25 and more than 200 people crammed the council chambers to express their support of the down-zone move.

At that time, McKenzie said the Bonners had received a $169,500 offer on their property. With the new bylaw, the residential value of their land would be reduced to $100,000, he said.

Seven apartment buildings now exist on the waterfront and are exempted from the single-family zoning.

Historically Booked

A bus tour of historic buildings held today by the Hallmark Society was booked to capacity, and another scheduled for next Saturday is full as well.

The society got 300 requests from people wanting to go on the tour, but could only take about half.

"There's absolutely the most tremendous groundswell growing," said Hallmark Society president Carolyn Smyly.

The young society, formed this spring to work for the preservation of heritage buildings in Greater Victoria from demolotion, already has 70 members, she said.

Housing Shortage Face UVic Students

Consider University of Victoria's Joe Cool.

He has his courses chosen weeks ahead of time in preparation for long lines of registration starting Sept. 4.

He's even managed to scrape up a cheque for tuition fees.

His only problem? Keeping the rain off his head during the school term.

UVic's manager of housing services Shirley Baker expects about 900 out-of-town university students will start pouring over apartment for rent ads this week in hope of finding off-campus accommodation.

And if her list of 200 available suites is any indication, the students are going to have trouble finding it.

UVic residences — equipped to handle about 600 students — have long been booked up.

"It's been a tight situation in former years, but never as tight as this.

"We've faced the problem of apartment building managers being reluctant to take in students before — it's an unfortunate situation, too, when most students are good tenants.

Ms. Baker's office compiles a list of off-campus accommodation.

Householders willing to offer room and board, or a self-contained unit or basement suite to a student in September phone the office, receive a form in the mail and the student checks with the landlord.

"We don't select landlords."

"Although some of the out-of-town students have friends with apartments living in the city, and some will share because it's economically more attractive, there's going to be many who will find it difficult," she said.

Landlords who list with the UVic housing services office are free to set their own rates, she said. Anyone interested is asked to call the office at 477-6911.

2 Dead, 2 Injured

Two people were killed and two others injured in a two-car crash early today on the Trans-Canada Highway one mile south of Duncan.

Names of the dead and injured have not been released, pending notification of next of kin.

Duncan RCMP said the driver of one car was killed instantly. The other driver was taken to a Victoria hospital but died on the operating table.

There was one passenger in each of the two cars and both received minor injuries.

The accident occurred at 12:35 a.m.

If It Isn't a Skidder It's a Backhoe

IT IS MY FATE TO LIVE in basic resource country where men have an affinity for machines of the brawnier sort. The logging truck driver pilots his multi-geared heavyweight with casual authority. The log salvager who works the beaches veers his big yellow skidder this way and that as if it were a polo pony. Little boys correct me if I miscall some grunting earth shifter a bulldozer when everybody knows it's a backhoe.

This is also the home of the chain saw, a fiercely effective snarler that I wouldn't have touched with a 10-foot pole in my city years.

To our dismayingly competent neighbors, the chain saw is merely another tool in the handyman's kit. We may be jolting along some dim trace that is less road than trail when a fallen tree blocks our passage. The driver hops down, reaches into the back of his pickup, and fetches out his saw.

It coughs at the first yank on the starter toggle, takes hold at the next, and bites into the obstacle with a high, sustained yowl. In next to no time the way is clear.

After a couple of demonstrations by chain saw virtuosos, I began to yearn for a snarler of my own. I pointed out to my wife that in the time it took me to hack one of our bush-lot alders into firewood lengths, a fellow with a chain saw would carve up half a dozen trees.

"That's what I'm afraid of," Win said. She added, "Not to hurt your feelings but you aren't too handy with power tools. Rember when you skidded the turkey off the platter with the electric carving knife?"

Still, she agreed, a chain saw would earn its keep, and since Father's Day was coming up, maybe I'd like one for a present. At that point I shelved my conviction that Father's Day is just another of those hokey festivals laid on for the benefit of the merchants, and hurried out to warm the car.

Up at bustling Campbell River, we found a store that specializes in chain saws. They ranged in size from a helfty brute that I could barely lift off its rack to a peewee model not much larger than the carver that skidded the turkey.

As a lefthanded man in a righthanded world, I have learned to rely on expert opinion. The dealer steered me to a saw of comfortable weight and balance that responded with a properly hellish din when he fired it up and touched the throttle trigger.

Along with the saw, we acquired a skinny round file, a tool kit, an owner's manual, a plastic container of blood-colored chain oil, and from a friendly onlooker, some advice.

Start small, he said. Take it easy, and remember that saw teeth whirling at high speed aren't particular about what they cut. There was this faller up in the woods, a pro who should have known better . . .

With that horror tale firm in mind, I started small and easy by attacking some roots that projected from a gale-delivered stump beside our beach approach. The saw made short work of them. With a fine feeling of power and authority, I tackled the lowest and fattest root.

The cut deepened. Coarse sawdust flew. Then the pace slowed.

Naturally, a pebble wedged in a root crevice is going to give off sparks when struck by fast-moving metal. The saw chain had also lost its snug grip on its grooved bar.

"Well," my dear, Win said resignedly, "you'd better get the tool kit and read the instructions."

"For a start," I told her, "I'll just take that chain off and have a good look at it."

An hour later, the chain was back on its bar, the tension was as it should be, and I was wondering why my mechanized aid to firewood production refused absolutely to cut.

Neighbor Nick strolled over. He made a brief inspection, shook his head, and muttered, "Oh, boy!" Then he said, "You've got the chain on backwards, and we've going to have to file the burrs off those cutters."

In the months since, the chain saw and I have achieved a reasonable understanding. I take it easy and look before I cut. The saw does its job, and if other hands could use it more effectively, what matter. In this compartmented world, we aren't all meant to sit tall in the saddle of a DC-75 cat.

At least I think that particular yellow monster is a DC-75. If I'm wrong, some machine-age small boy will set me straight.

Ottawa Hears Air Woes

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air machinist representatives met here Friday with transport department officials and MPs to present their views on problems and issues that have hampered resolution of a four-week-old strike by their union against the company.

The union leaders, representing 1,300 machinists, presented letters to the office of Transport Minister Jean Marchand and met briefly with civil aviation branch officials.

However, Marchand was not in town to meet the union spokesmen.

One of the major complaints of the machinists has been that the airline is having its planes serviced at Oakland, Calif., while the strike has been on.

They also charge that management personnel checking the aircraft are not sufficient in number to be giving proper safety checks to the planes.

Despite recent efforts to get together on some common ground and resume contract talks, there have been no meetings and sources indicate there is little flexibility on either side.

2 Canadian Women Held

ALGECIRAS, Spain (AP) — Customs officers in this Spanish seaport detained two Canadian women after finding 85.9 kilos of hashish hidden in their car on arrival from Ceuta, a Spanish stronghold on Morocco's north coast.

The women, identified as Anne Dranitsaris, 24, of Toronto, and Mario Etna Fiddis, 27, of Vancouver, were taken into custody pending trial on charges of smuggling and violations of public health.

IT TAKES more than talent to make it in the pop music scene, so Ian Anderson, leader of the British rock group taking North America by storm, has to be a clown, wit and zany showman as well as the group's leader and singer-flutist.

Proud Race Turns to Theft

Washington Post

NAIMEY, Niger — The tall, lean Taureg chiftain sat in the midst of his few remaining possessions and half-starved family telling of the long and devastating trek south.

It had taken almost four months to cover the 275 miles down the Niger river from Gao, in Mali, to Niamey, a forced death march in a desperate search for pasture lands to feed his herds — the pride of his life.

One by one he watched his 60 camels, 50 cows and untold number of goats drop dead from starvation until, by the time he reached here, not a single animal was still alive.

Out of the 95 persons he rules as clan chieftain, 15 died along the way, mostly babies and young children.

Cattle Feed

Now Alimou Gamar is squatting in a disease-stricken refugee camp, his life of some 70 years shattered, his only job fighting for a meagre handout of wheat pellets normally fed to cattle.

For the first time he is learning what it means to beg, bargain and perhaps sometimes steal just to keep himself and his family alive another day.

There are 2,000 like him here in this sprawling refugee camp on the edge of Niamey, and several hundred other Tuareg living in similar plight in and around dozens of towns and villages in northern Upper Volta and throughout Mali and Niger.

For the Tuareg, the blue-robed and black-turbaned aristocrats of the Sahara, an ancient way of nomadic life is now imperiled.

Indeed many here wonder whether seven consecutive years of ever-worsening drought in West Africa have not finally put an end to nomadism as the Tuaregs have always known it.

Stamina Famed

For centuries these handsome nomads, famous for their stamina and prwess at war, have moved across the Sahara oblivious to frontiers and nationalities.

They have been a thorn in the side of newly-independent African governments, which have sought to subdue and tax them with only limited success.

Mali fought a brief war against the Tuareg in the mid-1960s, a strugle it finally won with the help of neighboring Algeria and Soviet-supplied arms.

No one knows exactly how many Tuareg there are, but most estimates put their number somewhere around 500,000, spread across southern Algeria and Libya and northern Niger and Mali in vast desert wasteland.

Regarded as thieves and pillagers by the sedentary peasants living along the southern border of the desert, the Taureg are generally unwelcome and distrusted guests.

Most of them no longer have the means to return to their old way of nomadic life, and many are reluctant to go back to Mali because they feel they are persecuted by the government there.

But neither Upper Volta nor Niger wants the Tuareg to stay, for they have placed major additional burdens on their already swollen welfare rolls.

The Taureg hate the cities and yet they must now beg for food from hostile or, at best, indifferent city officials.

They creep up to the hotel doors at dusk and try to peddle their warrior wares of knives, swords and long spears.

Slave Keepers

Like other aristocratic classes of the world, the Tuareg detest manual labor. For centuries they have had a caste of black slaves, variously called Belas and Harratins, doing all their tent chores, arms forging and occasional farming for them.

For the first time in their lives, many have blisters on their hands from doing the work traditionally done by their Bela slaves.

Perhaps the worst agony for Tuareg is the loss of his camels and cattle, the former "his fleet" and the latter his ambulatory bank account.

Thousands have lost their entire herds, some as many as 2,000 head of cattle, sheep and goats.

This is comparable to a western businessman first going bankrupt and then losing his entire personal fortune.

"We sometimes hear them crying out at night after their dead cows," said one local official in Timbuktu, Mali, where nearly 8,000 Tuareg refugees have gathered.

There are even reports of Tuareg who have lost their entire herd committing suicide, an act their moslem faith strictly forbids.

What to do with these fallen aristocrats o fthe desert is a question governments throughout the drought-stricken area are now asking themselves with considerable uncertainty.

Too Costly

For most of these states, it would be far too costly to buy enough camels and cattle to put the Tuareg back into business. But none wants thousands of destitute Tuareg as wards of the state, either.

There is talk in some countries of changing their life style and making at least semi-sedentary peasants out of them, "recycling the nomad," as one western aid expert put it.

Niger's minister of Saharan affairs and nomads, Mouddour Zakara, said in an interview that this government wanted to settle them down for good.

"I think it's the end of grand nomadism, traveling hundreds of miles over enormous distances the way they have been doing it. You can't be a nomad without animals and we can't let them become beggars in the cities," said the minister who wears a long, flowing white robe and white turban.

"The only thing left is to settle them down."

Zahare Zakara, who is himself from a settled Tuareg family near Agadez in northern Niger, said he had been talking to his people for five years about the need for learning to cultivate the land.

New Land

Now Niger has a project under way to settle 30,000 to 40,000 of the country's 300,000 to 350,000 nomads on land that is just being irrigated in a valley just south of Agadez.

Zakara wants to make them at least part-time farmers so that they will not be totally dependent on their herds.

"It won't be difficult," he said. "The nomad is proud of his way of life, but now he no longer has the means to continue it. It's a question of life or death."

But in Alimou Gamar's eyes there is still a defiant sparkle.

"I have no feet so I can't leave right now," he said, referring to the loss of all his camels.

"But if I get my feet back, I will go back to the desert again."

$12 Million Raid

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Police arrested two Mafia suspects Friday and seized $12 million worth of heroin reported being smuggled to the U.S. from France via Italy.

The operation crowned more than two months of investigations by the Italian narcotics squad.

The two under arrest were identified as Sicilians Giuseppe Palmeri, 58, and Pietro Ingoglia, 53.

NOTICE OF INDUSTRIAL ROAD CLOSURE – NITINAT LAKE

The road to the North side of Nitinat Lake will be closed August 27th through to September 7th inclusive to permit repairs of the Little Nitinat Bridge. It is suggested that persons wishing to go into the Nitinat area use the launch at the M & B Campsite or at the North end of Nitinat Lake.

B.C.F.P. regrets this closure during prime recreation time, however these repairs must be carried out during a non-operating period and when streamflow is low in accordance with instructions of local Fisheries and Wildlife Officers.

CITY OF VICTORIA
TAKE NOTICE THAT:

The burning of leaves, foliage or garden refuse in the open air is permitted, except during the months of June, July and August, subject to the following regulations:

(a) Such burning may be carried out by a person only on his own property and at a location at least fifteen (15) feet distant from any property line and at least fifteen (15) feet distant from any building;

(b) Such burning may only be carried out between the hours of sunrise and sunset;

(c) A competent person shall be in charge of such burning and present from the time of lighting until the time of complete extinguishment of such burning. Such person shall be equipped with efficient appliances and other equipment to effectively prevent such burning from getting beyond control or causing damage or becoming dangerous to persons or property.

A written permit from the Fire Department is no longer required but any person contravening the aforementioned regulation is subject to a charge under By-law No. 3434, Fire Prevention By-law, 1949.

CBC Men in News Hassle

TORONTO (CP) — Three CBC personages got into a mild hassle Friday over the quality of TV news at a communications seminar.

Peter Gzowski, a CBC radio host was lined up against Knowlton Nash, the corporation's director of English TV information programs, and Lloyd Robertson, who reads the national news at night.

After Nash had praised TV for "doing a far better job of informing the public than the newspapers except in a few big cities," Gzowski commented:

"If the newspapers are superficial, what's the word for TV? ... glib ... contrived ... How do you describe a medium that puts visual impact ahead o finformation?"

Gzowski, also a writer and magazine editor, said he is "unhappy with TV's total artificiality" and its insistence of putting style ahead of content in news programs.

"How come there is only 19 minutes and 50 seconds worth of news every night — 12 minutes and 50 seconds on Saturday?" he asked.

"What if there's 40 minutes worth of news in the world?"

"Why can't a person just come on and tell me the news?" he added.

A woman in the audience of the conference of the Canadian Speech Association had a different complaint.

Robertson was "a lovely person" but the news he read was "in general as dull as ditchwater."

"I suppose the New York Times is duller than the News of the World the British sex and scandal sheet," Nash replied.

"The priority on the national news is content." It would not be brightened by distorting priorities.

"And my concern," Gzowski retorted, "is that I see many stories that are on only because of their visual interest, though they are of no importance."

Before the disagreement, Nash told the conference that the chief news editor of the CBC is "by far the most important" editor in Canada. The impact of TV news men was enormous.

However, he conceded that this medium "still has a long way to go in informing society."

First Step To Freedom

Age 14 . . .

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Caril Ann Fugate, the companion of mass killer Charles Starkweather on an 11-murder rampage, moved a long step toward freedom Friday. The state parole board recommended commutation of her life sentence to pave the way for parole.

The parole board found that Miss Fugate, 30, who was 14 when she accompanied her boyfriend on the slaying spree in 1958, is "an acceptable risk for parole consideration." It recommended that the state pardon board commute the life sentence to a fixed number of years.

If the pardon board makes an affirmative decision, the parole board will then set the number of years and make a decision as to when parole will be granted.

Jacqueline Crawford, superintendent of the State Reformatory for Women at York where Miss Fugate is imprisoned, said the prisoner was "thrilled and deeply touched."

"She believes it was the hand of God that directed and guided the decision," Mrs. Crawford said.

"She deeply appreciates all of the efforts that have brought this about. She realizes that because of the magnitude of the case that the people closely involved have done much soul-searching before arriving at their decision to recommend commutation."

At Bennet, Neb., the mother of one of the murder victims said, "I don't think they should have done it," when informed of the board's decision.

"I just think she should stay there — it is a lot too early for her to be paroled," Mrs. Mabel King Swale, mother of slain Carol King, said. "When she was convicted they said it should be a life sentence. Now it's all changed."

Miss Fugate turned her efforts toward a parole in recent months when her battle for exoneration in the courts failed. The U.S. Supreme Court last year decided it would not hear her case.

Caril at 14 accompanied Starkweather from the Lincoln area to Douglas, Wyo., leaving Lincoln, a city of 140,000, gripped in terror and 11 victims of all ages dead of gunshot and stab wounds.

She was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in 1959. Starkweather was convicted and executed the same year.

Anik Refuses Medic's Pleas

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY (CP) — A Queen Charlotte Island doctor's plan to use the Anik communications satellite to experiment in delivery of specialized medical care to rural areas has been frustrated by lack of money.

Dr. Hugh McGuire complained Thursday that although there are Anik channels not being used, the government-controlled Telestat Canada Corporation refuses to make channels available without payment.

Dr. McGuire, with the support of provincial and federal officials and medical associations, has applied to the federal communications department to approve his use of a channel on an experimental satellite to be sent into orbit in 1975.

"It's not going to cost anyone anything — the equipment is already up there and three channels are not being used," he said. "And Telestat Canada is in the black, they're making money."

The proposal involves two-way television communication between a rural hospital and an urban centre which would give the rural hospital instant access to specialists and specialized facilities, cutting costly delays.

Gordon MacFarlane, B.C. Telephone Co. vice-president and Telestat director, said Telestat is sympathic but that its policy directs that it cannot give away the use of a channel when other users are paying highly for the service. He confirmed that channels are available.

The full-time use of an Anik channel would cost about $3 million yearly and would require a ground station costing about $500,000, MacFarlane said.

Telestat is a private corporation created by the federal government in 1969 to establish satellite telecommunications in Canada on a commercial basis.

B.C. Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the provincial government is interested in Dr. McGuire's plan, "but there is conflicting opinion on how successful it would be."

"There is an interest in the concept, but I don't have enough positive information," Cocke said. "We'd have to see an indication of very definite results and at the present time we just don't see it.

"We have so many other priorities."

'JUST CALL ME EXCELLENCY'— KISSINGER

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Henry Kissinger, meeting reporters for the first time since his nomination as state secretary, was asked to clear up a minor question.

Should reporters continue calling him Dr. Kissinger or switch to Mr. Secretary:

"I don't stand on protocol," said Kissinger, with a twinkle in his eye. "if you just call me Excellency that will be sufficient."

Weddings

King — Seary

On June 9, 1973, Garden City United Church was the scene of a lovely summer evening wedding at a double-ring ceremony with Reverend G. Smith officiating, when Miss Karen Seary, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Seary, became the bride of Mr. Rick King, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. King, all of Victoria.

The bride, wearing an entrain gown of embroidered Swiss dot, the neckline and cuffs of which were outlined in pleated nylon ruffles, was given in marriage by her father. Her maid of honor was Miss Linda Cockroft and her bridesmaids were Misses Cathy Zelmer, Sharon King and Anne Sheppard. The groom was attended by Mr. Robert Rowan as best man, and ushers were Messrs. Ron King, Laurie Bullivant and Sandy Bell.

The beautiful flower arrangements in the Church and at the reception were by the mother of the groom and Mrs. V. McPhee, and the wedding cake was decorated by the groom's grandmother, Mrs. R. King.

The happy couple travelled to Washington State for their honeymoon and are now residing in Victoria.

Chan — Woo

In a lovely double-ring ceremony on June 23, 1973, in the Chinese Presbyterian Church, Bakke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wai Woo, was united in marriage to Mr. George Chan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wah Chan, by Reverend Ling. Attendants were Lolita Wong, Bernise Kong, Polly Toglas, Marina Morgan, and flower-girl Wendy Lowe. Best man was Mr. Allen Ma, and ushers were Messrs. William Lam, Peter Lam and Clifton Mak.

Terlson — Flint

A colourful double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend Peter Isles on June 30, 1973, at 2 p.m., when Darleen Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Flint, became the bride of Mr. Graham Stewart Terlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Terlson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a traditional full-length white gown of lagoda satin with a Gibson girl neckline and sleeves, and a detachable chapel train. The bodice and hemline were appliqued with Chantilly lace. A headpiece of organza roses "borrowed" from her sister held her full-length three-tiered veil trimmed with matching Chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and white stephanotis with rosebuds trailing from white streamers. The groom wore a matching pink rosebud. Matron of honor, Mrs. Heather Thoresen, sister of the bride, wore a blue floral full-length gown. Bridesmatrons Mrs. Marilyn Payne and Mrs. Janet Lovestone and flower-girl Jennifer Robson wore identical pink floral full-length gowns. The attendants carried colonial bouquets of white daisies with matching daisies in their hair. The groom, best man Mr. Michael Pedneault, and ushers Mr. John Corkill and Mr. Lon Lovestone, wore white dinner jackets with pink carnations and black formal pants. The bride's mother chose a pink full-length gown, while the groom's mother chose a mint green full-length gown. Both mothers wore a double gardenia. Mr. Earnest Collett proposed a toast to the bride at a reception held at the Odd Fellows Hall. Telegrams were read from Amsterdam, Barcelona and Drayton Valley. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered cake flanked by pink rosebuds and white candles.

During the reception, the bride and groom drank a toast to each other from a silver marriage cup given to them by the groom's brother, Donald. Miss Linda Brule attended the bride's Book. For their honeymoon travelling in Western Canada, the bride wore a two-toned turquoise and white fitted dress with matching white hat and accessories complemented by a pink rosebud corsage. The groom was dressed in a contemporary-styled medium blue suit with a maroon and grey overcheck, white shirt and maroon bow tie.

O'Malley — Morrison

A double-ring candlelight ceremony was solemnized on Saturday, August 11, 1973, at 7 p.m., in Metropolitan Church Chapel, when Linda Dianne, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Morrison, Yale Street, exchanged marriage vows with Lawrence John, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert O'Malley, Quadra Street. Reverend Alex Calder officiated and soloist Mrs. Lois Klassen sang Wedding Prayer and Prayer Perfect, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Ursula Thomas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white organza trimmed with velvet lace and buttons. A pearl tiara held her chapel veil and she carried a cascade of pale pink roses and stephanotis. The bride's sister, Mrs. Pat Smith, was matron of honor, Mrs. Judy Tanner, bridesmatron, Miss Barbara Landels and Miss Karen O'Malley, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids and Tammy Smith, niece of the bride, the flower-girl. The attendants wore identical floor-length mauve dresses trimmed with white lace and carried white lace muffs, the flower-girl, a basket of ribbon flowers. Best man, Ken Nott, and the ushers were the groom's brother, Wayne, and his brother-in-law, Gary Smith.

A reception followed at Holyrood House. The bride and groom's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. Pink roses in bud vases and candles completed the table. The bride's uncle, Mr. James Watt, gave the toast. The happy couple left for a trip Up-Island, after which they will live in Victoria.

Out-of-town guests included: Mrs. L. O'Malley (Senior), Mr. and Mrs. K. McConecky, Mr. and Mrs. D. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. F. Booth, Miss Andrea Pettie, Mr. and Mrs. B. Gollob, Mr. and Mrs. James Watt, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watt, Mr. and Mrs. James Watt (Jr.), Mrs. E. Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Morrison, Miss Louise Jones, Miss Barbara Landels, Mr. and Mrs. A. Landels, Mr. Mark Mikulec, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Thomas, Mrs. J. Gibson.

Evans — Browne

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on August 4, at 2 p.m., in the St. George-the-Martyr Anglican Church, Cadboro Bay, when Susan Elizabeth, younger daughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. O. R. Browne of Victoria, exchanged marriage vows with Rodney Ifor Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Evans, also of Victoria. The Reverend Charles Bishop officiated. The groom's father was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length white gown of flocked nylon over satin with full sleeves and a high neckline and bodice trimmed with tiny pearls. Her four-tiered long embroidered veil was caught in the arrangement of white organza flowers which framed her face. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and white stephanotis. The maid of honor, Mrs. Dianne McVean, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Miss Jill Remple, a cousin, wore floor-length gowns similar to the bride's, in cornflower blue and white dotted nylon, with large-brimmed hats trimmed to match. They carried bouquets of yellow daisies and white baby's breath. The little flower-girl, Kirsty Evans, niece of the groom, was sweet in a gown of cornflower blue with tiny flowers in her hair. She carried a basket of yellow daisies. The best man was Mr. Michael Evans, brother of the groom, and Messrs. Brian Alexander and Len Fraser were ushers. The mother of the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk organza in muted shades of blues and greens, with a large-brimmed green hat. The mother of the groom chose a long gown of champagne silk jersey with matching full-brim hat.

Harlan — Hales

A lovely double-ring ceremony took place June 30, 1973, at 5 o'clock, in Metropolitan United Church, when Reverend A. E. King united in marriage Wendy Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Hales, 1720 Ash Road, Victoria, to Robin Douglas Harlan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Harlan.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Reginald Hales. The bride's matron of honor was Mrs. Sandie Hales and the bridesmaids were Miss Wendy Harlan and Mrs. Jean Haug. Mr. Ted Marson attended as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Gary Hales and Jim Boyd.

Meloche — Rimmington

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Rimmington announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Louise, to Mr. Joseph Alexander Meloche, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blaise Meloche, all of Victoria.

The wedding took place on Saturday, August 18, 1973, in St. Patrick's Church, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Henderson Road.

McCubbin — Camozzi

Wedding vows were exchanged August 4, 1973, in the Queenswood House of Studies Chapel, between Sheena Rose Camozzi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Camozzi, Rossland, B.C., and Thomas John McCubbin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCubbin, Victoria. Father J. Jackson officiated. Miss Karen Camozzi, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. Terrance Blagdon, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man.

A reception followed at Craigdarroch Commons, University of Victoria. After a honeymoon at Parksville and Rossland, the happy couple will make their home in Prince George.

Oliver — West

Mrs. W. S. Oliver, 1575 Begbie Street, Victoria, B.C., is pleased to announce the marriage of her only son, William David, to Janet West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. R. West of Eltham Park, London, England, on July 28, 1973, in St. Luke's Church, Eltham Park.

Hewton — Thompson

Mrs. G. Ashman is pleased to announce the marriage of her daughter, Barbara, to Wm. A. Hewton, son of Mrs. H. Hewton of Toronto.

The wedding took place August 20, 1973.

Hodgins — Conyers

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend R. O. Wilkes in St. Michael and All Angels' Church, August 18, 1973, at 2 p.m., when Katheron Ann, oldest daughter of Jim Conyers, became the bride of Wayne Hodgins, elder son of Babe and Bert Hodgins.

Given in marriage by her father, the dark-haired bride chose a white satin peau de soie gown featuring a keyhole organza neckline with Venetian lace. Kathy's long train was trimmed with (her bridesmaids) hot pink, heart-shaped lace. Her chapel-length veil was of silk illusion and she carried white gladiolas surrounded with pink rosebuds. Matron of honor, Mrs. Susan Steenson (bride's twin sister), bridesmaids Barbara Conyers, bride's sister, Wendy Hodgins, groom's sister and Ev. Raine, wore identical pink polyester gowns, and carried crescent-shaped bouquets of white carnations and pink rosebuds. The groom and best man, Chris Kissinger, wore black tuxedos. Murray Steenson, bride's brother-in-law, Bruce Dobinson (cousin), and Pat Shea, ushered. Little Terry Olfrey, ring-bearer, wore a white jacket tuxedo that matched the ushers ensembles. The elegant cake was made and decorated by the bride's aunt, Peggy Dobinson. After a heavenly lawn reception at the groom's parents' home, the newlyweds motored to Disneyland. The bride chose a yellow and white suit with matching orchid corsage for going away.

Out-of-town guests were Roland Hanson's family, Strathmore, Alex Manzies" family, Nanaimo, Pat and Bill Cottingham, Comox, Kingsville, Ontario, relatives phoned best wishes to Wayne and Kathy.

Palmer — Maloney

The marriage is announced of Miss Nancy Eileen Maloney, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Maloney of Falls Church, Virginia, USA, to Mr. Patrick Lang Palmer, only son of Lieutenant-Commander E. Palmer (Ret'd) and Mrs. Palmer, 1280 Pike Street, Victoria. The ceremony took place in St. Joseph's Church, Victoria, in August 12, 1973.

The young couple are residing in Burnaby, where they are both doing post graduate studies at Simon Fraser University.

Rail Ultimatum Given

Snake Dance

BULLETIN

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister John Munro today gave striking railway workers and their employers until Monday to submit "realistic proposals" to end the strike or face the recall of Parliament.

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Pressure built on the federal government today to end a crippling national rail strike by legislation, following collapse of the mediation efforts of Judge Alan Gold of Quebec provincial court.

Unions, management and Judge Gold, who tried since Aug. 8 to bring the two parties to an agreement on a new contract, told reporters after a 75-minute meeting Friday night that further mediation would be useless.

Across the country, there was a growing clamor from governments, business and industry leaders for settlement of the dispute which has produced escalating layoffs, industrial shutdowns and disruption of resident and tourist passenger transportation.

Prime Minister Trudeau meanwhile was reported "treating the strike very seriously" but has not cancelled plans for a private holiday next week in the eastern Arctic.

Within 24 hours of the general strike call, industrial curtailments and closings were reported.

In the East Kootenay, the huge Kaiser Resources Ltd. coal operation was "almost completely shut down," a spokesman said Friday.

Two service stations in Kelowna have been advised that they will receive no more gasoline until the national rail strike ends.

Most gas for the Okanagan valley is shipped via rail to Kamloops from Alberta and then distributed by tanker truck.

A spokesman for Bridge Service Station in Kelowna, a Standard outlet, said his distributor had advised him he would receive no more gas until the strike ends.

In Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., 600 employees of Abitibi Paper will be laid off Sunday when the plant there shutsdown. Abitibi annouonced other plants would close.

General Motors in Oshawa announced a shutdown Monday "until further notice" at Oshawa and Ste. Therese, Que., involving layoffs of 8,000 and 1,500 men and Chrysler, American Motors and Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. all predicted their operations will halt by the end of next week.

With CP Air operations reduced to 45-per-cent capacity by a machinists strike, Air Canada has been left to meet most of the demands of long-distance travellers.

An Air Canada spokesman said "We've added 30 to 40 flights across the system and we're handling 40,000 to 42,000

CIGARETTES HIJACKED

MONTREAL (CP)—Three trailer trucks loaded with $500,000 worth of cigarettes were stolen from a suburban St. Leonard transport company yard Friday night, police said.

The trucks, 1973 Mack models colored blue and white with Rothman's painted on the side, were hijacked from the Imperial Roadways Ltd. lot by at least three armed men.

Police said the incident occurred about 11:25 p.m. but was only discovered an hour later when a company employee arriving on the premises found several workers handcuffed and gagged.

Some of the workers told police they had heard shots fired outside the building.

Police said the bandits, described as dangerous, had Manitoba licence plates on their vans.

IRA Bomb Hits Bank of England

Times News Service

LONDON — Three people were injured today, one seriously, when a bomb exploded at the Bank of England and 30,000 fans evacuated from a test cricket match after a bomb threat was reported at the grounds.

Police and customs officials, meanwhile doubled their guard at British airports and docks to seal the country from bomb shipments.

The 30,000 cricket fans were asked to leave following a warning that a bomb had been planted in the North London grounds.

An announcer asked everyone to "move quietly and slowly out of the ground by the main exits."

The announcer said: "No one — repeat no one — must attempt to take a car out of the ground."

Today's explosion at the Bank of England was the latest in a series of bomb attacks that have swept London during the last week. Police have linked the attacks to splinter groups of the Irish Republican Army.

Friday, a letter bomb injured two people at London's stock exchange, the first injuries in the wave of fire bombs, letter bombs and other explosive devices across this city.

The police spokesman said the incident "occurred simultaneously to other suspicious objects being found all over London."

Today's bomb exploded in the bank's post room as three men were trying to surround it with sand-bags.

The Belfast explosion demolished a garage behind a vacant house in he Cliftonville area, police said. A fierce fire followed.

Police said they found parts of three bodies. They said they suspected the garage had been used as a bomb factory for the making of guerrilla explosive devices.

A detective said police also were convinced the explosives used in the letter bombs were stolen from a government-licensed Northern Ireland factory supposedly run under strict supervision.

Swedes Crack Vault

Times News Services

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Fifty armed police in bullet-proof vests cut through a vault with acetylene torches today and seized a gunman and a convict who had held four persons hostage in a bank in the Swedish capital since Thursday.

Police inched their way into the bank while the two and their hostages, three women and a man, were asleep in the vault.

When he took over the bank Thursday the gunman demanded $650,000 ransom and the release of convicted Swedish criminal Clark Olofsson. Swedish officials complied.

Police first believed the gunman was a confused 21-year-old bank robber, but later speculated he was an escaped convict acting in collusion with Olofsson.

Police had identified the gunman as Kaj Hansson, 21, a Swedish citizen who is married to an American. But Insp. Kark Gunnar Bjoerklund said today that the gunman may not be Hansson but a 32-year-old safecracker who recently escaped from a prison in Kalmar in southeast Sweden.

Both Hansson and the safecracker know Olofsson, police said.

Earlier in the day, a shot was fired into the bank in an effort to keep the gunman awake for negotiations on the fate of the hostages. The gunman, the convict and the hostages went into the vault Friday night.

Police tactics have been to try to wear down the gunman by forcing him to stay awake.

Police stuck to their refusal to let the gunman escape by car with some of the hostages. And Prime Minister Olof Palme went on television Friday night to say the police should not give in.

The authorities had acceded to all the gunman's other requests.

Now Canada Mail Strike Looming

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An official of the Canadian Postmasters' Association said Friday there is a possibility of a national postal strike within a few weeks.

Squire Wallace, president of the association's Ontario council and postmaster at nearby Dorchester, said in an interview that a year of negotiations with the federal treasury board has been frustrating.

Mr. Wallace, a member of a four-man bargaining committee, said the committee rejected a report by conciliation board chairman J. S. Gunn of Winnipeg because wages offered were too low.

The postmasters' bargaining team then drew up its own minority report, rejecting the treasury board offer, and this report is being distributed for approval by 8,000 postmasters across Canada.

The association has been in a legal position to strike since Thursday, Mr. Wallace said.

He added that he expects overwhelming support from members for the minority report rejecting the post office's offer.

If postmasters walk out, the Canadian Union of Postal Employees has agreed to honor picket lines and mail service would be effectively tied up across the country, he said.

William Walsh, another member of the bargaining committee, said in a minority report being mailed to members that the post office is not complying with the federal minimum wage law in its offer.

In the last postmasters' contract which expired in September, 1972, maximum earnings were $9,093, but some postmasters who worked shorter hours in small communities received only $1,000, he said.

HIJACKER LANDS, SURRENDERS

Times News Services

KUWAIT — A North Yemeni wielding a pistol and hand grenades surrendered to Kuwait authorities tonight after hijacking a Yemen Airways DC6 on a flight from Taiz, North Yemen, to Asmara, Ethiopia.

Kuwaiti authorities accepted five demands from the man including guaranteeing his safety in Kuwait before he agreed to turn over his arms and leave the plane which carried 17 persons. Officials had earlier refused him permission to land.

Kuwait authorities permitted the plane to land after Abu Bakr threatened to crash-land it into the desert if refused permission.

Only Week of Feed Left For Island Livestock

There is less than seven days feed left for chickens and cattle on Vancouver Island and the situation is becoming critical as a result of the national rail strike, the president of the Vancouver Island Farmers' Institute said today.

Brian Hoole, an Elk Lake farmer, said the feed supply might last for a week and after that farmers will have to scrounge feed from wherever they can.

"The situation couldn't possibly be worse," Hoole said.

"When our supplies run out, we'll try to get feed from Vancouver by going over there and hauling it back ourselves, but the supplies in Vancouver are slim too."

A farmers' meeting was held in Duncan Friday with provincial agriculture minister Dave Stupich. The more than 35 farmers at the meeting voted to send a telegram to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau demanding something be done to stop the rail strike.

The telegram was sent with Stupich's blessing, who "supports our moves and is on our side all the way," Hoole said.

The situation affects all chicken and cattle farmers on Vancouver Island, Hoole said, and all those who attended Friday's emergency meeting voiced their support for an injunction to stop the strike which is now entering the second day of a 24-hour national walkout.

"So few people realize just what a state the farmers are in," Hoole said.

"We don't really expect to get anything out of the telegram we sent, but we have to do somethingabout it."

At Friday's meeting, representatives of two Vancouver Island feed suppliers, Nanaimo Co-operative and Buckerfield's, told the farmers their supplies were quickly running out.

"They told us exactly what they have in stock and just how long it will last and it's not long," Hoole said.

Phil Moody of Buckerfield's feed manufacturers in Duncan said his company will have to shut down feed pro-

HIGHWAY TOLL usually has little impact as deaths come in ones and twos. But this year, in the Hamilton Spectator's circulation area, 146 men, women and children have died on the roads. To show what this figure really looks like, the paper arranged with police, firemen and the city recreation department to show in one picture what the highway's death toll really looks like.

Bread Probe

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said Friday the Manitoba government will launch a formal investigation of proposed increases in the price of bread if the federal government doesn't undertake a similar study.

Referring to suggestions by industry spokesmen that the loaf price may rise by as much as six cents, Schreyer said "there is no evidence that an increase of that magnitude is warranted."

He told a news conference he believes the provinces have the constitutional authority to regulate the price of foodstuffs, but it likely would require legislative authority before the government could take action.

Navigator Describes Clubbing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nigel Ingram, navigator of the nuclear protest vessel Greenpeace III, said Friday night he was clubbed unconscious last week by armed French sailors who boarded the Greenpeace in international waters.

Ingram, who arrived in Vancouver from Hao Island, about 500 miles southeast of Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific, where France has been conducting atmospheric nuclear tests, said he was below deck when he heard the Greenpeace engine accelerate suddenly.

"I heard a series of thumps on deck, then I heard one of the girls screaming," he said at a news conference.

Aboard the Greenpeace were Ingram, a 26-year-old Briton, New Zealand women Ann-Marie Horn and Mary Lornie and skipper Dave McTaggart of Vancouver.

Skipper McTaggart is in hospital in Papeete, Tahiti, suffering from an eye injury he says was inflicted by French sailors with truncheons who boarded the Greenpeace from a rubber dinghy.

Ingram said he rushed above deck and "as I emerged on deck my hands were held from behind and my head and neck were pushed forward.

"As my head was pushed forward I saw two men who were armed with clubs in their hands and knives which were strapped to their waist or thighs.

"... I saw the rubber dinghy on which was sitting, between two Frenchmen, Dave McTaggart with a rope around his middle.

"He was obviously unconscious and had been thumped but was being held up.

"The righthand side of his face and shirt were obscured by blood.

"Then I felt two, sharp blows on the back of my head and I lost consciousness."

He said when he woke up on the deck of the vessel, men were kicking him about the neck, chest and groin. He then lost consciousness again.

"I can identify by description four men who were carrying clubs," Ingram said. "I can identify by description seven men who took part in the raid and I can identify by description one man with a gun."

Ingram filed a disposition with a Vancouver lawyer about his experience, which is to be forwarded to the external affairs department in Ottawa and to the British Government.

The French have denied that the sailors boarding the vessel were armed, and say the Greenpeace crew resisted the seizure of the vessel.
